THE ILLUSTRATED HORSE DOCTOR;

Being an accurate and detailed account of the various Diseases to which the Equine Race are subjected, together with the latest mode of treatment and the requisite prescriptions, written in plain English.

By EDWARD MAYHEW, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.

"A BOOK WHICH SHOULD BE IN THE POSSESSION OF ALL WHO KEEP HORSES.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"The production of this book has indelibly stamped the name of Edward Mayhew as the greatest benefactor the horse ever had. He and he alone, of the many veterinary writers whose works are before the many veterinary writers whose works are before the public, has hit upon the quality of information, and the form to convey it, which the public have so long desired. We think it a suggestion worth the notice of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals that they should come to some terms with the publishers for a portion of the work to be reproduced, in the form of a pamphlet, to be given away to every groom, coachman, carter, and cabman, in fact all men (who have not means to buy one) whose business is among horses. It would be an act worthy of such a philanthropic body, and quite in keeping with its object—viz., to prevent cruelty. We regret that our limited space will not admit of us quoting the parts to which we allude, but there would be no difficulty in compiling such a pamphlet, for the whole work teems with the most wholesome advice to every class, from the peer to the costermonger. There is no animal in creation more adapted nor more willing to serve man than the horse; but, we regret to say, no animal in creation more adapted nor more willing to serve man than the horse; but, we regret to say, that there is no animal whose natural history, capabilities, and general treatment are so little understood. The poor creature is frequently suffering from chronic disease, or temporary infirmity, while his master continues to whip him to his work, and exact his pound of flesh to the very utmost, for pleasure or for profit. But although there are thousands of bruces in human shape, who wilfully torture horses, yet there are hundreds of thousands who do so through sheer ignorance of his nature, and symptoms of disease or infirmity under which (at the time) he is often suffering. To such men as these the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' would be worth its weight in gold, as its precepts would often save a valuable horse from premature death, and serve the cause of humanity at the same time. Every form of disease and symptom is not only illustrated by a master hand, so that the complete novice may at once see (by comparing the suffering animal to the once see (by comparing the suffering animal to the particular illustration that bears upon its case) with once see (by comparing the suffering animal to the particular illustration that bears upon its case) with what disorder his horse is afflicted, while the causes and treatment are detailed with a clearness and simplicity that is quite refreshing to those who have perused other veterinary books, the contents of which are generally mystified by high-flown language and technical terms, while the prescriptions, being in Latin, are quite unintelligible to the class who have most to do with horses. The test for glanders and spavin, which have been the cause of innumerable disputes between vendor and purchaser, and the cause of some of the most eminent professionals giving their evidence in courts of law in direct contradiction to each other is clearly illustrated and explained, as are also many important disorders which many writers have left unnoticed. The subject of 'breaking down,' upon which thousands of our readers desired information after the misfortune to Dundee, is treated with an excellent illustration representing a horse after its affliction, with the jockey dismounted. There are upwards of four hundred illustrations in the work, each a faithful representation of the whole, or part, of the boyse during the symptom or progression of ful representation of the whole, or part, of the body of the horse during the symptom or progression of the disorder to which it applies; and we need only mention the names of the Messrs. Dalziel as a gnarantee that they are executed in the best possible manner. Indeed, we unhesitatingly pronounce the Illustrated Horse Doctor' the very best and most useful book of its class ever published."—Sporting Life, July 17, 1861.

"One of the most valuable works that we possess upon the subject, all the diseases to which the horse is liable being lucidly described, and the remedies stated very clearly. The wood engravings, which are numerous, well illustrate the text, and serve to complete the character of a work which all who possess a horse must desire to be master of also."—News of the World, June 24, 1860.

"In order to make a good book two things are essential—an author competent to treat the subject he takes in hand, and a publisher spirited enough to give the writer a loose rein in the production of his work—that is, liberality in allowing him all means and appliances for rendering it a master-piece. The publishers of "The Illustrated Horse-Doctor" deserve the highest credit and the greatest success for giving the world this admirable volume in its present costly shape. Its intrinsic merit deserves every penny which has been spent upon it, and, inasmuch as we have never seen a book brought out with better taste or finish, the cost of its production must have been very serious. No one with the least equine knowledge can require to be told that Mr. Mayhew is the man for the task which he has undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished. His high reputation in the veterinary art, and his qualifications as a practised writer on domestic animals, render him the very person for supplying an intelligent and interesting work on the diseases of the horse, which would be devoid of mere professional technicalities, whilst, at the same time, his skill as a draughtsman, and humour as a witty observer of life, enabled him to illustrate with his pencil what he had written with his pen. We advisedly say that "The Illustrated Horse-Doctor" is the very best book of the kind which we know; and what gives it an especial charm is, that the author so thoroughly sympathises with the noble animal which he describes. Without pretending to go into any analysis of this valuable work, we at once pronounce it as scientific; yet intelligible; informing, yet hely amusing; acceptable to the profound horse-doctor, yet the work of all others for the bookshelves in every gentleman's sanctum; admirable in every way as a practical treatise on a very important subject, which it elevates altogether out of the region of quackery; and the tone is so learned, yet easy; so close to business, yet gentleman-like, that the dedication to Sir Benjamin se

"Although the book will be mainly valued as an instructor to those who have to do with sick and suffering horses, all the causes of which are treated in detail of symptoms and treatment, yet it may with great advantage be studied by the owners of horses, who never think of treating them for disease—who, when their studs are ill, always call in the veterinary surgeon, and leave the patients in his hands; for in its pages they will find hints and advice, compliance with which is as much more important than the remedying disease as prevention is better than cure. Take the following as a sample of this:—'Above all, attend to the stabling, and let the box be large and well ventilated. Food is eaten but occasionally during the day; air is as essential as more substantial nutriment of life, and is consumed night and day. Food has to undergo a complicated change, and to travel before it joins the blood. Air is no sooner inhaled than it is immediately absorbed by the blood.' Are not these brief sentences full of importance to the keepers of horses?"— Western Morning News.

"The above is a volume of cyclopædic proportions written by a wise, philanthropic, and scientific man. The numerous illustrations—by the author himself—are simply marvellous for their power of delineation, and more so of expression; and none but a man who knew the structure of the animal, within and without, could have given these transcripts with the diagnosis of disease and illness, together with the (so to speak) physiognomy of pain and suffering, in so wonderful a manner. It is in every sense a perfect book, and calculated to be of essential benefit to 'man and horse.'"—Dispatch, June 24, 1860.

"We have no doubt that this valuable dictionary of the veterinary art will meet with signal success. We have before us a compendious history of all the diseases which horseflesh is heir to, and which man's abuse has bequeathed to it, with directions for treatment, and the necessary remedies, likewise the exposure of popular fallacies. That horses suffer greatly from the ignorance of their riders more than from any intentional cruelty is very certain; but whatever the cause the effect is the same. A horse sinks exhausted in the field, after only a short run, and the rider is thunderstruck. Had he read Mr. Mayhew's book, and taken notice of the warning signal, of which, poor man, he was unaware, and put on the break, the catastrophe would not have been. It is in cases such as these, or where accidents happen in out of the way places, much useful information is to be gained by the general reader. The work concludes with a brief summary, arranged in alphabetical order, of the subjects previously treated on, upon which great care has been bestowed, and the known ability of the author guarantees its worth."—Sun, July 2, 1860.

"Mr. Mayhew is not only master of his subi ject, but knows how to teach others to master also. The volume describes all the diseases to which horses are exposed throughout the infinite variety of circumstances in which they are placed; traces each disease to its cause, as far as it can be ascertained, and points out the course of treatment which should be adopted in every case. In pursuing this clear and thoroughly practical method of inquiry and exposition, Mr. Mayhew draws in all the collateral lights that can be brought to bear upon his topic, and shows to what extent the calamities to which horseflesh is heir may be referred to the ignorance, neglect, and brutality-of owners; making, upon the whole, a large percentage in the bills of mortality. It will be gathered from what we have said, that the scope of this valuable and interesting publication is hardly expressed in the title. It is undoubtedly a Manual for the 'Horse-doctor,' and by far the most exhaustive that has ever appeared; but it is also a great deal more. The moral side of the question is as largely and sympathetically discussed as the medical, and the great mass of the public who know nothing about horses will derive lessons from the perusal of the work which they could not have anticipated."—Home

"We are inclined to think that this is about the very best book respecting the treatment of equine disease that ever has been written or published. The author is evidently well acquainted with the duties of his profession, and willing to give a world-wide extent to his own useful and practical experience, so that those who read may adopt his rules and regimen, and save that noble animal, whose use is one of the greatest blessings mankind enjoys, from much pain and suffering. In country districts, where the horse doctor cannot easily be summoned, this book will be invaluable; whilst, in more frequented localities, its use will always be found to be safe and judicious."—Bell's Messenger, June 23, 1860.

"The great mass of them (the illustrations) are wonderfully faithful, and they are so varied and interesting that we would undertake to get rid of the most confirmed bore that ever pressed heavily on mankind for a good two hours by only handing him the book, and directing his attention to them. It is a well-known fact that grooms only remember the names of four or five diseases, and are sadly indiscriminate in their knowledge of symptoms. This book furnishes at once the bane and the antidote, as the drawings show the horse not only suffering from every kind of disease, but in the different stages of it, while the alphabetical summary at the end gives the cause, symptoms, and treatment of each."—

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening:

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE news received by the Calcutta Mail of the 8th October is "flat, stale, and unprofitable." All business was at a stand-still in consequence of the forthcoming native festival of the Doorga Poojah, the most abominable saturnalia the world has ever known. The commercial community had already dispersed for their great annual holiday to every point of the compass, and even the Lieut.-Governor of rain had been eighty-one inches, or thirtyone more than last year. The plains are described as one vast swamp, the roads broken up and impassable, and very many bridges entirely swept away.

The "Cotton opportunity," as it is called. was still the subject of general conversation, but after all it rests with Manchester whether America's calamity shall really be the turning point in the industrial history of India. It is useless to send deputations to spy out the wealth or the nakedness of the land. The fact may be assumed that any quantity of cotton is procurable from India, if only money be remitted to purchase it. In the ordinary course of business, it is certainly not the province of the manufacturer to send to distant countries for his raw material. By a convenient and profitable division of labour that duty devolves upon merchants and shippers, who deliver the required supplies at the mill-owner's door. But when the times are out of joint and a new trade has to be opened, the latter must condescend to apply his shoulder also to the wheel, if he would not have his mills stopped entirely through his lack of enterprise. Thus far, no substantial encouragement has been offered to the Indian cultivator or merchant: and there is hardly a doubt that, as soon as cotton is again obtainable from America, the former country will pass away from the minds of the Lancashire capitalists.

" Coming events cast their shadows before." It has been officially notified that no claims for Delhi, Lucknow, or Pegu prize-money will be received after the 1st of December. This looks like a forward movement; and even a snail, if it keep moving, will at length reach its destination-barring accidents by flood and field.

In our next number we hope to give full details of the new artillery organisation. It is now certain that there will be seven brigades, but with only six batteries to each.

Owing to an accident that recently befell one of the P. and O. Company's China steamers, no mail has been forwarded from Hong Kong, and, consequently, we have no news from the Celestial Empire.

The failure of Captain Blakiston's expedition appears to have disheartened the Indian Government, and it is now reported that Captain was off to Darjeeling. Lord Canning was to start on the 25th for Allahabad, and the Commander-in-Chief was also preparing to make his tour of inspection.

Disastrous accounts of wide-spread inundations were still coming in from all parts of the country, and in Calcutta itself the fall

Lord William Hay, we are happy to state, has recovered the private journal of the late M. Ad olphe Schlagentweit, which in due time will be presented to a public that has already forgotten the name of that adventurous traveller.

We reg ret to learn from a Scottish newspaper that Mr. Charles Moffatt Mills, a nephew of Mr. A. J. Moffatt Mills, of Tortingtonhouse, has been accidentally shot by a friend, while searching for a wounded partridge in a field of rape. The gun went off unexpectedly, the charge lodging in the right knee of the unfortunate youth. The limb was amputated the same day, but the shock to his nervous system had been so great that he had no strength to rally. He quietly sank to rest a few hours afterwards.

In our advertisement columns will be seen the announcement of an Oriental Inland Steam Company (Limited), under subsidy from the Indian Government, the professed object of which is to transmit parcels and goods from the coast to the interior of India, at moderate charges. While wishing every success to this new company, we trust that the competition will not prove injurious to Messrs. Wheatley and Co., who have so long carried on a similar business, to the perfect satisfaction of their constituents.

GEOLOGICAL RESEARCH IN INDIA.

To the two great Surveys of India, the Trigonometrical and the Revenue, are attached a large and well-paid staff, who for many years past have been at work, and who have produced results, the former in the shape of maps, the latter in the form of facts and statistics, which are not surpassed by those of any other country. While in itself purely scientific, the Trigonometrical Survey is a necessary preliminary to that for revenue purposes, which again ought to give security of title to the State and the zemindar as landlords, and increase of land-tax to Government. But for the important object of creating revenue, a Geological Survey is more important than either. The trigonometrical staff have been of immense assistance in providing scientific maps, but the geological surveyor makes it his object to colour these maps when extended to a larger scale, so as to represent every variety of surface, soil, mineralogical character, and metallic wealth. The three surveys are all complements of each other, and if we would assign them their respective places, we should say, the trigonometrical is the most scientific, the revenue for taxation purposes the most useful, and the geological by far the most permanently important as combining the benefits of both, as contributing to science more information than the former, and to material interests far more wealth than the latter. Yet India had not an organised geological survey till 1856, and its staff is miserably inadequate to the work to be done and the pecuniary results to be obtained. Each presidency should have its own survey for geology as well as for revenue, all subject, so as to secure uniformity and economy, to the director in Calcutta. Next to roads and irrigation, this is the most important step for "developing the resources" of India. It is with this conviction that we have kept our readers au courant with the progress of the geological survey. Mr. W. T. Blandford's detailed Report on the Geological Structure and Relations of the Raneegunge Coalfield, just published, is by far the most important contribution of the survey to the cause of commerce and of science. We shall direct attention to a few of its facts, premising that of the total out-turn of coal in India, which amounted last year to 370,206 tons, nearly the whole was

The Raneegunge coalfield, formerly known as the Burdwan, is traversed by the Damooda river, which falls into the Hooghly below Howrah. It is a belt of coal-bearing rocks, extending so far as the overlying laterite and alluvium will allow us to speak with certainty, a length of thirty-nine miles, and a breadth of eighteen miles, containing an area of 500 square miles. Its distance is from 120 miles to 160 miles north-west of Calcutta. A series of between 11,000 feet and 12,000 feet of rocks dip in succession from the northern boundary towards the south, and are cut off by one of the largest "faults" that has ever been recorded. The whole lies between the Damooda and Adjai rivers. The existence of coal in this district was known so long ago as 1774, and the strata were worked a few years after, but up to 1845, though several flourishing collieries had been established, there was no survey of the dis-So ignorant were the authorities of its capabilities and of the teaching of science on the subject, that in 1838 the "Committee for Investigating the Coal and Mineral Resources of India" declared that the superior quality of coal depended on its altitude above the level of the sea. In 1850, the Report of Mr. Williams, who had been attached to the Survey of Great Britain, first gave an accurate and scientific description of the field. But he left several important facts undetermined, his maps were necessarily inexact, and he took it for granted that all the coal-bearing strata of India belonged to the carboniferous formation of English geologists. Mr. Blandford's report, and the exquisite map which he has labo.

scientific description or in knowledge of the economic wealth of the district. The whole of the coal-bearing strata are deposited in a basin of metamorphic rocks, consisting of different kinds of gneiss, hornblende, and quartzite, which also form its boundary. Beginning at the surface which is undulating, and has now been cleared of all jungle, we have the following:

Name.	Description of Beds.	Fossils.	Thickness in Feet.
I, UPPBR PANCHET († Rájma- hál group).	Coarse sand- stones and con- glomerates.	Unfossilife- rous.	} 500
II. PAN- CHET GROUP.	stones, very	Ferns distinct from Damúda forms, Tæni- opteris, Sphe- nopteris. Schizoneura— Reptilian and fish remains.	1,500
III.DAMU- DAGROUP.
a. Rániganj series.	Coarse and fine sandstones, mostly false-bedded and felspathio—shales—coal seams. The latter continuous over considerable areas.	Vertebraria, Trizygia, Glossopteris, Pecopteris, Schizoneura, Phyllothteca, &c. all plants.	5,000
a.* Iron- stone - shales.	Black carbana- ceous shales, with numerous bands of clay ironstone.	Fossils abundant, though not well preserved. Glossopteris, &c.

IV. TAL- CHIR GROUP.	Coarse sand- stone, finegreen- ish-grey mud, sandy shales, and fine sand- stone, contain- ing undecom- posed felspar; at base rolled masses, 15 feet in diameter, oc- cur in fine silty beds.	Very rare, a }few stems, seeds? &c.	800
	Total		11,200

All these strata are described in detail. The Damuda group is that which is most interesting to the mineralogist, abounding as it does in coal and iron, and containing in many places "kunkur" deposit, which may be used as limestone for flux in large iron-works, and hard sandstones, which are available for building purposes. As soon as the railway has been opened to the Soane river, flux may be brought at a comparatively low rate from the Rhotas-hills. A rich "black band" and magnetic ironstone await only the application of capital to supply all India with iron. The former yielded an average amount of 39 per cent. in the case of twenty-nine specimens obtained from near the surface, the latter from 60 to 70 per cent.

The scientific problem which the geological survey is striving to work out, is to identify the Indian rocks with the well-established members of the groups in Europe. To effect this, it is necessary to apply to rocks as discovered local names, until greater progress in observation has been made. It is most probable that, as the work of the survey advances, India will be able to supply many of those links which are wanting in the geologic chain-many of those gaps which are so marked in the succession of organic existences in Europe. Mr. Oldham has been able to establish the identity of our Indian coal-bods with those of places so far apart as Australia and South Africa. Indian geologists are compelled to use Indian names, moreover, by the fact that, by economical and commercial considerations, the report, and the exquisite map which he has labo beat of the survey is to a great extent determined. dogmatise on the first chapter of Genesis. riously compiled on the scale of one mile to an They cannot, therefore, pick out the most pro-inch, have left little to future surveyors, either in | mising localities and leave the others. They must work on systematically, and let the truth evolve itself. No doubt this is the best way finally, and they are only sacrificing a little time for the valuable end of a more thorough unravelling of the structure of India. In parts of the country there are well-defined horizons. Thus, we have rocks undoubtedly in the general parallel of the cretaceous system of Europe, at Trichinopoly and Pondicherry, but then they are isolated, and we meet, so far as known, with no other marks of the same till we reach the western part of the Nerbudda. Again, we have, unquestionably, representatives of the older tertiary rocks, such as the Eccene of Europe, in the sub-Himalaya and along to the Khasia-hills in the east, and into Burmah and Pegu. But there is no physical connection between either of these groups and the rocks of Bengal, Behar, and Nagpore; and the relations are only to be made out by a strict and careful investigation of the fossils. The moment the survey can in any place in India fix definitely that the rocks belong to any of the great systems acknowledged in Europe, they speak and write of them under that name. Thus, the cretaceous rocks of South India are always spoken of when alluded to as a whole. But in every country there are local peculiarities in the arrangement of the rocks, in their mineralogical characters, and in their contained organic remains, which render local subdivisions of a minor nature needful, and for these local names are necessary, and must be retained. In the cases, too, in which there are discovered in India beds and rocks which represent some of the great gaps in time between the great subdivisions of the rocks acknowledged in Europe, local names will be retained. For instance, the survey has adopted on physical, mineralogical, and fossil evidence, a threefold subdivision of the rocks of Trichinopoly, while, taken as a whole, the two upper divisions together, in all probability, represent only the upper cretaceous rocks of Europe. Taken as a whole, these two are described as upper cretaceous; singly, as the Arrialoor and Trichinopoly groups, from the localities in which they are best seen.

The age of the "Damuda" rocks is much disputed, and has engaged the attention of many of the first geologists of the day. Mr. Oldham believes that he has gone far to fix their age with tolerable certainty. This once established, the whole series will fall naturally into its place in the general system of stratified rocks, while the local names will remain, but degraded to the distinction of local sub-divisions. Suppose it be proved that the "Damuda" rocks are "Upper Carboniferous," or "Newer Coal Measures," we shall at once speak of what is now called the Damuda system as Upper Carboniferous, while the local names of Raneegunge and Barakar will only remain as indicative of local sub-divisions. Meanwhile, the different groups as yet known, associated with the coal bearing beds of Bengal and Central India, are the following, in descending order:

1. Mahadevas, with sub-group of Lameta beds. 2. Rajmahals.

Anjmanais.
 Upper Damudas of Jubbulpore and Central India.
 Lower Damudas.
 Talchirs.

It is only when placed on such an eminence as India affords, that we become aware how little we know of the geology of the earth. More than any other science the laws of geology should be held in suspense. When the structure of every country has been examined, say a century hence, how different the science will be-how theories will change and facts admit of simpler explanations! We shall then be able to form a universal scientific nomenclature, not drawn, as now, from such little spots as the British Isles and a district or two of Germany, but from the whole earth. For this end all geologists should labour. To accomplish this no English engineer or artillery officer should be allowed to be ignorant of the science. Till this is done, we may ask orthodox Christians on the one hand, and sceptical essayists and reviewers as well as supporters of theories of development and natural selection on the other, to show a little more humility in their attempts to

HILL SANITARIA AND OUR RAILWAY SYSTEM.

Seventy thousand English soldiers, half-educated, with strong passions, unmarried and kept in enforced idleness, are to be permanently located on the hot plains of India, massed together in large barracks round and within which filth must necessarily accumulate and disease has a tendency to lurk. That is a fact which we cannot weary of reiterating, which we cannot cease to impress on the civil, military, and ecclesiastical authorities, who are responsible for the consequences. Till 1857 we never had half that number in India. Since 1857 the men have lived in one round of excitement, have passed through a series of campaigns, and only last year may be said to have settled down into that quiet, which, with the soldier, too often means disease and a mortality as terrible as that of the battle-field. It is difficult to rouse the imagination to grasp the life likely to be led by such a force if kept in their present condition for five years of peace. We have pleaded for an extension of the rule which limits the proportion of married men to twelve per cent., but of this there is little hope. Within the last twelve months the authorities have shown a disposition to patronise amateur efforts, of an isolated and temporary character, for establishing soldiers institutes, and barrack workshops. But there has been no sign that Government has adopted any broad policy for the preservation of lives and the increase of the comfort of the English army. Occasionally a general order appears, or a notification in the Gazette, sanctioning an experiment here and a trifling effort there. But neither the Commander-in Chief nor any military authority, since Sir James Outram's departure, has shown the ability to sketch, or the will to carry out, a scheme which will produce the greatest possible amount of moral and physical health, as well as strict discipline and fighting efficiency in the European And as if to reproach those who are responsible, cholera breaks out in two or three cantonments, and in the course of a few weeks nearly a whole regiment is carried off. A commission of inquiry is, of course, appointed, a report will be made, and the same disasters will probably recur a few years hence, because it is supposed to be cheaper to pay for such losses than to prevent their occurrence.

To our advocacy of instruction, recreation, work and wives for our English soldiers, and of military colonies for veterans and pensioners, we can now with safety add that of sanitaria in the Hills. To the security of our power all things must be sacrificed, and if we cannot hold India unless by keeping 70,000 men in the plains, then we must submit to the consequent exhaustion and mortality. But the rapidly approaching completion of the trunk system of railways, makes it possible, with perfect safety, to station at least one-half of the whole army each hot season in the Hills, bringing them down to the plains in the cold weather that there they may form camps of exercise. Thus every man would spend one hot season out of two in a cold climate, and were half of the men married, their families, or at least their children, could be permanently located there, the girls growing up to form wives for future soldiers, the boys trained for subordinate appointments under Government. By next hot season this could be accomplished on a comparatively large scale. Beginning at Calcutta, as convalescent depots we have Parisnath, Hazareebaugh, and the Bhagulpore Hills, the railway running near the first and through the last. Darjeeling is even now within three days of Calcutta, and a tramway on the north side of the Ganges would bring it closer still at a trifling expense. Going north west, the completion of the railway, already finished from Allahabad to Agra, so as to connect Benares with Delhi and Meerut, will in a few hours place one-half of the large garrisons at these places within eighty miles of Landour, a distance along which a cheap railway could be easily laid.

suffered from epidemics most severely. The two cities will be united by an open railway in a few months. From Urmritsur, due north, along a level country with but one stream, for a distance of sixty miles, a railway could be laid for a less sum than the value of the 600 lives sacrificed to cholera. From its terminus at Puthankot at the foot of the Himalayas, a road ascends to Dalhousie by an easy gradient. One-half the present strength of troops could hold the Manjah for six months in the year, especially if the moveable columns be organised which have been already ordered. There are the same facilities in the other Presidencies. The railway from Madras to Beypore will be open throughout in February, and it passes close to the Neilgherries. The Bombay railways both ascend the Ghauts into the very heart of the hills. And what is true of the army is equally so of all classes of the community The completion of the railway system will probably revolutionise the social life of the English in India as much as it had done in England. People will travel as they have never done before. A visit to the Hills will often take the place of a trip to England, the blanched residents of the Presidency towns will as often send their families to the Hills as those of the Upper Provinces now do. Branch banks will everywhere spring up, and there will be an interchange of society, ideas, and commodities such as is now unknown.

With half our European army in the plains. and the other half within a few hours' distance by railway from the chief military centres, we have no fear of insecurity. The first-class railway sta tions must everywhere be fortified, as it is proposed to do in the Punjab, and the protection of both railway and telegraph, in the case of an outbreak will then be easy. It is not the presence of our soldiers, but of our Governors and Commanders. in-Chief, in the Hills, that will cause us to lose India. With the Hills thus linked into the railway system, the tea and wood and wool grown by English settlers, and the articles purchased from Central Asian traders, will find an easy road to the seaboard, while the cloths and hardware of England flow back to the markets of the interior. -Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Shortsighted Astrologer.—The Hills has a translation of an article in the Rohilkhand Akbar, a vernacular journal published at Bareilly, describing a case in which an astrologer called Vizir Khan was made to pay a severe penalty for his prophecies. He said to some Sowars who consulted him with reference to their discharge:

—"what is the good of taking service now-adays? An outbreak is coming and the Government will not last. The comet proves it." This amounts to sedition. He was sentenced to seven years' imprisonment with hard labour in irons. The Akbar says:—"It is to be regretted that there is no law by which the rogue can be flogged."

TIPPERAH .- The leaders of the late Kokee inasion, Paraket Sanapotee and others, have again assembled some Kookees to invade the Rajah's territory, and have already plundered two small villages on the hills. In the late Kookee invasion about twenty villages were plundered and burnt, and about two hundred men killed, and one hundred taken prisoners, and numbers of cattle were wantonly slain. The cause of all this it is said is, that the leaders are of the Tipperah Rajah's family, and there has existed for a long time an enmity between them and the Rajah; these have formed an alliance with the Kookee tribes, and are continually making inroads into the Rajah's territory. There is no chance of any settled peace until some arrangement is come to with the Rajah for the support of the needy outlaws.

few hours place one-half of the large garrisons at these places within eighty miles of Landour, a distance along which a cheap railway could be easily laid. The most favourable instance of this will be found in the Punjab. There, in Lahore and Umritsur, our troops have always in for the appointment.

DUTY ON PRESENTATION ARTICLES .-- A reference was lately made to Government as to whether import customs duty might be remitted on presentation articles brought out to this country. The rule observed in England is that articles for ornament or show, such as cups, vases, &c., not for common use, on which definition a liberal construction is always put, are admitted free; but private gifts or presentations to private persons, merely out of private respect, and without any reference to public service, as well as such articles as racing-oups, &c., are not so admitted. The Governor-general has decided that this rule is clear, and may be followed in India. His Excellency has directed that articles of ornament and show, and not being for purposes of ordinary use, which have been presented by public bodies in recognition of public services may be admitted free of import customs duty. on special reference to Government.

NEPAUL, Sept. 20 .- Maharajah Sir Jung Bahadoor has asked the assistance of the British Government in obtaining a number of small iron suspension bridges for the river Raptee, as he wishes to improve the means of communication between the two countries. The central committee for the Great Exhibition have accepted the Nepaulese made arms offered by Jung Bahadoor, and have made some inquiries respecting the dyes of Nepaul. The Prince Beerendera Vikrum Shah. now at Benares, has written to the Viceroy, soliciting that he be allowed to proceed to Odeypore to take up his abode there with his relative, the Maharanee of Odeypore, as the Nepaul Durbar have discontinued the payment of his maintenance allowance. The Governor general upon this asked of the Durbar whether the Maharajah Dhiroje had any objection to the Prince Beerendera Vikrum Shah's proceeding to the Odeypore territory. The Dhiroje in reply informed his Excellency that the Prince will be invited to return to Nepal on a suitable maintenance; if he declines it, he is at liberty to go wherever he pleases. The man sent by the durbar to the Civil Governor of Lassa has been stopped at the frontier until the permission of the Umbah can be obtained to his proceeding there. The cholera has broken out in the interior; deaths very few. The rivers have again risen high in consequence of the incessant rains in the valley .- Englishman.

MURREE, Sept. 25.—Sir R. Montgomery has thanked the Commissioner of Hissar, and the other officers, in the name of the Government, for their recent exertions to relieve the suffering poor. His Excellency the Commander in Chief has approved of Sir Sydney Cotton's proposal, namely, the transfer of the lands of the military cantonment of Shamshabad to the civil authorities. The Delhi Bank have expressed an opinion regarding the paper currency, that the district notes would be preferable to Calcutta notes for the Punjab.

-An action for crim. con. is rare in CRIM. CON.our Indian Courts. In the Calcutta Supreme Court, on the 26th September, Mr. Justice Jackson gave Rs. 5,000 damages to Mr. Spankie, Judge of Futtyghur, for adultery between Colonel Rich and the plaintiff's wife. Mr. and Mrs. Spankie were married in Scotland in 1847. In 1860, when her husband was Judge of Saharunpore, she was with her children residing at Mussoorie for her health, and was weekly visited by her husband. After a three weeks' acquaintance with Mrs. Spankie, Colonel Rich was discovered by the bearer leaving her bed-room at four in the morning. A scuffle ensued, and the colonel, after beating off the bearer, left behind him his watch, chain, and part of his clothes. Meanwhile, Mr. Spankie arrived at Mussoorie to spend some holidays there, when he was informed of the occurrence. He declined to visit his house, and his wife went off with Colonel Rich, with whom she has since been living. Rich is lieutenant-colonel in H.M.'s 71st. Mr. Spankie will now apply for a divorce.

SIMLA BANK.—The profits of the Simla Bank for the half-year ending 30th June last amount to 10 per cent. on the paid up capital. A dividend was declared at eight per cent. clear of income tax.

CACHAR.—Maipack Singh has fled to Ahoorhai The captured fugitives of his party are still in close confinement pending trial. The duties of the Munipoor Agency are to be transferred to the Superintendent of Cachar. The capital of Munipoor is situated at a distance of one hundred and thirty-two miles from this place. Proceeding from Silchar, the first twelve miles lie along the plains of this district, after which the hills are entered, and a small range being crossed at the distance of eighteen miles from the station lies the eastern frontier of Cachar, the river Jheerie. From this for a distance of ninety-six miles the roads passed through dense jungles of timber and bamboos, over seven ranges of hills, each from two thousand to seven thousand feet in height and across four large rivers, unbridged, and for the greatest part of the year unfordable, and not admitting of boats. This tract is almost entirely uninhaa few villages of Nagas are scattered over it, but not more than one or two villages occur on the whole line of the road. After crossing this ninety-six miles of jungle the plains of Munipoor are reached, and eighteen miles along them brings the travellers to the capital. The average speed of the post between Cachar and Munipoor is seven days in the dry season and ten days in the rains; although in the latter season the mails are sometimes a whole month on the way, being delayed at the rivers. The valley of Munipoor itself is a flat basin lying from north to south, and about thirty miles broad. To the east of it, after a similar journey to that from Cachar, and one of about the same length, lies Kubboo, the first Government of Burmah in this direction; and all round the basin are wild and savage tribes of Nagas and Kookies, living among impenetrable hills and jungles, each with their own private feuds as well as a general standing one against all authority. The Munipoories, the people in the plains, although the dominant people, are but few in number and not strong, though very oppressive in their policy to those subject to them, and the duties of the political agent are to prevent border feuds, to put down the oppressive means of Government, and to keep a check over the general conduct of the administration. That these duties may properly be performed under such circumstances at such a distance from the Central Government necessitates a resident agent. The effect of the proposed withdrawal of the resident would be almost immediate anarchy in Munipoor. Not only would the border tribes, seeing this apparent withdrawal of British protection and notice towards the Government of Munipoor, be up in arms, but the Munipoories themselves, among whom there are a dozen factions, would be up against the present Rajah, and each endeavour to place his own men on the throne. Even under the circumstances of our present protection such endeavours are not unfrequent, and there must be at least twenty princes in exile in Burmah and in our territories who lay claim to the guddee. Separated as we are from Munipoor it seems to me desirable that the officer resident there should be authorised to act independently, being responsible only to Government. But, if it is resolved by Government that the political agency should not be kept upon its present footing, the appointment of a young military officer as an extra assistant under the Superintendent of Cachar should be made, who should be resident in Munipoor and act generally under his directions in his relations with the Rajah and the people. Were no European officer resident in Muni poor it would be necessary, if our present re-lations are attempted to be kept up, to have some sort of a correspondent there as a vakeel, and a native in that position would serve more to embroil matters than mend them. He would be open to solicitations and bribes and threats which few in his position and standing could resist, while the European officer is proof against all these. In default, therefore, of the residence of a European in the valley it would be better, if it can be done, to forego all future interest in Munipoor, and simply koor of that place.

maintain the integrity of our frontier at the Jhurie, leaving the people beyond to settle their disputes as they best may. In fact, any other measures but the maintenance of a European officer there would become almost tantamount to this, and would still be an expense to our Government in the keeping up of a dakh to correspond with the native agent and in paying him and his establishment. But it must not be lost sight of that the supporting of the integrity of a settled Government in Munipoor is one of great importance to the British rule. The Munipoories themselves say, alluding to the paucity of Regular troops throughout the Eastern Frontier, that the state of Munipoor is ek Birgut ke mafic (equal to a Brigade) to the Sircar and overvalue its import-The interposition of this State in indepenance. dence between us and the Burman will ever have a good effect; and in the case of war occurring between Ava and ourselves, in which the former choose, as they did in 1824 25, this frontier as their battle field, that valley, with a population fighting for their freedom, will prove a strong outwork to Bengal.—Englishman.
FUTTYGHUR, Sept. 24.—We suffered last night and this morning from a violent storm of thunder, lightning, and rain, such as is rarely seen or met with even in India, doing great damage to the station, bazaar, and city. The rain commenced last night about 8 P.M., with the wind from the eastward; the fall was excessively heavy during the night, and continued without intermission, and grew worse towards morning, when it poured in absolute torrents. First our cook-house fell, burying all our cooking utensils, plates, dishes, &c.; luckily it gave a little notice, and the servants escaped without injury. horses and conveyances had a narrow escape, but we got them out under a tree safely. The servants' houses are mostly gone, and none habitable. The entrance to our house has sunk; the south wall, I think, will go first. I am getting out with everything as fast as I can. I don't know how my neighbours have fared yet. have been too busy to go and see. Few I expect have escaped scathless. The indigo plant must have escaped scathless. The indigo plant must have suffered severely. There will be few puckah leaves, and little colouring matter left for the manufacturer, and I rather think this tremendous storm will bring down the expectations of this part of the Doab.

KICKING AGAINST THE PRICKS .- The Bengali Paridarshak exposes the moral cowardice of Young Bengal in stronger terms than we ever used. We meet now with some Brahmos, who, in the temple of the Samaj, earnestly exhort their countrymen to repudiate idolatry. On such occasions they seem, in our estimation, to be destined to abolish the evil customs of India,-they look as if they were born in the world for the purification of the Hindu religion. But the misery is, that we cannot recognise them when these same gentlemen come to their homes and ioin with their old Hindu relatives. Then this He' does not look like that 'He.' How strange! He is one thing in his mouth; another thing in his heart; and another still in his conduct. Does this become a follower of pure Brahmism? Brahmism is discredited on account of these hypocritically religious Brahmos; and we declare without hesitation, that those men are as thorns in the path of religion."

CALCUTTA UNIVERSITY.—The cost to the State of the University of Calcutta in the current year is estimated in the Budget at only Rs. 45,528, of which sum Rs. 14,400 are for examiners. The income from fees and the sale of publications is estimated at Rs. 18,180, so that the whole cost of an Institution which is exerting a marvellously healthy influence on education from Peshawur to Cuttack is only Rs. 27,348.

Grant of Land.—We hear from Umritsur that the Government have granted one hundred acres of land to Mr. H. Cope, for purposes of experiments on the cultivation of flax and rearing of silk worms there.

A SUTTEE occurred at the village of Junwar, in Mayar, on the occasion of the death of the Thakoor of that place.

Bundelcund .-- A person named Bejoyroy Prohit, an impostor, is now under surveillance at Charkaree, who professed to be authorised to arrange a marriage between the young Rajah and a daughter of the Maharajah Dhiroje, of Nepaul. The political assistant here brought this to the notice of the durbar, and the Maharajah denies that any emissary from Nepaul has been authorised to arrange alliances between any of the King's or ministers' daughter and the young Rajah of Charkaree. The Ranee of Charkaree has deputed an agent to the Presidency with a khoreta to the address of Viceroy, complaining against the proceedings of the agent in her case. cold weather has made its appearance, and blankets are now of use in the mornings.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT.— Colonel W. Mayhew, now Adjutant-General of the Army, is about to retire from the service on his pension, and Colonel Haythorne, now Adjutant-General Queen's Troops, takes over the office and the title, and becomes Adjutant-General of the entire Bengal Army, and of the Royal forces serving throughout this Presidency. Lieutenant-Colonel Norman retains his office of Deputy Adjutant-General of the Army, under the new system, and will preside more especially over that part of the official work which relates to the Native troops. Similar arrangements will simultaneously take place in the other Presidencies, where the double administration of the Adjutant-General's Department will be abolished.

BENGAL ARTILLERY. - The new formation and posting of the Artillery will appear in General Orders immediately. There will be General Orders immediately. seven brigades; but with only six batteries to each brigade, instead of eight, as expected or wished. This arrangement, by diminishing the numerical strength of the Bengal Artillery, if we may still so call it, leaves room and reason for the employment of the Royal Artillery in Bengal, to a greater extent than if each brigade had eight batteries. And to accomplish this arrangement for the Royals, and so partially loosen India from the grasp of the fine old Company's Artillery, which has gained and held the country for a hundred years, has all the delay in the formation of the Bengal Artillery been attributable.

RANEEGUNGE .- The horses of the 5th Battery of the 14th Brigade continue to improve. There have been a few casualties amongst them, but not from glanders. The general health of the men is satisfactory, and we may fairly set down their move as a move in the right direction. The 16th N. I. has received orders to proceed by bullock train to Lucknow, the first division to leave on the 4th; but this must be a mistake, as about that date the bullock trains will be fully occupied with the transport of his Excellency the Governor General's baggage. A campaign on a small scale has been initiated, under the auspices of his Honour the Lieut.-Governor of Bengal, in the Sumbhulpoor direction, three police battalions and one hundred horse having received orders to take the field under Major Rattray, the Inspector General of Police, with Major Dalton, the Commissioner of the S. W. Agency, as the Political Chief.

GWALIOR .- We hear from Gwalior that the cholera has in some degree abated. The rains had been very heavy, but not to be compared with those of 1857. At a grand durbar held in the palace, the resident, accompanied by about thirty European gentlemen, waited upon the Maharajah, and presented the Governor-general's letter respecting the grant of the order of the Star of India, the presentation being the signal for a salute, and the missive was received with all due honour. The resident delivered himself of an address in Oordu upon the Order, and the latter having been read, the Maharajah expressed his thanks and high gratification at the honour conferred on him, and the nuzzur and attar and pan business having been gone through, the resident departed.

CHOLERA.—The official return of the number of deaths from cholera in the Delhi division placed them at two thousand one hundred and sixty-one.

COLONEL H. P. BURN, head of the Army Clothing Agency Department, is about to retire from the service, availing himself of the new rate of pension assignable to his rank in the scheme of bonus and retirement recently sent out from England by Sir Charles Wood.

PRECEDENCE.-Some of the "burra beebees" at Mussoorie, we learn from the Mofussilite, have been quarrelling about precedence, and apropos of the squabbling, that journal remarks :- "The 'lady' who 'stickled' most about precedence, in this country, some ten years ago, had been the lady's maid of the wife of a magistrate at Mozuffernugger. She married a civilian of 'superior rank,' and even, when unopposed, loudly insisted on taking 'the pas' of her former mistress. On one occasion, when indulging in a dignity mood her former mistress remarked very quietly, 'Go first, or last, or as you will; but at present do me a kindness, resume for a moment your old occupation, and arrange the flounces of my dress. They did part 'daggers drawn;' for the maid was completely disarmed, whilst her former mistress merely smiled at her anger and confusion. Such is life, occasionally, in India."

THE SHAWL TRADE OF THE PUNJAB is in a very depressed state in consequence of the manufacturers resorting to "tricks" of a certain kind which it has hitherto been supposed were chiefly practised by the inferior manufacturers of Lancashire and Yorkshire. A meeting was held at Umritsur on the 24th August to consider the matter and to devise remedies, and we (Madras Athenœum) have received a report of the proceedings. Mr. H. Cope, of the firm of Cope and Co., was in the chair, and he read extracts to the twelve native shawl merchants who were present of letters received from the London brokers reporting the result of the last July sales. The general result was that some of the shawls (those from Umritsur especially) were so badly made that they were absolutely unsaleable at any price, while with respect to the shawls from other parts, there was a decline of from twenty to thirty per cent. on former prices. Never before was so "dull and dragging" a sale known as that in last July. The brokers attribute this to the adulteration of the Pushm with coarse sheep's wool, and they say that, unless matters are amended. the trade will undoubtedly be extinguished. The annual value of the trade, including that of Cashmere, is estimated at five hundred thousand pounds, which represents a total of some five millions sterling from the period when British rule commenced in the Punjab. It appears that sheep's wool, however fine, will never assume that permanent brilliancy of colour which is the peculiar characteristic of the Cashmere and Umritsur shawls, and that until the shawl has been washed and exposed to the sun for some time, it is impossible to ascertain whether sheep's wool has been used. It also appears that many of the native manufacturers have grown rich by thus adulterating the article, and that those who are poor hope to become rich also by the same means. All of them know that the fraud is not punishable, and all defy remonstrances. Unless the practice can be checked, the meeting was of opinion that the trade would be lost to the Punjab, and that it would once more be monopolised by the Maharajah of Cashmere, who, it seems, "adopts the most stringent and effectual means of repressing any attempt at, and punishing frauds," such as those complained of by the meeting. The remedy suggested was that the City Punch or Trade Committee should be empowered to call on those engaged in the manufacture to sign an agreement on contract not to adulterate, under a penalty, which should be recovered in the Small Cause Court in the event of adulteration being proved. That the goods should be in the custody of the police till the case was decided. That on a first "conviction" the goods should be stamped to show that they were adulterated, and on a second that they should be impounded and destroyed. It seems that this plan was successfully tried some years ago with good effect, but that the manufacturers discovered it was not sanctioned by authority and "returned to their mal-practices.

"INTERNAL TRAFFIC" OFFICE .-- A very important correspondence, we learn from the Hurkaru, has been carried on between the Bengal Government and the Chamber of Commerce. upon the subject of obtaining by means of stamped chullans, a thorough knowledge of the vast trade of Calcutta with the interior. It is proposed to collect the information by establishing an office of "Internal Traffic." Our contemporary says :-- "The Committee of the Chamber of Commerce point out that the elements of such an establishment already exist in the office of the Circular Canal Department, "so ably managed by the zealous, active, and intelligent Superintendent, Mr. Galiffe." Each cargo boat, and steamer together with the railways, should be compelled to send accurate manifests, and copies of traffic way bills, specifying the name of the steamer, the number of the boat or the line of railway, the quantity and nature of produce, the town or district from which it came, and the names of the consignees. From these documents it is proposed that a return should be drawn up and published daily, which should give the amount of goods arriving in Calcutta by each mode of conveyance. In this way the merchant could calculate with safety what contracts he might enter into as to quantity, and what prices would be likely to rule for a season. Such a measure would place his operations on a very different basis from that which has hitherto sufficed him. The committee propose that the money needful for carrying out the scheme, should be raised by levying a tax of one or two rupees a trip upon each cargo boat employed in bringing produce from places outside the immediate boundaries of the port, and from stamping the chullans as bills of lading just as the outward traffic is dealt with. They point out that cargo boats, which occupy a great extent of river frontage, and have nearly doubled their charges for freight within the last ten years, are wholly exempt from taxation, and they anticipate that Government will derive from these sources a considerable overplus of revenue, which might be employed in improving the river banks and landing places. No taxes could be more equitably These proimposed or more easily collected." posals have been submitted to the Board of Revenue by the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal, who appears to consider them highly important. The board have been asked to report at an early date.

KISHNAGHUR.— The Englishman publishes the following reports of the floods at this place: The river is rising at a great rate, and we shall have an inundation after all. This inundation will prove the injury Government has done by ruining us; the distress will be frightful all over the country, and the loss of cattle immense, as the poor brutes have never got into condition after the long drought of last year. . . . inundation is tremendous. This part of the country is comparatively high, and the ryots not believing the water would rise to such a height particularly at this late period, sowed down all the lands right and left with teel and kullye crops. These have all been swamped, as also all the large crop of late rice known as aman dhan. The water is still rising-no going about save by boats. . . . The entire country is now under water. Our vats here are filled with people, goats, pigs, and fowls; you never saw such a We are within eighteen inches of the gathering. greatest height in 1856, and the distress and loss of cattle will be hard to bear. As for rents, we cannot now look for any more at present. If the river remains long on the lands, the cold weather crops will be a failure, because the moisture will be too great and the land chilled.

BRIGADIER GENERAL ST. G. D. SHOWERS, commanding the Presidency divisions, proceeds, weather permitting, to inspect the troops and establishments stationed at Barrackpore; where, up to the present time (October 8) the rains have so saturated and flooded the ground as to render parades impossible. The general will also, on this occasion, inspect the military depot and establishments at Chinsurah.

COURTS-MARTIAL.-We (Englishman) said, a short time ago, when noticing the numerous courts-martial which the Bombay military authorities were playing, that under the best regime these visitations would occasionally descend upon every army; and we noticed periods when, before now, they had for a time become epidemic in Bengal, and then ceased, leaving a pleasing holiday of repose, as far as officers were concerned, for the Judge Advocate-general's department. It appears as if, after the agreeable lull which we have had as regards courts-martial, for a considerable length of time, we are now about to experience an attack of these trials, some of which have already commenced near the Presidency, and we have information of the inevitable advent of others higher up-country. Yesterday the trial of one officer commenced at Barrackpore; and we learn that another officer at Dum-Dum, though wishing to retire noiselessly from the service, is not to be permitted to do so, but that charges have been sent in against him, and that he also must confront the tribunal. We believe that both these courts-martial are consequent upon a too admiring appreciation of that popular and apparently inexhaustible vintage, "Castillon, 1795;" whose final exhaustion and disappearance would be a great benefit to the military community in India, especially if followed by the murder of "John Exshaw," as recommended by a contemporary in the case of noxious or disagreeable acquaintances. In our opinion, the silent retirement of officers whose only offence is a too great addiction to the vintage, or partiality to the vintner, mentioned above, is much preferable to their being tried by courts-martial; and, were we consulted, we would always advise the acceptance of their papers, and that they be permitted to "retire from the army," for which they are unfit. The scandal of a court-martial is unnecessary in cases where officers admit their offence in the matter of drunkenness; and, as the vice or habit, however reprehensible, is not infamous, or such as would be brought to serious trial on civil life, we see no good reason for encumbering the criminal records of the army with courts-martial arising out of it simply. We would accept the offender's resignation of her Majesty's commission, and let him "go, and sin no more;" so that, if he had the fortitude and good sense to reform, he might recommence life without the brand of expulsion from the army upon him.

PRIVILEGE LEAVE.-Orders have been issued by the Supreme Government, that the commissioners of revenue and police have been invested with powers to grant privilege leave to all officers subordinate to them; leaving the grant of special leave, furloughs, &c., in the hands of Government.

MR. E. C. BAYLEY, c. s., has been appointed an extra judicial Commissioner in Oude.

EUROPEAN RELIEF .- Final orders have been received for the return to England, in the coming cold season, of the 1st battalion of H.M.'s 6th Royals, now stationed at Barrackpore and Darjeeling; and the regiment is warned to prepare for embarkation during the month of January. H.M.'s 75th Regiment, now garrisoning Fort William, is also under orders for England, to leave about the same time. The European relief, arranged in London, is coming out before the Indian relief, prepared in Calcutta, for the appearance of which in General Orders many are waiting in great suspense and anxiety.

IMPORTS (Calcutta, October 3).—Cotton manufactures under the enlarged purchases for the approaching festival of Doorga Proja have real ised in many cases higher prices, particularly Grey Cottons; and account sales at last show a profit on several of the most important items. The sales made are large, and could the present demand be relied on to continue after the holidays, we might hope the turning point of the long period of adversity experienced by this trade had been reached. This, however, remains to be seen. Accounts from the North-West are rather more favourable, and there is, within the last few days, an inquiry from Eastern buyers, who, to attain the average of other seasons, have very large purchases to make. Our warehouses are fully stocked—in fact heavily so —to meet the larger trade we hope for, and the shipments on the way are also considerable. The money market has sel-dom been in a stronger position to help trade then at the pro-sent time. Under the head of Metals, Salt. and Costs we have nothing encuraging to write; the market is dull and generally overstocked, and prices very unsatisfactory.

Exports (Calcutta, Oct. 8).—Prices have in nearly all cases remained very firm. Isdigo prospects are for very high prices.

Sugar 2 to 3 annas higher, with moderate transactions. Rice very firm, and the coarse kinds in demand tor Eugland. Raw Silk dull, and Rs. 1 to 1-8 per seer lower. More inquiry for Coraks, at well maintained prices; and Printed Goods are also more asked for. Lae Dye, without any particular activity, is at steady prices. Skellae of first European marks is passed off the market in considerable parcels on first account; some large sales of native have been made at very firm prices. Linseed has been less asked for, and prices quote 2 to 3 annas lower. Juste also declined, owing to the check given to demand by higher freights. Hides in active request, at very full prices. Castor Oil quiet, at rather higher figures.

MADRAS.

NAGPORE AND THE GODAVERY.

The province which at this moment is the most important in India is least known to the public. Since Nagpore became British territory, in 1854, it has seldom been heard of except for the disputes of its officials or the obstinate insouciance of its first commissioner. Pegu, the Punjab, and Oude were not two years in our hands before annual reports of their administration were issued. and it has been perhaps the most pleasant duty of the reader of Indian Blue books to watch the steady progress of these provinces. But for seven long years has Nagpore lain in obscurity. The proceedings of its rulers have been less known to the public than the doings of the barbarous courts of Siam, Mandalay, or Katmandu. Has our rule benefited the people of a province as large as Ireland? Is the expense of our official machinery increasing or diminishing? What are the facts as to the productive resources of what is believed to be the cotton-field of India?

We owe to the first Commissioner, Mr. Plowden, an ignorance which is not confined to the public, but till lately was shared by the Calcutta authorities. To Major Elliot, his successor, he left a mass of arrears, which that officer has been wading through with praiseworthy energy. Knowing this we have long abstained from all complaint as to the absence of the annual report. But the arrears are surely cleared off by this time; and we hear so much about Nagpore cotton that we want officially to know the truth, while the opening up of the navigation of the Godavery and the Wurdah will begin with the close of the monsoon. Moreover, we cannot any longer refuse to listen to complaints regarding the state of the province, nor can we continue to trust to mere hearsay, to a vague and indefinite fama, as our only authority for believing Major Elliot to be an able as well as industrious commissioner. Except in the matter of roads our correspondents complain that the province is entirely neglected. In education it has gone back from the position it held under native rule. All that we have done in this way is to erect a gallows in the city fronting the Mission school. The late Rajah supported a school which is now extinct, and for eight years there has not been one in the province maintained by the State. The city tank is a mass of poisonous vegetation. Crime is allowed to pass with impunity. At the Holi festival the most indecent figures are exhibited, contrary to law, and it is only after repeated protests on the part of the Missionaries that orders are issued which are not obeyed. Gambling, the fruitful source in the city of poverty, suicide and crime, is under the special protection of the police, to whom it affords a rich harvest. The people are said to be discontented. They draw contrasts between the British and the native rule by no means flattering to the former. They complain bitterly that their own language, the Marathi, is prohibited in the Courts and that Hindustani takes its place. We should not object if the Marathi were not as important a vernacular of India as Bengali, Hindi, or Tamil. The result is that North West men show the Commissioner that his first duty at present is to prepare an Administrative Report. His recent scheme of roads for the transit of cotton shows that, in the Public Works Department, a good beginning has been made.

The value and importance of Nagpore to the empire have been greatly increased by the Nizam's cession of the left bank of the Godavery. Its principal tributary, the Wurdah, affords with it a direct descent to the sea from west to east for 500 miles, for 100 of which it is described as runing through the finest cotton fields of India. Natchengaum, the upper terminus, is a cotton mart sixty miles south-west of Nagpore and thirty miles east of Comrawuttee, to which the Bombay railway will be open in eighteen months. The river runs within fifteen miles of Hinginghat, the chief emporium, whence cotton is at present sent to Calcutta by Mirzapore. The great obstacles in the Godavery are three ledges of rock, extending, the first at 150 miles from the sea for ten miles. the second at 220 from the sea for fourteen miles, and the third at 310 from the sea for thirty-six miles. The impossible project of forcing a way through these sixty miles of rock has been abandoned, for the plan adopted in the great American rivers of cutting lateral canals with looks. This scheme involves a sum of £300,000, which has been sanctioned, and the expenditure will probably be not under half a million sterling. But this sum, economically spent, will be well invested, if it be the case that the irrigation improvements in the Godavery district up to last May doubled its revenue, while they increased the goods traffic thirty fold, the passengers traffic seven fold, and the exports twelve fold. The exports by sea alone, exclusive of treasure, amounted to upwards of half a million sterling last year. The removal of the transit duties in the river and the cession of its left bank, led to an export of six thousand logs of teak sent down to Coringa from the Pranheeta, whence not a log was ever exported before. Meanwhile we have intelligence of the gunboat Mayflower, which was despatched by the Madras authorities to open up the Wynegunga and Wurdah rivers, having pene trated up the Wurdah to within five miles of Chandah, whence the way is clear to a point twenty five miles from Hinginghat. Until the lateral canals are cut, steamers are to ply between the barriers, round which roads will be made so as to maintain unimpeded communication with Coconada on the coast.

We look for the Report of Sir W. Denison's visit to the Godavery. He is believed to be a good engineer officer as well as an experienced governor. There should be no loss of time in cutting the canals, else the trade will be directed to Bombay by the railway. There is room, how-ever, for both river and railway carriage, and the competition of both should lessen the cost of transit. Well-administered, Nagpore promises to emulate the prosperity of its sister palatinates. -Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

BURMAH .- Mr. Blandford and Mr. Fedder have been deputed by Government to survey the Burmese territories.

THE CANTONMENT GARDEN AT RANGOON WAS instituted upon the model of the Anarkullee gardens at Lahore, by Lord Dalhousie in 1854, with a view, first, to afford the means of supplying fresh vegetables to the European troops; secondly, to give to the men means of occupation and amusement by voluntary labour in the garden; and thirdly, to furnish to them, as well as to the other residents in cantonments, a pleasant lounge and place of resort. The garden was further to be rendered attractive by giving a variety of amusements, such as skittles, quoits, gymnastic poles, and such other things as the experience of commanding officers might suggest as likely to divert the men. The warm-hearted intention of the founder has been well rewarded by the result. shut out the indigenous Brahmins from all the offices. Now all this may be true, or much of it has, from a "filthy, fever-breeding swamp, the may be exaggerated, but it must be sufficient to burial-ground of the Burmese Government," become a fertile and a healthy pleasure-ground, the number of soldiers whom the encouragement offered to them has induced to cultivate vegetables has increased from twenty men in 1850 to one hundred and nineteen men in 1860; while the quantity of vegetables sold by them, after supplying personal wants, has risen from less than Rs. 3,000 rupees in the former, to upwards of Rs. 15,000 in the latter year. These results show what can be done where interest is shown, and proper encouragement given to soldiers by their officers, upon whom the success of such undertakings usually depends. The Governor general has bestowed a well-merited eulogium upon Captain Harris, of the Madras commissariat, for his successful exertions in carrying out these excellent arrangements.—Englishman.

COTTON CULTIVATION IN BURMAH .-- A COITEspondent of the Englishman states that the King of Burmah is determined to avail himself of the opportunity furnished by the Civil War in North America.—" I am just from the capital, and I feel happy at being in a position to add to your observations the gratifying news that his Majesty the King is both heart and hand in the work of promoting the cultivation of foreign cetton in his dominions; and I must certainly say that his efforts are being attended with extraordinary good success, which appears to be the prelude of some substantial commercial advantages yet in prospect. In the month of July last I furnished his Majesty with two baskets of seeds-the Egyptian and the New Orleans, and he was pleased to order his officers immediately under him to see that the seeds were properly sown and the plants carefully attended to. On leaving the city for Rangoon, his Majesty assured me that there were then on the ground seventy thousand plants, healthy and thriving, promising a rich harvest; and desired me to procure him some more seeds. From the eager and earnest manner in which he spoke of the further supply he wished for, there is every ground for entertaining the hope that no exertion will be spared to render a good quantity of the best cotton available by the next year for the Manchester looms. He has himself told me that he is resolved at all events to compete with the American cultivators."

COLOMBO, Oct. 18 .- In Colombo we have had, for the fortnight, weather most unseasonably fine, and the few ships loading have been able to make the best use of the time. The Avon is rapidly filling up and will soon sail, with a considerable number of passengers.

We have made a good beginning of the present season, especially with Plantation, of which the African took no less than 12,432 to London. She also took 987 cwts. of Native. The Hannah Nicholson and the Chectah took respectable cargoes to the Australian Colonies, and the result is that our Coffee Exports to date shew well in comparison with those for the first fortnight of the two previous seasons, while it will be observed that the fortnight is to that of 1858-59 as 17,127 to 0. We wish we could reasonably hope that the rest of the season should present so favourable a comparison with past ones. But that is out of the question. Our only comfort is in the good quality of the present crop, and in the moral certainty of a teeming crop next season.

In the course of the last 13 years, besides supplying her own wants, at the rate of at least 50,000 cwts. per annum, Ceylon has sent into the markets of the world very nearly 6 millions of cwts. of coffee, worth, on the spot, 131 millions sterling, and probably selling for not less than 16 to 18 millions. The average value of Plantation has risen from £1. 12s. in the bad year, 1848-49, to £2. 14s., while the Export has increased from 210,000 cwts. to 484,000-far more than doubled, in fact. The rise in the average value of Native, from 17s. to £2 is still greater than in the case of Plantation, but the rate of Per Patons.—Mrs. Buck and child.

Revenue has increased and Expenditure diminished in the expired portion of 1861, to an extent not anticipated; while the estimated revenue of 1862, is the highest ever realised when no Pearl Fishery occurred to swell the receipts. The round figure of £700,000 will probably be attained. Of the funds at the disposal of the Council, (£458,000,) no less than £106,000 are to be devoted to roads, bridges and canals. There is also a liberal provision proposed for Works and Buildings.

While the means of communication are thus attended to, the planters have become alarmed about the prospects of immigration, and they are to meet to-morrow to consider whether Government should not be called on to fulfil the pledge of substituting a simpler and less expensive scheme for the one which it is proposed to repeal. With the fair certainty of a very large crop in 1862-63, it is but natural that the planters should feel great anxiety. But after the recent frank declaration of the Madras Government, that no extra facilities will be afforded by them for the abstraction of labour from their territories, the work of legislation becomes very much narrowed. The Governor promises all the administrative aid possible, and for the sake of his own reputation, apart from higher considerations, he is sure to fulfil this pledge. The schooners plying across the Northern ferry have succeeded admirably, and they are to be continued. But the Governor has not acceded to the wish expressed by the Labour Commissioners that the Pearl should be replaced by a schooner between Colombo and Tuticoreen. The cost of such a schooner would be £100 a month, less her earnings, and we believe it was anticipated that the deficiency would be very small. The Pearl has been working at a loss which we have heard estimated at £600 a month, so that we fear steamers, even of the most improved construction, would be a heavy burden on the colony. Experience seems to point to Native schooners, plying at low rates under careful European supervision, as exceedingly valuable in securing the confidence of the coolies. Passengers in these schooners are free from the vexatious and capricious exactions of the ordinary Dhony owners—the cooly knows what he has to pay, and knows that for the moderate sum demanded he will be safely and with reasonable speed conveyed across the Strait. It seems of importance, therefore, to keep up a system of this kind.

The work of legislation has progressed rapidly during the fortnight. The Bill to amend and consolidate the laws relating to stamps has passed through committee, and a Bill to consolidate the laws relating to tolls (road, bridge, ferry, and canal) has been introduced. That important measure, the Thoroughfares Bill, has been passed; and the Governor has given his sanction to the various measures for amending the Kandian Marriage Law; regarding Salvage and the Stowage of Goods at the Customs; the Basses Lights Bill; and the Supplementary Supply Bill for 186I, embracing votes to the amount of £40,000. Mr. Lorenz's amended Police-courts Bill, too, has gone through committee.

In the Ecclesiastical Department the Rev. Mr. Schrader has taken charge of Trinity Church, Colombo; after receiving the most pleasing testimony from the people in his late charge in the Kandian districts. The most important military change is that which has installed Col. Hadden, R.E., not only as commandant of his own corps but of the garrison of Colombo. General O'Brien, in common with a large number of the leading members of Colombo Society, has had a very narrow escape from poisoning by arsenic intro-duced into coffee. The general had previously the pleasure of opening what promises to be a very useful institution for the instruction and amusement of the soldiers in the garrison of Colombo.

In our obituary we are sorry to have to include that of an old and worthy servant of Government, Mr. Grenier, so long the secretary of the District

COCHIN CHINA.

The following notes by a recent visitor to Saigon will be found to afford some very important information respecting the present state and future prospects of Lower Camboja:-

Since my visit to Saigon in April last, a great change for the better has taken place, although I cannot attribute the amelioration to any great energy on the part of the Government. With every desire on the part of excellent and ener-getic officers to develope the resources of the place and country on the most liberal scale, and with an unlimited credit from the Home Government, there is a want of vitality about the settlement which, although it may be partly attributed to the "dead" season of the year, yet is mainly to be traced to the absence of all initiative, the fear of responsibility, the want of knowledge of detail on the part of the chief authority, who, besides having his time fully occupied with the management of a considerable fleet and army, is also expected to inaugurate a liberal government, and establish a system of revenue in a country unaccustomed to European rule, as well as decide knotty points in questions totally foreign to the habits and experience of his previous career.

The consequences, therefore, have been delay upon delay, and references without end to the Minister at Paris. Perhaps one of the worst features is that no land is obtainable; the European merchants remain cooped up in wretched houses, tenants at will of the authorities, and there is no warehouse room, except at the China

On the other hand, roads have been made and some are being opened up, which will greatly benefit town and country. Barracks and hospibenefit town and country. Barracks and hospitals are springing up and the public works department is fully occupied, and is likely so to be for a long time to come, on coal-sheds, commissariat-stores, quarters for officials, drainage, canals, churches, &c. The plan of the town has been drawn up, and if carried out, will render Saigon one of the prettiest towns in the East, especially if cleanliness can be enforced. The number of inhabitants both in Saigon and the China Town has materially increased, and attap houses are springing up in all directions. The increase is greater in the latter than in the former place, whilst the country shows a marked improvement as to population.

The plains about the vicinity of Saigon are mostly well covered this year with rice fields, and competent authorities say that the production will be greatly in excess of what it has been for the last four years. There is still, however, much to do. Personal inspection confirmed the truth of the above as to present cultivation, and although at one time the crop was threatened from scarcity of rain, it is now considered to be safe for this season.

The appearance of the soil as turned up by the plough, fully confirms the opinion as to its fertility, and during long rides in various directions, over beautiful endless plains, a great proportion of which is still uncultivated, no traces of lalang, that curse of Singapore, were to be seen, though nearer town they are abundantly visible.

Here and there, in the middle of rice fields in some places, and on the outskirts in others, are to be seen patches of tobacco, ground nut, and sugar cane, but nowhere in sufficient quantity to do more than supply local consumption. These articles are cultivated in larger quantities in the far interior, and towards Tonquin.

The reports from Mytho vary-some represent the country as but little cultivated, others represent the crop as likely to be greatly in excess of former seasons. The truth probably lies between the two, and, on the whole, abundance is likely to prevail.

The sanitary position of the town and country is satisfactory, and the best proof is that the sickness among the troops stationed at Saigon is not above 11 at 2 per cent., and the deaths during the past month have not exceeded 2 per 1,000.

No notable progress has been made towards the conquest of the country since the capture of Mytho, which has proved unfortunate, since it has given courage to the mandarins in neighbouring towns to intrigue in all directions, and thus, whilst he of Bein Hoa is said to be active in promoting robberies, he of Vinh-luong encourages piracy. It is reported that on the arrival of the reinforcements per Jura, the admiral will send expeditions against both of these places, and add them to the French possessions. It is but just to add that that part of the country held of the French is kept in good order, and the inhabitants are said to be peaceful, con-tented, and anxious to be rid of the vicinity of their mandarins.

It is evident to an impartial observer that when tranquillity is restored and the form of Government is made known and established, unless the latter is of the most illiberal description, which there is no reason to suppose it will be, South Cochin China will become a rich and flourishing colony—but at the rate at which matters are at present proceeding, the time is far distant when such will be the case. It is to be hoped that the new Governor and Commanderin-Chief, now expected shortly, will bring with him such definite instructions as will admit of the desired development; for then Singapore will find an important outlet, and a powerful stimulant to its trade for many a year to come. MUNICIPAL ADMINISTRATION OF CALCUTTA .-The commission appointed by the Bengal Government to inquire into the working of the Municipal Administration of Calcutta, has made its report. Calcutta is divided into six divisions, and for these divisions the commission proposes that there should be six local committees to dispose of local affairs. For general affairs it is proposed that there shall be a central board and a general board, which last is to impose taxes, allot funds to the local committees, &c. The local committees are to transact the daily business; the central board is to meet once a fortnight, and the general board (formed of the central board and delegates from the local committees) once a quarter. The Central Board is to consist of the Commissioner of Police, President, a member of the Chamber of Commerce, a member of the Trades' Association, a member of the British Indian Association, a medical man of experience, and a sitting commissioner on an adequate salary.

The Military Workshops.

Adj. Gen.'s Office, Simla, Sept. 10.—The C. in C. has much pleasure in directing the publication of the sanction of the Government of India to a plan of regimental workshops submitted by H.E.

2. The success of the workshops which the C. in C. directed to be set on foot in H.M.'s 6th regt. as an experiment shows how much can be effected, as reexperiment shows how much can be effected, as regards the useful employment of soldiers, by a zealous and intelligent commanding officer. Not only do the workshops of the wing of the regt. stationed at Barrackpore execute a good deal of work of different sorts for the residents of the station, but they repair also, efficiently, as the executive engineer reported to H.E. at his late inspection, the whole of the barrack furniture. The head-quarters wing of H.M.'s 6th furniture. The head-quarters wing of H.M.'s 6th regt. at Sinchal have effected extensive repairs in their barracks, which, but for their assistance, would scarcely have been habitable.

3. Sir Hugh Rose will not again review the advan-tages which the soldiers and their children will de-rive from having within their reach the means of combining profitable employment with recreation; of acquiring the knowledge in trade which may serve to support them when they leave the service; or on the advantage of a regiment possessing within itself resources which render it independent of external aid in times of difficulty.

4. H.E. desires that commanding officers will at once take measures to establish in the barracks occupied by their regiment or batteries a system of workshops on the principle herewith promulgated, and that they will do their utmost to insure their

Improvements in Rifle Practice.

Adjt. Gen.'s Office, Simla, Sept. 24.—The C. in C. is pleased to re-publish the following Horse Guards G.O. for general information and guidance:—

Horse Guards, May 2, 1861.

H.R.H. the General Commanding in Chief having had under his consideration the results of the firing of troops armed with the rifled musket during the late wars, has observed that the destructive powers of that weapon have not been developed to the full extent

H.R.H. has, however, satisfied himself that the failure is not in the rise, but has arisen from the want of a dexterous and skilful use of it.

To render the rifle as efficient as possible, a back sight has been affixed thereto, so graduated as to furnish the required elevation for all distances from 100 to 900 yards. The correct adjustment of this sight entails a knowledge of distances which is not difficult to acquire, although considerable practice is required to keep it up; and the rifle, when the sight is correctly arranged, may be used with the fullest confidence of success by troops carefully trained, if calm and steady in their tire, and judiciously manœuvred.

As, however, much allowance must be made for the hurry and excitement consequent on close ac-tion, it is deemed expedient to lay down rules for general information and for the guidance of officers of all grades in command of troops before an enemy, in order to ensure file and volley firing being, in future, effectively and rapidly executed.

It is therefore to be understood that when firing It is therefore to be understood that when firing in line or in square at and under 300 yards, the flap of the backsight is not to be raised at all, but aim is to be taken through the flanges which protect it. This will be found at once to ensure sufficient accuracy of direction, and practically to give adequate elevation, while the difficulty under the circumstances, of getting the eye down to the bottom of the notch in the back-sight will be obviated.

When firing, in the open, at ranges beyond 300 yards—and at all distances when firing from behind parapets or under cover of any sort—the back-sight is to be carefully adjusted; a true alignment, taken through the notch of the back-sight on the object aimed at, and a correct elevation for the estimated distance, being essential to accurate shooting.

distance, being essential to accurate shooting.

H.R.H. directs that these rules be carefully explained to the non-commissioned officers and privates by captains and officers of companies, and t they be observed at all division, brigade, and battalion evolutions; also that officers generally make themselves proficient in a knowledge of distances, and thoroughly acquainted with the powers of the Officers commanding divisions, brigades, and garrisons, are to ascertain, by frequent inspections and close examinations, that the field and company officers possess a correct knowledge of distances, and of the theory and practice of ritle shooting, as the effective use of the rifle on service depends, in a very great measure, on their efficiency on these points.

If the instructions herein detailed are attended to H.R.H. is satisfied that the rifle will be found to be a weapon of terrible efficiency in close action, and when dexterously used of equal value against bodies of troops, and in silencing artillery at distances up to 900 yards. By command, months, granted to visit Europe on private affairs, may be extended him to 18 mo., on the same account, with retention of his appt. under the 93rd para. of your G.O., dated April 10 last.
(Sd.) James Yorke Scarlett,

Adjutant-general.

2. The priv. of retaining appointments during periods of absence not exceeding 20 months, as announced in my despatch, dated Jan. 18 last, applies only to officers returning to this country on m.c. It was intended as an extension of the privilege of the 15 mos. leave allowed by the new furl. regs. to staff officers quitting India on account of the state of their health. With this exception officers of the staff health. With this exception officers of the staff corps, it was stated, would be under the new furl regs. By these regulations, furlough on private affairs, with retention of the staff appt., is restricted to 6 months.

8. The furl. on private affairs of the officers of the staff corps, with the right of retaining appt., is to be limited to the same period.

4. The application of Lieut. MacIntyre cannot

A PARLIAMENT OF NATIVES.

THERE is an old Italian proverb which says, il poco mangiare è il poco parlare non facero mai male. It is a saying full of practical wisdom, but one not popular with our own countrymen. And not only do we ourselves set it at naught, but we teach our neighbours and fellow-subjects to do so likewise. If good anywhere, one would suppose that this maxim would be especially applicable to Young Bengal. Nowhere can it be more advisable to eat little and talk little, and yet nowhere is the reverse more practised. By eating much and of all manner of forbidden dainties Young Bengal illustrates its freedom from native superstitions, while by much prating it assumes to be civilised. Young Bengal has made great strides of late, in imitation of the outer life of Europe; but like the daughters of the horse-leech it cries for more. It is now above all things anxious to obtain a seat in the Legislative Council, preparatory to standing for a corrupt borough on the Liberal interest, or purchasing a peerage from a Whig Ministry. In the mean time it sits in solemn conclave at the British Indian Association Rooms in Calcutta, and administers the affairs of Government after the following manner.

On Friday, the 26th July, a monthly general meeting was held-in that respect they are wiser in their generation than the representatives of this great and illustrious country-and after various native gentlemen, Mittres, Ghoses, Boses, Dutts, Bunnerjees, and Mookerjeas, had been elected or proposed for election, the Committee submitted the summary of their operations since their last report.

The first subject which occupied their attention was Mr. Laing's financial statement, with which they were tolerably well satisfied. At least, they approved of the retrenchments that had been or were to be made, but disapproved of the Income-tax. A deputation was accordingly appointed to wait on the Governor-general, to point out to his Excellency that the tax in question was exceedingly unpopular, and not at all worth the trouble of collection. The President, or Speaker, Rajah Radhakanth Bahadoor, dwelt with emphasis upon the shortcomings of his own people. "Perhaps in no other part of the British dominions," he said, " is there such wide and unrestricted scope for official caprice and tyranny, great and small, as in India. Unaccustomed to self-government, the people are apathetic and spiritless; while the absence of any strong public opinion as a check against official oppression and abuse of power enables, not to say encourages, our officials in the interior to perpetrate many an act of official wrong and injustice with perfect impunity." It must be clearly understood that Commission, the Committee are pleased to find tion in the hands of the local authorities. It being pronounced a failure, it is almost ludicrous been raised in the British Parliament against the cruelty of taxing the poor man's salt. But this is the very article of consumption which an association of natives selects for an enhanced impost. "As a mode of taxation," say they, "the salt-tax is levied in the least objectionable form; the people are accustomed to it, while the individual burden is so insignificant that it is questionable whether ninety-nine out of every hundred know or feel the late increase of duty." This is certainly very different from what we have been accustomed to hear from hustings orators, but it is just possible that Rajah Radhakant Bahadoor is quite as good an authority on the subject as Mr. Ayrton. However, we agree with Lord Canning that although "the salt-tax presses as lightly upon the people as anything that could be devised;" still, " to substitute a salt-tax for the Income-tax would be to relieve the rich at the expense of the poor." Upon this the committee observe with unconscious cynicism that it is "a mistake to suppose that the poorer classes would not feel relief by the substitution recommended, inasmuch as the poor and the middle classes are suffering more from the operations of the Income-tax assessment than the rich, who have the means, and are generally well able to cope with oppression and annoyance." In plain English, by the system of lump assessment, the poor, who should be exempted altogether, are compelled to make good the deficiencies of the rich, who find it cheaper to bribe the native officials than to pay their respective quota.

The Governor-general, however, so far humoured the "Native Parliament" that he appointed Mr. H. B. Harrington to meet two of its members, Baboo Roma Nauth Tagore and Baboo Digumber Mittre, and hear what they had to say. Having disposed of this great measure the Committee next turned their attention to the Cattle Trespass Bill, which proposed to punish criminally all wilful and malicious trespass; and there may be some ground for the apprehension they expressed that "the investigation of the intent or motives of the person causing the cattle to trespass," may prove in the hands of the influential and evilminded, "a ready and plastic engine of oppression and coercion, and furnish the already too powerful police with a new handle of corruption and extortion." Without doubt, what is really wanted is not any new law, but the faithful execution of those already in existence. It is not the Legislative, but the Executive, which is usually at fault.

The next question that occurred, related to the Municipal Commission, and by dint of much importunity, the Association obtained that one of its members should be appointed, which was only just and reasonable. Then it was found that the third-class railway carriages were scarcely fit for the conveyance of cattle, much less of human beings, and this was very properly brought to the notice of the Govern-Another grievance was the new Stamp Law, and here again we confess we go with the "Parliament," and trust that its remonstrances may yet receive due attention. On the subject of the Rent these remarks are directed against native, and I that "indigo was the root of the evil," and that not against European officials. The Income tax | the "alleged repudiation was far from being deeply rooted." Naturally enough they are to remark upon the substitute proposed for it, opposed to the criminal punishment of breaches when we remember the loud outcries that have of civil contracts, though, in the North-west Provinces, their own countrymen are decidedly in favour of such a measure. In general terms they speak well of the new India Bills, except that they are not quite so liberal as they would have desired. The recent salt regulations, however, are quite to their satisfaction, and they strongly recommend the sale of waste lands in fee simple. The Public Works Bill, for facilitating the acquisition of lands by individuals or companies, for the construction of public works, they feel assured will prove of great practical usefulness and benefit. Having thus settled the affairs of the State, the Committee express their regret for Mr. Laing's illness, and for the death of the late Baboo Hurrish Chunder Mookerjea. All jesting apart, we are disposed to augur well of this association, provided it confine itself to acting as a council of advice and suggestion. The local knowledge of its members, if properly directed, might prove highly beneficial both to the Government and the country, if only they will forget their fancied wrongs, and apply themselves in singleness of heart to the development of a sound practical legislation. Outside of the Calcutta Council they may be immensely serviceable, whereas in the canacity of members of the Government, they would ever find themselves in a captious and hurtful minority.

THE BENGAL GOVERNMENT AND THE PLANTERS.

A FURTHER batch of official correspondence on the subject of the recent agitatations in Lower Bengal is now before us, and we sincerely hope that this is the last of the series. These papers consist of a letter from the Secretary to the Government of Bengal to the Secretary to the Landholders' and Commercial Association, summarising the several recommendations made by the Lieutenant-Governor for legislative action, only one of which, and the least important of all, has passed into law: secondly; of a review of Messrs. Morris and Montresor's Reports submitted by the Bengal Secretariat to the Government of India: and thirdly, of the answer addressed by the Lan dholders' Association to the Secretary to the Government of Bengal. measures suggested by the Lieutenaut-Governor were seven in number. The first related to the registration of indigo contracts, and contracts for the delivery of agricultural produce generally. The necessity of such registration has been shown by the frequent repudiation of all engagements by ryots, even after taking advances on account of the produce to be delivered. The planters appear to object to a compulsory registration, and would leave it optional with either party; but we cannot think that any legislation of an exceptional nature can ever practically answer. To be efficacious all laws must be comprehensive. though, of course, occasional injustice may then happen to individuals. The Government of India was favourably disposed to a law for the cheap and easy registration of contracts, but at first it was opposed by the Secretary of State for India, who has since, however, left the quesis admitted, indeed, on all sides, that the difficulty of identifying the ryot-contractors will oftentimes be very considerable; but surely that is a matter of detail which may fairly be left to the ingenuity of a legal draftsman. The next measure proposed by Mr. Grant had for its object the award of a specific penalty over and above interest and costs in cases of "wilful, inexcusable, and vexatious refusal to pay lawful rents," but no legislative step was taken to carry out his suggestion. Of his Honour's third recommendation we cannot speak favourably. It seems that the ryots sometimes complained to the Special Commissioners that the zemindars would not accept their money when tendered in payment, and they, therefore, begged that they might be allowed to lodge it with the collector of the district. The request was specious, but it covered deceit. The ryots demanded receipts, which would in some degree have impeded their landlords in recovering arrears, and besides this, their offer to pay their rent into the hands of the magistrates was frequently a mere sham, and not at all meant to be accepted, and more than once it happened that when the planter in the magistrate's presence expressed his willinguess to receive their money, they immediately slunk off. The Association also reasonably object that if the collector were authorised to receive rents, the influence of the landholder would be destroyed, as he would, in fact, be regarded as nothing more than an annuitant on the land. We come now to the fourth recommendation, and it was one that merited immediate attention, but the Bill got no further than a second reading. Long experience has shown that "after obtaining a decree against a ryot, the decree-holder gains nothing, because, pending the suit, the ryot makes away with his cattle and other personal property, not being standing crops." The Lieutenant-Governor, therefore, was of opinion that to prevent such fraudulent conduct, the property of the defendant should be attached at the outset, at the discretion of the judge, "subject to proper conditions in case of the claim being dismissed." The Association approve generally of such a measure, but reasonably object to any discretion being left to a judge, whose duty should simply be to give effect to the laws, without any margin being left for the display of passion, prejudice, or caprice. Another constant source of dispute is the measurement of lands, the ryots refusing to attend when summoned by the zemindars to point out their respective holdings. It was, therefore, recommended that when the zemindar fails to secure the attendance of the ryots, he shall be empowered to petition the collector, or nearest officer exercising the powers of a collector, to " measure the land, and to ascertain and record the fields in each ryot's possession, as though making a village settlement:" every ryot, or body of ryots, to enjoy the same privilege. This subject has been "taken into consideration "-" only that and nothing more." The sixth suggestion has actually passed into law, and henceforth the wilful damaging of crops by causing cattle to trespass is declared to be highly penal, and punishable by fines, to be awarded to the injured party. But this is clearly not sufficient to prevent the recurrence of the offence against which it was really directed. It is notorious that a large number of conducted their business. They excuse them-a field of young indigo plants, but soldom more than two or three animals could be impounded. and the fine would amount to almost nothing when divided among all the offenders. The only effectual means, then, of punishing such wilful malice would have been by rendering the whole village answerable both in cases of trespass and of violence. The Committee of the Legislative Council, however, preferred to postpone to some future day the removal of a pressing evil, and contented themselves with asking for further information. We have now arrived at the seventh and last measure proposed by Mr. Grant, but which likewise has only reached the stage of a second reading. This was intended to provide for the registration of Nij-jote lands and other lands in ryottee tenure, the urgent necessity for which was pointed out in a recent number of this journal. The Association, however, are fully justified in regarding this embryo legislation as altogether defective in the absence of any law to punish fraudulent breaches of contract, and to put down combinations. Mr. Grant, indeed, in his analysis of the reports sent in by Messrs. Morris and Montresor, refuses to recognise the existence of any combinations to withhold the payment of rents, and appears to entertain some doubt even in the case of indigo cultivation. Very possibly there were no midnight meetings at which the conspirators pledged themselves in a bowl of human blood to live rent-free and make no return for the advances they had received. likely no such solemn vow was registered either in heaven or elsewhere; but the fact remains that the few who attempted to act honestly were ill-treated and coerced by the joint action of the many. If this be not a combination according to the legal definition of the word, the effects are so similar as not to be easily distinguished. It is certain that until there be a law to enforce specific performances otherwise than by a civil suit, and until combinations be punished as they are in this country, "it is hopeless to expect that European skill and capital will be devoted to the production of cotton, silk, indigo, tea, or anything else in India." The concluding paragraph in the reply of the Landholders' Association to Mr. Lushington's conciliatory communication is scarcely, we think, in good taste. It would have been both wiser and more dignified to "let the dead Past bury its dead," and to accept the palm branch held out to them by the Lieutenant-governor:-

"The Committee," writes Mr. Fergusson, their would beg to observe in conclusion, that secretary. had his Honour given fair credence to the statements of the Association, and sooner admitted that Plantof the Association, and sooner admitted that Planters had grievances to complain of, the remedial measures proposed by him would have been brought under the consideration of the Legislature in time for ample deliberation to have been bestowed on them, and that those measures would then have doubtless been adopted in some form calculated to give relief and reduces to the indigen interests." give relief and redress to the indigo interests.

This is neither the tone nor spirit in which to address those who are placed in high authority nor is it calculated to allay whatever angry feelings may still survive the late duel between the planters and the Bengal Government. Nor should the former forget that they themselves are not altogether blameless in this matter. No small proportion of the losses and inconveniences of which they complain was due to the lax and careless manner in which they system they found in existence, and which they not unreasonably supposed to be in harmony with native feelings and prejudices. But this excuse will not hold, because they were unable to conform exactly to the ancient order of things. They could not, for instance, assume the summary powers exercised by the native zemindars, nor were they any match for the craft and subtlety of the ryots. Their only chance of success was to adhere to European customs and usages, and to conduct their business after the manner of a civilised people. As landlords they should have let their lands for a fixed rental, which should have been scrupulously exacted. A clause providing for the cultivation of any particular crop on a certain proportion of the hiring might easily have been introduced into the agreement. In like manner a yearly settlement should have been effected of all advances for indigo or other kinds of produce, and thus would have been avoided all that perplexity and confusion which have brought them to the verge of ruin. But they preferred an easy, careless life, drifting on the stream, and spreading their sails to the breeze of fortune, and now they complain that whilst they were slumbering their bark has been wrecked, and themselves well nigh lost. Mr. Grant has not been impartial, but neither have they been altogether just. The best course for both parties is now to forget and forgive their mutual grievances, and strive for the future to benefit by the dearly-bought experience of the last twelve months.

CORRESPONDENCE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,-In your paper of the 4th inst. there is an able article on the Cultivation of Cotton in the Doab, being a review of Mr. P. Saunders's Report to the Government of India. In the course of your remarks there are two criticisms which I believe to be incorrect, and unjust to Mr. Saunders, and with regard to which, with your permission, I will endeavour to show wherein the misunderstanding lies.

You say with reference to the system of charging for the water of the canals used for irrigation which does not work well, that-" Mr. Saunders, indeed, proposes that a certain sum should he levied annually from every village adjacent to the canals, thus entitling the inhabitants to use the water for whatever purpose they please. confess, however, to be somewhat shocked by the arguments he adduces in support of his suggestion. The zemindars, he says, might not be disposed to agree to such an arrangement, but they are 'so wedded to their properties that they bear the severest taxation rather than reject a Government assessment which involves a temporary deprivation of their zemindarees.' In other words, they may be treated in an arbitrary manner because they date not resent it! Again, Mr. Saunders is of opinion that the Government would not be obliged to fulfilits part of the agreement if it proved to be inconvenient to do so. The Government would not be under any obligation to give a constant supply of water, but only 'to endeavour to keep a full supply of water in the canals'! The zemindars, however, must pay whether they receive the water or not. No British Government, we trust, will ever be guilty either of such oppression, or of such barefaced dishonesty."

Mr. Saunders wrote for those who fully understand the details of the subject, and he has avoided unnecessary amplification, and his suggestion will bear the gloss you put upon it to cattle was sometimes intentionally driven upon | selves by affirming that they accepted the | Saunders simply means that a water rate muthose who are not so intimate with it. But Mr.

tually agreed upon, and having reference to the ordinary contingencies and risks to which the canals are liable, should be added to the jumma, or rent-roll of the village, to be collected by the revenue authorities as the rent is now collected. Mr. Saunders knows that the zemindars would not approve of this arrangement, and proceeds to show that their objections are merely trifling, and which would soon be overcome: in fact, so trifling does he think them, that he would at once overrule them "as the assessment would be so profitable to them." The zemindars must pay a water rate of some kind, and it is in his opinion indifferent how they are made to pay it, so that they are not oppressed, and that they are saved from the rapacity of the native officials. I do not agree with him in his view of the question, but I do not see anything in his proposition to shock a constitution loving Englishman. A people who are obliged to submit to Mr. Gladstone's measures and pay five quarters' Income-tax in one year, need not be very much shocked at a suggested fiscal measure by no means so arbitrary or unjust.

With regard to your second criticism on the remark that Government would not be obliged to fulfil its part of the agreement, Mr. Saunders does not mean that the zemindars should pay if the canals failed altogether, or if no water was forthcoming during the year; but that there should be no right to refunds or reduction of rate for trifling stoppages or the ordinary contingencies of the canal. As London submits to the stoppage of the daily supply of water on Sundays or on an occasional week in consequence of a frost, or a division of the same city suffers for rost, or a division of the same city suffers for want of water in consequence of a fire in the neighbourhood, and no one thinks of applying to the water companies for a deduction in the water rate, so the zemindars ought to have no claim for temporary stoppage of the canal. You will observe that the sole object of Mr. Saunders's suggestion is to protect the zemindar from the oppressive dishonesty of the native officials; to suppose him guilty of proposing a harsher and more dishonest system in lieu is simply absurd. This plan has been frequently proposed, considered, and rejected. There are many cogent objections to it—one being, that if the zemindars were allowed to draw water ad libitum they would waste it; those on the lower banks of the canal would be unfairly deprived of their supplies, whilst those on the lower banks would make a swamp of the country; but as my object is merely to show you that my brother could not have meant to substitute one grossly dishonest system for another, or to suggest measures that would just the substitute one grossly dishonest system for another, or to suggest measures that would just on the philamthropic nerves of the British public, I will not occupy your space with discussion regarding them.—I am, sir, your most obedient servant,

J. O'B. SAUNDERS.

London, Nov. 12, 1861.

[Mr. Gladstone's fiscal measures were forced upon the people by the people themselves acting through their chosen representatives. Mr. Paterson Saunders, however, recommends that the indian Government should extort so much a year from every landlord in the Doab in payment of water that possibly he may not require, and which he will not always obtain if he do require it. Kandy; and Edward Newnham Atherton, Esq., to be Assistant Agent at Kurnegalla, in the island of Ceylon.

IMPORTANT FINE ART SALE .- The attention of our readers is particularly directed to a great sale by auction, to take place immediately, at Southgate and Barrett's, in London, of illuminated and illustrated books, some of the choicest produc-tions of Day and Son, lithographers to the Queen. The extraordinary merits and beauty of these works have made them the envy of all persons of cultivated taste, by whom, we feel sure, the opportunity will be hailed with great delight, which will enable them to secure such works at the greatly reduced prices of the auction-room. We feel it our duty, as well as a pleasure, to be instrumental in leading these works into the possession of our readers, and would refer them for further particulars to the advertisement which appears in these columns; but we must remind them that immediate attention is requested, as the sale takes place during the week commencing the 18th.

OPTUM.-The opium merchants of Bombay have presented a petition to the Governor Sir George Clerk, in which they represent that "in consequence of the great fall in the price of opium in the China Market, that drug will not bear so heavy a pass fee as rupees 600 per chest, much less the sum of rupees 700, to which it is to be increased from and after the 1st proximo (October), according to the Government Notifica-tion dated the 2nd April 1861." They state that the present price in China (from Rs. 1,400 to Rs. 1,500) is less than the actual cost, charges of conveyance and pass fee; and they submit that, if that pass fee is increased, it will have the effect of ruining the opium trade of India, as the Chinese will consume the home produced drug or that imported from Smyrna and other places. Under these circumstances they press for a reduction of the duty, and ask the Governor to forward their petition to the Supreme Govern-

TO LADIES.

ROWLANDS' KALYDOR, an Eastern botanical preparation, for improving and beautifying the complexion and skin.

This royally patronised specific is distinguished for its extremely bland, purifying, and soothing effects on the skin; while, by its action on the pores and minute secretory vessels,—it promotes a healthy tone, allays every tendency to inflammation, and thus effectually dissipates all redness, tan, pimples, spots, freckles, discolorations, and other cutaneous visitations. The radient bloom it imparts to the cheek, and softness and delicacy which it induces of the hands and arms, its capability of soothing irritation, and removing cutaneous defects, render it indispensable to every toilet.

Price 4s. 6d. and 8s. 6d. per bottle.

Horse Guards, October 12, 1860.

His Royal Highness the General Commanding-in-Chief has been pleased to sanction the publication of "A Manual of Military Law," by Colonel Pipon, Assistant Adjutant-General to the Forces, which he considers will be a most useful addition to the books required by regulation to be in the possession of the Officers of the Army. It contains much instructive matter.

PREFACE.

The Mutiny Act and Articles of War having undergone considerable amendment in the present Session of Parliament, it has appeared to the authors a tting opportunity to lay before the military profession a concise treatise on the laws under which they serve.

In so doing they have not confined their attention to Courts-martial, but have endeavoured to provide the soldier of every rank and every service with the means of ascertaining his privileges as well as his duties and liabilities.

The Acts relating to the Militia have all been enumerated, but their bulk renders it impossible to give them at length in a work like the present. The Government having pledged themselves to consolidate the Militia laws next Session, perhaps there may then be some hope of presenting them to the reader in a comprehensive form. The Militia Bill of the present session, as it introduces some new and important provisions, is given at length in the Appendix.

A full abstract of the Laws affecting Volunteers and Yeomanny Corps occupies a separate chapter, and the Act whereby they are enabled to acquire lands for practice grounds (which at the time these words are written is yet before Parliament), will likewise be added.

A shorter and more popular notice of these Acts might have been more agreeable to the majority of readers, but in the hope of making this book useful as a book of reference, not only to Volunteers, but to magistrates and other civil dignitaries, it has been deemed more advantageous to ensure accuracy by quoting the words of the enactments, than by curtailment to risk the omission of important matter. Any reader disinclined to peruse the Acts at length, may find any subject on which he desires to inform himself by reference to the Index.

The question of Tolls on the Metropolitan Bridges having lately excited some controversy, a notice of the exemption clauses in the several Acts will be found in the Appendix, where also the late General Order relative to retired pay to Adjutants of Volunteers has been subjoined.

The authors feel that they owe some apology for publishing a law book in the present novel form; but after much consideration and many friendly suggestions, they have preferred to compress matter which would well have filled a more bulky volume, into this handy and inexpensive shape, in order to bring it within the reach of every one.

Before concluding this preface, the authors are bound to record their obligations to that very useful and elaborate work, "Hough's Military Precedents," without the assistance of which their labour would have been much extended. They have also to acknowledge the assistance of "Simmons on Courts-martial;" "D'Aguilar on Courts-martial;" and H. B. Thompson's "Military Forces of Great Britain."

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF MISS CORNELIA KNIGHT,

LADY COMPANION TO THE PRINCESS CHARLOTTE OF WALES.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"We can heartily recommend the entire work to our readers as one of the most curious and authentic disclosures of State affairs in this country, and one of the most interesting and graphic journals of travel which the literary world has for a long time been called upon to notice."—Press, June 22, 1861.

"Before concluding a notice of a very pleasant book which, while it is full of what may be called private history, contains no prurient, scandalous, or positively frivolous gossip, it should be stated that the materials from which it has been compiled were placed by the family into whose possession they passed on Mias Knight's death into the hands of Mr. J. W. Kaye, who undertook the office of editing the work. Mr. Kaye, however, states that his time was so much engrossed by other occupations, that he knows not when these volumes ght have been prepared for the press if it had not been for the assistance ery cordially rendered by his friend Mr. James Hutton, of whose intimate acquaintance with the social history of the Georgian Era no better proof could be afforded than that which speaks out from his interesting volume on English Life, 'A Hundred Years Ago.' To that gentleman is to be assigned the main part of the credit of editing the work, and there are evident marks of a successful struggle with that most trying of all editorial difficulties—a superabundance of materials. Much intelligence, industry, and care have been bestowed upon the production of the book, and such literary conscientiousness will, no doubt, meet with its reward in the public favour."—Illustrated London News, June 22, 1861.

"The matters which will secure popularity for the Autobiography are those which resuscitate the stories that excited the curiosity of our forefathers, and made them invent other scandals, scarcely any one of which, fiction as they were, exhibited half the strangeness of the facts themselves, as they are now recorded."—Bell's Messenger, June 15, 1861.

"Our authoress writes clearly and sensibly, and will, we think, be found, on he whole, a much more amusing and agreeable companion than Madame Arblay."—Daily Review, July 1, 1861.

"The work of an acute and sensible woman of the world, a woman with a good head and a good heart. It does not, like the late Lady Charlotte Bury's 'memoirs,' deal with matters of scandal and of passing notoriety, nor does it bring forward into ill-natured prominence the weak points of dukes and duchesses of fifty years ago. We perceive in the entire two volumes not a single prurient or indelicate passage (a great thing to say of a work which treats of the court of the Regency), but attempts, like equity itself, to put the best possible construction upon events as they arise."—Universal News, July 6.

"Emphatically a readable book is this autobiography. Indeed, having once opened it, the reader cannot easily lay it aside until he has got through the whole. Not the least interesting part is the collection of miscellaneous anecdotes of persons and events which are clustered together as a sort of appendix at the close. It is a book fit to be read, but fit also for something better than a casual reading; worthy of a higher repute than an evanescent popularity, merely founded upon the great names it introduces, and the amusing scraps of gossip it contains."—Morning Star, July 22, 1861.

"Of the popularity of these volumes, on account of their historical as well as gossiping merits, there can be no doubt whatever."—Athenseum, June 8, 1861.

"The journal of a clever and lady-like woman, who saw many men and many cities, and whose testimony is not heightened by the warmth of too lively an imagination, nor blackened by the tints of malice, must be—what we have found it to be—unusually interesting reading. It is, moreover, put before us in a form which must be considered exceedingly creditable to its publishers, and to those to whom they have entrusted it. Due editorial care, and a proper judgment in selection and annotation, are so extremely uncommon among those who generally prepare books of this class for the public, that we feel bound to express our cordial thanks to Mr. Kaye and his coadjutor, Mr. James Hutton, for the complete, and, at the same time, unobtrusive fashion in which they have performed their task. A short foot note is applied to all names, with regard to which a reader of the present day is likely to feel curiosity; and where the Autobiographer refers to published books, their full title is given. In these and all similar points nothing is left to be desired by the most lazy or ignorant of readers."—Spectator, June 22, 1861.

"These volumes will be read in every country seat, at every watering place, this autumn. They are fresh; full of most attractive anecdotes and interesting revelations. Miss Knight, whose anecdote books and journals have supplied these two handsome volumes, was Lady Companion to poor Princess Charlotte: she was an observant and shrewd woman of the world, also. Among the great people who were her constant companions, she appears to have been an inveterate collector of lively anecdotes. Her learning and womanly accomplishments secured her the brilliant position she held. In Mr. James Hutton the 'far-famed Cornelia Knight' has found a most discreet and accomplished editor."—Weekly Newspaper, June 16, 1861.

"These are highly interesting volumes. . . . There is hardly a page of the pleasant memoirs now published of this remarkable woman that will not be read with interest, but the attention of every reader will of course be most strongly directed to those passages of the work which serve to throw an additional light upon the relationship that existed between the Princess Charlotte and her unfeeling father and unhappy mother during the brief but eventful period of eighteen months-from January, 1813, to July, 1814-that Miss Knight retained her office of lady companion. No one will rise from the perusal of that part of the work without a feeling of the deepest sympathy for the persecuted-and, as it would seem, systematically tortured-Princess; and of the warmest indignation at the unmanly spitefulness, not to say absolute malignity of the father's treatment of the generous, noble-hearted child. Miss Knight, speaking in the fulness of the knowledge derived from her confidential position in the princess's household, more than confirms what has been previously asserted of the prince's cruelty; and presents us with a picture of royal littleness in the father and of royal wretchedness in the daughter, such as we hope may never again be exhibited within the walls of an English palace."-Observer, June 30, 1861.

"The volumes are, indeed, a mine of anecdote."—Critic, June 22, 1861.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 28th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Preadency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening.

Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southsmpton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Bombay Mail of the 28th of October contains an unusual quantity of interesting information. The local papers, however, are mistaken in supposing that they will lose their Governor in January, as Sir George has been prevailed upon to withdraw his resignation. This news will be received throughout India with universal satisfaction.

The interview at Sedasheghur between Sir William Denison and the Hon. Mr. Frere has proved abortive, the Government of Madras being opposed to the transfer of North Canara. Sir William himself is stated to have taken a favourable view of the proposed transaction, but was reluctant to run counter to the positive opinions of his more experienced colleagues in the Council. It is rather strange that this adverse resolution was not expressed in time to prevent the trouble and expense of the double journey to Sedasheghur.

Colonel Baird Smith's final Report on the Famine, occupying twenty-eight closely printed columns of the Englishman, is now before us, but we must defer the analysis of its contents to our next issue. For the present, it must suffice to observe that it is divided into two sections,—the first containing supplementary descriptive details of the Famine Tract, while the second is devoted to the subject of preventive and remedial measures. In the latter part Col. Baird Smith especially applies himself to the consideration of three important questions:the Land Revenue Settlement, the System of Irrigation, and Internal Communication. On all these points Mr. Paterson Saunders had likewise much to say, but the present report goes far more deeply into the matter than would have been proper on the part of the Cotton Commissioner.

Another official document inaugurates, in all likelihood, an era of real progress in India. The Governor-general has at length sanctioned the absolute sale of waste lands in perpetuity and the redemption of land revenue. The rules under which these two measures are to be carried out are remarkably liberal, the Government making no conditions as to the clearance and cultivation of the different grants. In Eastern Bengal, Cachar, Assam, and similar districts, the maximum is to be fixed at three thousand acres; but a narrower limit is to be assigned in the neighbourhood of towns, hill stations, and sanitaria, where land is more valuable and in greater demand. The price for unasfor cultivation. With regard to the redemption of the land tax, the permission is in the first instance to be restricted in each district to "such a number of estates as shall, in their aggregate assessment, not exceed ten per cent. of the total land-tax of the collectorate, or corresponding fiscal division of the country." The tenure thus obtained "will, as in the case of waste lands, be that of an heritable and transferable property, held in perpetuity free of all demand on account of land revenue, or of the Government;" but it will not carry with it immunity from other legal claims which may date prior to the grant. An abstract of these Resolutions will also appear in our next number.

Lady Canning and the Lieutenant-governor of Bengal were, at the latest date, at Darjeeling. Mr. Cecil Beadon is mentioned as Mr. Grant's successor in the Government of Bengal, while Mr. Ritchie, the Advocate-general of Calcutta, has accepted the appointment of legal member of the Governor-general's Council.

Cholera is reported as raging fearfully at Cabul, the mortality amounting to three hundred cases daily. However, the Ameer has requested Quazee Moolla Khan to "kindly pray for the disappearance of the dreadful sickness."

The new organisation of the Artillery will be found in another part of this paper, together with a nominal roll of lieutenant-colonels and majors, with the annuities to which each is entitled. The Amalgamation Cate-chism is also continued to the 123rd Answer; and some of our readers may feel interested in the list of officers who have volunteered for the Staff Corps, which has been specially compiled for this journal.

In last Friday's Gazette notice was given that the rolls of unpaid shares of Donation Batta, due to officers and seamen of the Indian Navy, who served with the Expedition to Persia in 1856-57, have been received from India. The shares of those officers and seamen who are entitled to the same have been in course of payment in the Accountant-General's department of the India Office since Tuesday, the 19th inst.

THE LATE M. SCHLAGENTWEIT.—Lord W. Hay, Deputy Commissioner of Simla, has recovered the Journal of Adolphe Schlagentweit, the traveller who was murdered at Kashgar. When at Leh last August, Lord W. Hay was accosted by one Mirza Abdool Wudud, of Herat, who told him that, in a carayan expected shortly from Yarkund, there was a parcel to his address, containing a manuscript book, which belonged to the gentleman who was put to death at Kashgar, as well as what he fully believed to be his skull. The Mirza was despatched, found the caravan eight days' journey from Leh, and bought the MSS. for 6 gold mohurs worth Rs. 17 each. He had heard, when at Bokhara, of the existence of a book which a snuff-dealer had bought for the sake of the paper, and sold again for a rupee. The Mirza being told by a cultivator that after Schlagentweit's death, his "head was first suspended over a bridge, and then placed in a tree, under which he happened to grow melons, and that he buried it in his field, dug up the ground, which was then covered with snow at the spot indicated, and found rusted with this work endeavoured to bind Mr. the present month.

a skull." Lord W. Hay, however, is not very confident that this is the skull. The book, which has been sent to the writer's brothers, contains one hundred and thirty-one pages of notes in German, from 14th June to 11th August. The Mirza has received from Government Rs. 500. The following description is given of Mr. Schlagentweit's murder:-" On arriving near the City of Yarkund. Mr. Schlagentweit found it closely beseiged by a robber chief or crescentader of Kokand, named Dilla Khan. By this man Mr. Schlagentweit was made a prisoner. Almost immediately after Dilla Khan was compelled by the Chinese to fall back on Kashgar, also a Chinese town, but which had been occupied by another crescentader of Kokand named Khoja Vulli Khan. Mr. Schlagentweit continued a prisoner in the hands of Dilla Khan and was brought to Kashgar. On reaching a spot not more than two hundred yards from the tents of the Khoja Vulli Khan, one of Mr. Schlagentweit's guard went to inquire of him what was to be done with the 'Feringhee.' The Khoja, who is described to be a man of infamous character, at once ordered his execution. The persons en-

The Khoja was soon after driven out of Kashgar by the Chinese, and is now wandering about a miserable drunkard without a single follower."-Friend of MR. CECH. BEADON will succeed Mr. J. P. Grant in the Government of Bengal, although the Eng. lishman says Lord Canning would have preferred to put Mr. Edmondstone in that uneasy seat of honour. Our contemporary adds:—"By an early mail another of our more prominent civilians goes home to refit and repair damages, physical and political, so far as possible. #### AMALGAMATION.

EXPLANATION OF DOUBTFUL POINTS IN THE AMALGAMATION ORDER OF 10TH APRIL.

Fort William, 11th Oct.: His Excellency the Governor-general in Council directs the publication of the subjoined Questions on subjects of general interest, and the Answers given by Government, in continuation of those published in Government General Order, No. 833, of the 17th of September, 1861:-

Question 114. With reference to the reply to Question 83, published in Government General Order No. 681, in which it is stated that "all authorised leave" will reckon towards promotion under the Staff Warrant, inquiry is made if by "authorised leave only two years in twenty, &c. is intended? The Officer has had only about one year and three-quarters' leave in sixteen years' service; but sickness may send him home. Suppose, under the circumstances, he was obliged to spend eighteen months at home, would all in excess of two years count against him for his promotion to a Majority? If it would not count against him for promotion, what is intended by the term "authorised leave?"

Answer 114. No leave except privilege leave is to reckon towards promotion, except in the case of Lieutenant-Colonels. See Despatch from Secretary of State No. 315, published in General Order No. 824, dated 17th September, 1861. The answer to question 83, in which these words occur, has been cancelled by the Despatch above quoted.

Q. 115. An Officer left India, having com pleted ten years' service on the 9th of March 1857, on furlough to England for three years on private affairs. Ordered to return before the expiration of his furlough on account of the mutiny, he left England on the 2nd July, 1858, in charge of Recruits; he has thus only had one year, three months and twenty-three days of his furlough. As all Officers joining the Staff Corps are compelled to take the new Furlough Regulations, he wishes to know how he should be situated as regards the unexpired portion of his furlough, whether he shall be permitted to take it, or whether he shall be allowed the difference only between the time he has already had and the two years to which Officers who have completed ten years' service in India are entitled under the new Furlough Regulations?

A. 115. He will be allowed to take such portion of the unexpired period of his furlough as will make his absence equal to the time allowed by the Furlough Rules.

Q. 116. Will an Officer of Artillery, having volunteered for General Service, and having already declared for the old Furlough Regulations. be bound to take leave under the new Furlough Regulations, in consequence of declaration for General Service?

A. 116. No, he will retain the Rules he has elected.

Q. 117. With reference to the answer to Question 15, published in Government General Order, 9th July, 1861, No. 598, whether Artillery Officers electing to serve out of India, under the provisions of the Government General Order, 10th of April, 1861, No. 332, para. 30, will be allowed to succeed by seniority to the receipt of Colonel's allowance in the Indian Artillery?

A. 117. Yes, their promotion in their own Corps is not affected by their volunteering for General Service.

O. 118. By Government General Order, No. 332, there is no rank recognised in the Staff Corps between that of General Officer on Rupees 1,295 a month, and Lieutenant Colonel on Rupees 827-14-0, but that of Brevet Colonel, the pay of which is the same as that of Lieutenant-Colonel. The Bombay Government ask whether an Officer of the Staff Corps, not being a General Officer, on obtaining the Colonel's allowance, would receive only Lieutenant-Colonel's pay, with Colonel's notwithstanding that there is no substantive rank | the blessings of English rule, able now to peruze of Colonel in the Staff Corps?

A. 118. No instructions have been received from the Secretary of State respecting Colonel's allowances in the Staff Corps.

Q. 119. Supposing an Ensign of the General List Volunteers for General Service, but is not posted to one of these new Regiments now being raised, what will become of him?

A. 119. He will be available for general duty.

like all other Local Officers.

Q. 120. Supposing an Ensign on the General List remain "with the Locals," will he be posted to the Cadre of some Corps and get his promotion in that Corps; or will he get his promotion by the General List?

A. 120. No, he will not be posted to any regiment. His promotion will continue as at present.

Q. 121. Can an Officer of the Staff Corps, not entitled to his furlough, obtain six months' leave of absence to England on urgent private affairs without pay and allowance, retaining his appointment?

A. 121. Government may grant such leave, on being satisfied of the urgency of the case.

Q. 122. In paragraph seven of a Military Letter, No. 296 of 1861, published in Government General Order, No. 799 of 10th September, 1861, the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for India is pleased to declare, in the case of an officer who had elected the old Furlough Regulations, that his service for pension should reckon under the old rules until he joined the Staff Corps, but that after that date he would be under the operation of the new Furlough Rules, as laid down in the General Orders, 10th April, 1861 (93). Up to the period of joining the Staff Corps, an officer had not elected to be under the new Furlough Rules,-can he claim therefore to reckon his service for pension under the old rules until he joined the Staff Corps, or from the 1st May, 1838, the date on which he arrived at the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal, to the 18th February, 1861, the date from which he ranks in the Staff Corps, being a period of twenty-two vears and nine months and eighteen days; a period of eight months and eight days, or from the 8th May, 1854, to the 16th January, 1855, having been passed on leave in India on Sick Certificate, and which under the old rules counts as service?

N. B. Under Rule 1 of Government General Order No. 1,150 of 1854, or the new Furlough Regulations, this Officer had the right of retaining the advantage of the old Regulations, but has had no opportunity of making a declaration to that effect, not having taken leave since they were promulgated, though he was on leave under the old Rules when they were promulgated.

A. 122. All leave which under the old Rules was allowed to reckon as service will so reckon with an Officer who joins the Staff Corps, without having previously elected to be under the new Furlough Rules.

Q. 123. Is an Officer considered to have joined the Staff Corps from date of sending in his Roll, or from date of the Royal Warrant forming it; or if he joins this Corps on 1st October, shall he be considered to have been on the old Regulations to that date?

A. 123. Officers are considered to have joined the Staff Corps from the 18th February, 1861. If an Officer be on leave under the old Furlough Regulations at the time of joining the Staff Corps, on the 1st of October, for instance, he will be considered entitled to the benefit of the old Regulations till such leave expires. But an Officer not actually on leave at the time of admission to the Staff Corps will be under the new Furlough Rules from the 18th of February, 1861.

LORD DALHOUSIE'S PROVINCES. If a stranger would judge correctly of the benefits conferred on India by the British Government, and if he would study in detail the machinery of administration and its effects in elevating the condition of the people, let him look at the small palatinates which have been added to our dominions within the last ten years. Were the great statesman, who extended to so many allowance or Colonel's pay as well as allowance, new provinces, to so many millions of people, two wealthiest were more affected by the mutiny the reports which picture the results of their government during the past year, he would find in them the noblest monument to his memory, the most convincing vindication of his policy. While the older provinces, burdened by regulations and impeded by their very extent, have in them little to attract beyond a slow and continued growth in prosperity, we see civilisation at work in Lord Dal. housie's acquisitions of the Punjab, Pegu, the Hyderabad Assigned Districts, Nagpore, and Oude. By what are almost leaps in progress, the population increases, the cultivation extends, violent crime is extinguished, schools spring up, a desire for accumulation rises, agriculture improves, and while the revenues grow the expenditure is reduced, so that annexation not only civilises but pays. These, too, are the provinces from which the best officers are selected, and which form the best training schools for administrators. While in the settled Presidencies even the ablest intellects, not in the secretariat or the council, are apt to go to sleep, lulled by the opiate of routine and want of responsibility, in the non-regulation districts administrators feel they have a career, civilians come into competition with military men, and do not always get the best of it, and a rivalry between divisions of the same province and between the separate provinces springs up of a most healthy character. In the new palatinates officials come really into contact with the people, in the old provinces they can be approached only through the ring fence of corrupt native underlings, who sell justice to the rich, oppress the poor, and too often make the English stink in the postrils of their subjects. The tents of a district officer on his tour in the Punjab, or Pegu, are a sign which summons the villagers to flock to his presence; in Bengal they but scare off the peasantry, whom a long course of experience has taught to associate extortion with a magistrate and his following. The Administration Reports for 1860-61 enable us to show, at a glance, the ratio of progress of the provinces acquired during the last ten years, and their value to the empire. We regret that it is impossible to place before our readers a comparative statement of all the non-regulation provinces. In addition to those which we give below there are Arracan, Assam, and Chota Nagpore, subject to the Bengal Government, and Sind, administered from Bombay. Their results are always, unfortunately, incorporated with those of the presidencies, in which they are lost. We say unfortunately, for it is desirable to see if they pay their expenses, to watch the progress of English settlers in Assam, the civilisation of the Coles of Chota Nagpore, and the growing trade of Sind, with its rising port, Kurrachee. It would be interesting, too, to compare the progress of such an island as Ceylon, which enjoys self-government and colonial supervision, with that of provinces so similar to it in extent, population, and capabilities as Pegu, Assam, and Sind. We know that in Arracan, however, the revenue has risen during the past year to £176,477, an increase of £26,464 over its predecessor. In the other old acquisition of Tenasserim, the revenue has risen from upwards of ten lakhs in 1855-56 to nearly eighteen and a half last year; while in both there has been a large reduction in civil and military expenditure.

	Square Miles.	Population.	Revenue in 1856-57.	Revenue in 1860-61.
BRITISH INDIA (excluding the Straits)	976,218	140,572,739	£ 33,499,980	£ 41,294,595

These five provinces, annexed by Lord Dalhousie, are equal to a fourth of the whole area of India, have a fifth of its population, and contribute nearly a seventh of its revenue. Though the than any other part of the Empire, the revenues of the whole have increased since its outbreak more than a million and a quarter sterling. Each has greater capacities of development, and promises a richer future than any other part of India. The Assigned Districts of East and West Berar and Nagpore are the finest cotton fields They are pierced on the west by in the world. railways, on the east by the Godavery, while in a few years they will be covered with a network of roads which Bengal sighs for in vain. Pegu needs only labour, which is annually increasing, to be a paradise. Oude is a virgin province which the oppression of half a century has not been able to injure. The Punjab, inhabited by the most progressive race in Asia, needs only a continuance of peace to become one of the principal exporters of flax. wheat and tea, while its rivers and railway must yet form the great highways of Central Asian All are yet in their infancy, an infancy rocked in the cradle of war and mutiny, and even yet threatened by the recurrence of these evils, but free from the anarchy and oppression of native tyrants and nourished by the blessings of English rule. When, fifty years hence, the elaborate journals of Lord Dalhousie are given to the world, what a commentary on them will be found in the state of the Punjab, Pegu, Berar, Nagpore, and Oude, if peace allows these pro-vinces to grow at even half their past rate of prosperity .- Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Drainage of Calcutta.—The discussion on the drainage of Calcutta has advanced a stage by the decision of the Lieutenant-governor, that the sewage is to be drained into the Salt-water Lake. For this a large supply of water will be necessary. Why not revert to the old scheme of opening out a connection between the Hooghly and the head of the lake, and thence obtaining a supply of water to flush the lake itself into the river a hundred miles down? Otherwise Calcutta will assuredly be poisoned. Mr. Clark is congratulated on the progress he has made in the difficult task of constructing deep sewers. Mr. Clark shows great energy; it remains to be seen if it is not misdirected, and this only the completion of the main sewer will help to prove.

BLOWING HOT AND COLD .- A correspondent of the Hills applied to the Punjab Government for information as to the sale of waste lands in Kangra. He was told the Government had no such lands at their disposal. This is only too true under the late wretched settlement, but what of Sir R. Montgomery's promise to correct the evil, made in the last Administration Report? The writer says—"During my journey in the Kangra valley, I also asked the Zemindars if they would sell me any land, when they all assured me that they could not, as the commissioner had several times ordered them not to sell their lands to Europeans. One Zemindar-the lumberdar of a village, who assisted me in crossing the rapid stream near Bawarnah-told me that the commissioner had told him not to part with any land, as the man that would sell his land would sell his mother '-these were the exact words used and added 'that if any man sold his lands he (the commissioner) would sell his house for him.' "

Ganges Steam Company.—During the half year ending 30th of June, the gross earnings of the Ganges Steam Company's vessels were Rs. 2,07,822-11-6, and the net profits Rs. 30,435-10-6, or nearly 11 per cent. per annum. The results, considering the state of the river and the depression in trade, are stated to be better than were anticipated. A dividend of 10 per cent. was declared.

Honorary Assistant Magistrates. — In Burdwan: Maha Rajah Deeraj Mahtab Chund Bahadoor, Mr. Alexander S. Sawyers and Baboo Hitlall Missra. In Beerbhoom: Messrs. C. J. Hampton and H. Rait. In Howrah: Messrs. David Cowie, Lingard Stokes and Walter H. Pringle.

WHAT IS TRUTH?-The General Order of 10th October last, issued by the Military Department, giving the Secretary of State's interpretation of Article 9 of the Royal Warrant, has taken by surprise many officers who, in their honest simplicity, putting undue faith in the literal meaning of the language employed in her Majesty's name, were induced thereby to enter the staff corps. They now discover too late, to their dismay, that the words of the warrant contain a hidden signification, the very reverse of what they apparently bear, and which Sir C. Wood has, somewhat late in the day, at length taken some pains to explain. The ipsissima verba of the warrant are as follows: "Officers of her Majesty's Indian forces joining the staff corps will be entitled to pensions under regulations of the Indian service." Now, on turning to the said regulations, we find that all officers, after a service in India of twenty-two years, are entitled to retire on the pension of their substantive rank. The natural and legitimate inference surely was, that an officer who might obtain the rank of major or lieutenant-colonel in the staff corps, would be allowed to retire on the pension of such rank after twenty-two years' service, if he chose to take advantage of the old regulations on the subject. But in the General Order above alluded to, Sir C. Wood denies that anything of the kind was ever intended, and declares that "it cannot be conceded that officers shall be entitled to claim the pension according to rank, in respect of rank obtained in the staff corps.' Now, here is an evident contradiction in words, and it may be fairly questioned whether even so great an autocrat as Sir Charles Wood has the power of thus imposing an arbitrary interpretation of his own on her Majesty's very plain and honest looking English, as set forth in the Royal Warrant, for the information and guidance of Indian officers, on a matter so seriously affecting their future fortunes; whether, in short, in so acting, the Secretary of State for India has not invaded the prerogative of his Royal mistress and cast discredit on her sovereign pledge and queenly word of honour. Are we not justified in considering this decision of Sir C. Wood as a downright violation of the amalgamation guarantee, and as depriving the officers of the staff corps of a right which was secured to them in the plainest language by Article 9 of the Royal Warrant? We pause for a reply.-Friend of India.

THE NEW LEGAL MEMBER OF COUNCIL. (Friend of India) are informed that Mr. Ritchie, the Advocate General of Calcutta, has accepted the appointment of legal member of the Governor General's Council, the office created by a recent Act, to which he was nominated by Sir Charles Wood. He will thus sacrifice a practice, large even for an Indian barrister, for an office of much dignity and usefulness. The two new judgeships, which, it is expected, will be created in the amalgamated High Court, will probably be filled by barristers from England. Charles Jackson's departure another Puisne judgeship will be vacant. What with these judgeships, the office of Advocate General, and the clerkships of the new Legislative Councils, there have never been so many prizes within the grasp of the leading men at the Anglo-Indian bar.

PREVENTIVE MEASURES .- The Hills draws attention to the buoyancy of character which prevents the British in India from adopting preventive measures against mutiny, famine, and cholera, and recommends as a safeguard against future famines the establishment of a chain of granaries throughout the country. They should contain a supply of grain proportionate to the surrounding population; the grain should be sold annually, so as never to have any in store more than twelve months old; the granaries should be made over to the charge of a native citizen or villager, elected by the people in order to ensure their confidence. This suggestion is certainly a more directly practical one than the establishment of a famine fund, but the only wise preventive of famines is irrigation and good government.

THE CIVIL SERVICE is roused to the assertion would soon rise on the land. H of its rights and the defence of its funds. Acting Puja for fame should leave this na on our representations, a committee has been betake himself to some wider path."

formed in Calcutta, consisting meanwhile of Mr. W. Grey, the Home Secretary; Mr. Schalch, the commissioner of Nuddea; Mr. Sandeman, the civil paymaster; and also of Mr. C. U. Aitchison, foreign under secretary, and Mr. J. Monroe, Bengal under secretary, representing the compe-tition civilians. We believe the other members of the service will be addressed individually by these gentlemen, with a view to engage the services of a professional actuary in England to calculate the loss inflicted by the recent Act. With the accurate and irrefragable conclusions to which he may come, the service will be able to go upshall we say successfully?-to Sir Charles Wood, and remind him of his promise of compensation. Now that the service has been opened, it is our duty to see that private rights are not ignored, and a most solemn covenant broken.—Friend of India.

INDIGO CULTIVATION .- Mr. Hills writes to the Englishman in defence of the course he has adopted with reference to his indigo business. He shows that the price he has offered the ryots is not too high for his own interest, because his concerns produce a larger quantity of dye than most others in Bengal. He submits tabular statements to show that in the Neechindipore concern the produce, on an average of twelve years, was over nine maunds of dye per one thousand bundles of plant. The usual yield is about five maunds. He calculates that at eight annas a bundle, after providing for all charges, interest, and commission, a yield of two lacs of bundles will leave a profit of Rs. 78,430 to the planters. He says his object in communicating with Government was to get the executive officers to erase from the minds of the ryots the impression that Government was opposed to the growing of indigo. He thus concludes :- "I have lost heavily, and I fear by the mistaken policy of the Government; but still it is but just to state that every application I have made to his honour, the Lieutenant-governor, has been promptly attended to and complied with. It is affirmed that his honour will throw obstacles in my way, and will not allow me to collect my enhanced rents. My answer to this is. I don't believe it."

A LENIENT SENTENCE.-The Bengal Sudder Court has sentenced to transportation for life three of the actors in the murder of Prince Mohammed Kootoob-ood-deen, of the Mysore family. Two confessed that they took an active part in the murder, by holding the right arm of deceased while the blows were being inflicted with the chopper. The third, who was the highest of the deceased's servants, was condemned on strong circumstantial evidence. The Sudder blame the Deputy Magistrate, Moulvie Abdool Luteef, and the Judge, Mr. E. Lautour, for mis-managing the case. Had they offered the first prisoner, Kureem Buksh, a pardon on condition of full confession, all the principal actors in this atrocious murder, some of whom it is to be feared, from the course which has been adopted, are beyond the reach of justice, would have paid the full penalty of their crimes. The Sudder regret that by this mild sentence, which alone it has been able to pass, it has failed to reach and punish adequately all the actual perpetrators of this atrocious crime.

MAKING WIDE THE PHYLACTERIES. -Bengali Paridarshak, we are glad to see, declares against idolatry. "In Bengal three sorts of people engage in the Durga Puja with three There are some people who different motives. engage in the Puja through the influence of real faith, and with the desire of presenting flowers to the lotus feet of the goddess Bhagabati. There are others who make Puja simply on account of the festivities, the jatras and panchalis, connected with it. And there are others still who are influenced merely by the desire of popularity. To the first class of people we have nothing at present to say; but those who make Puja merely for amusement or for applause cannot, in our opinion, be called wise men. If the money spent in the Puja were devoted to the promotion of some beneficent object, the moon of prosperity would soon rise on the land. He who makes Puja for fame should leave this narrow way, and CASH BALANCES .- The Calcutta Gazette publishes the state of the cash balances on the close of August last:-August, 1859, Rs. 12,66,24,362; August, 1860, Rs. 14,88,05,272; August, 1861, Rs. 15,52,81,858. They have gone down in the month nearly a million, having stood in July at Rs. 16,23,82,143. For purposes of comparison, the state of the balances the previous month should be always added.

THE REASON WHY .- The Indian Reformer quotes from a native journal published in Dacca the Dhaka Prakasha, the alleged causes of the present alienation between natives and Europeans :- "The contempt with which Anglo-Indians, looking upon themselves as conquerors, treat the natives as a conquered race; the discussions concerning the Black Acts: the mutiny of 1857; the imposition of the Income-tax; the discussions concerning the Arms Act; the oppression of the indigo planters; the virulent language of the indigo editors; and the national insult offered by Sir Mordaunt Wells." Most of these may be reduced to one-the unseasonable and objectless persistence of some members of the Government in declaiming on the equality theory and, even more than this, caste.

CURE FOR CHOLERA .- Dr. Sutherland, of Patna has reported on the cholers that appeared among the inmates of the Lunatic Asylum in August and September last. The remedy he tried was the injection of chlorate of potash beneath the skin of the chest and arms. This increases the force and frequency of the pulse. Injection into the veins is doubtful and dangerous. He believes that this treatment will not succeed in bad cases with collapse; it saved the lives of some of the feeble and cachectic insanes; but no class of cases could be less favourable for such experiments. Out of seven cases in which the remedy was fairly tried in August, two died: they were feeble and emanciated old men. The remaining five were all dangerous cases, and they all recovered. The Doctor admits the disadvantages occasionally attending this treatment, and draws attention to it as a subject in which further investigation may lead to valuable results.

COTTON IN THE RAICHORE DOAB .- The Englishman contains a paper on the cultivation of cotton in the Raichore Doab and the adjoining districts. The three varieties of foreign cotton. New Orleans, Sea Island, and American, have scarcely had a fair trial in that quarter. The indigenous cotton is of two kinds, "bunsee" and The former is the best kind. Exotic cotton is gathered by the farmers and their families, or by hired labourers, who receive so much per day in money. The indigenous cotton is paid for in kind generally, according to the quantity gathered. Statistical statements attached to the paper show that at present cotton does not offer advantages over other crops. One beegah of cotton costs, for cultivation, tax, &c., Rs. 34, and yields from Rs. 30 to Rs. 45. If the labour and cattle employed are the ryot's own he profits by the cultivation; but if he borrows or hires them he derives little or no advantage. Three beegahs of toor cost Rs. 20-9 and yield Rs. 24-11 Three beegahs of Jowaree cost Rs. 24-10 and yield Rs. 29. Wheat and linseed cost Rs. 24-2 and yield Rs. 28, chenna and lak cost Rs. 22-6 and vield . Rs. 25-12. The writer goes on to say that the disinclination to grow a large quantity of cotton is owing to the crop not being sufficiently remunerative, and also to the fact that in the case of all grain crops the husks or the stalks are available as forage for cattle. There are so few Europeans in Berar, and the neighbouring cotton districts, that information on the cultivation is not easily obtained, and the smallest contributions are valuable as long as they deal with facts.

Another Bank Fraud has come to light in Calcutta. On the 4th October, C. J. Ross, cashier of the People's Bank, was brought before Mr. Hume, on a charge of appropriating Rs. 1,200, belonging to the bank. It appears that Ross gets Rs. 50 a month from the bank, on which he said he could not live, and was obliged to use the money that passed through his hands. The mentioned that the bank kept accounts with all | try, and follow the avocation of goldsmiths? the banks in Calcutta, and that at the end of each day the cashier balanced his accounts and made over to him the key of the cash chests, with a rough memorandum of its contents. He did not. as a rule, check this memorandum with the cash. Three particular cases were adduced in which money paid in by constituents was not accounted The prisoner reserved his defence, and the case was adjourned till after the holidays.

THE INVESTITURE AT ALLAHABAD.—So far as is yet known, the only chiefs who will be present at Allahabad on the 1st of November next, for investiture with the insignia of the Star of India, will be those of Gwalior, Puttialla, Rampore, and Bhopal. The robes of the Grand Master and of the Secretary of the Order, Colonel Durand, having arrived, the spectacle will be more imposing than that in Government House, Calcutta; while the gathering of these great feudatories, with all the pomp of Oriental magnificence, will make the occasion historic. There will, we believe, be no public durbars on the occasion of this, Lord Canning's last visit to the North-Western Provinces, but private visits of ceremony, and presents, will be interchanged. On his return, and subsequent departure for Rangoon, the Governor-general will not be absent from Calcutta more than a month, so that it is extremely doubtful if he will have time to visit Singapore, or even Port Blair. An effort to do so, however, will be made. The Feroze will leave for Suez in the last week of December, to await the arrival of the Earl of Elgin .- Friend of

A BENGALEE "QUARTERLY."-The first number of an original Bengalee Quarterly Review is to be issued on the 1st of January next, under the editorship of Baboo Bhoodeb Mookerjea, head master of the Hoogly Normal School. The Baboo is well fitted for the duty, being both modest and scholarly. We trust men like Vidyasagur and the Mittres will assist, as as educated Native Christians.

AGRA JAIL.—Agra has the honour of possess ing the most populous jail in the province, except Benares. The latter contained 1,137 prisoners and a half, on the average of the year, and the former 947 and three quarters. In the Agra jail there were 140 deaths. The jail expenditure was Rs. 53,479, of which the out-turn of manufactures realised 32,250. In the whole province, which contains forty jails, the expenditure was Rs. 5,46,866, and the receipts 96,162. The whole number of prisoners was 13,452.

NEPAUL, Sept. 30.—The ninety-third anniversary of the Goorkhalie conquest of Nepaul was celebrated on the 13th, and the king, at ten o'clock at night, sat on the throne, under a royal salute of twenty-one guns. On this occasion all the native mahajuns presented him with nuzzurs. Prettue Narain, the founder of the present dynasty, came from Ghoorka, a place three days journey hence, with a band of only four hundred men armed with matchlocks, and fell upon the Newars whilst engaged in their grand Jattra, and so great was their panic, that he broke into the palace and seated himself on the throne without the least opposition. The Newar King fled out of the valley, and the invader found himself master of the capital. Some of his followers having been treacherously slain, he determined to devote the city to plunder, but was appeased by handsome presents from the mahajuns; hence the origin of the custom I have mentioned. Indra Jattra, which is the grand religious festival of the Newars, is celebrated with great pomp. The customs and manners of this people, with their religious rites, bears a great resemblance to those of the Bhooteas. In fact, though professing Hindooism, their priests are Bhuddists; and during this festival of the Indra Jattra" they draw cars in which are placed three little children, whom they look upon as incarnations of Bhudda and the same treatment prevails regarding them as that observed in China with respect to the Grand Lama. These children receive divine honours till they are rendered impure by reason of a masons, &c. The Goorkhalies confine themselves to the profession of arms and farming. The former have hitherto been treated with great injustice and contempt by their conquerors; but since Jung Bahadoor has had the direction of affairs their lot has been greatly ameliorated. They are a very intelligent people and resemble the Bengalee in their characteristics. They are not enlisted as soldiers, but many hold responsible appointments, and rank as colonels and captains. The attention of the Maharajah has recently been drawn to the improvement of the revenue of the country; and he has dismissed all his officers, who, ranking as chow-dries, but in reality natives of Hindoostan, collected the revenues. Many of these, after wholesale peculation, absconded into British territory. In their place he has appointed his own subjects, and as an incentive to honesty, has told them that any short-comings will be severely punished. The things sent for the Exhibition of 1862 from Nepaul, consist of Native manufactures, such as vegetable dyes, earthen pots, &c. We have had a continual drizzling rain during the past week, which no doubt, is the fag end of the rains .- Englishman.

THE OONAO MURDERS .- Something like a clue has been found to the mysterious Oonao murders, which have been so frequent of late. On the 19th of September two young Faqueers, on their way from Furruckabad to Fyzabad, met a man called Madaree, who represented himself as a bunneah. The three travelled together for a while, and at the village of Futteygunge, a few miles from Lucknow, they sat down to smoke. Madaree gave them some suttoo to eat, and then they smoked again, after which they suddenly became insensible. This was in the evening. The chowkedar on his rounds saw the younger man groping about in or near the shed where they had put up for the night. Madaree was still there, and answered the chowkedar's inquiries by saying that they were three holy men, and one of them was a little faint and required fanning. An hour after the chowkedar passed again, and saw the two Faqueers in an insensible state and Madaree gone. He pursued and captured him. Some property found on his person was afterwards shown to belong to the two young men. One of the men died from the effects of the drugs he had taken. The prisoner's house in his native village in Oonao was searched, and some datura and various other herbs and seeds were found in it. The contents of the Faqueer's stomach and some of the suttoo have been sent to Calcutta for examination. Madaree's father and brother are both bad characters.

TESTIMONIAL TO MAJOR G. G. PEARSE .- A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette states that the Native commissioned, non-commissioned officers, and troopers of the late 3rd Sikh Irregular Cavalry, have presented a piece of plate of tho value of 1,000 rupees to Major George Godfrey Pearse, their commandant, in testimony of the high esteem and respect which they entertained for him. Major Pearse, under orders from Sir John Lawrence in December, 1857, raised the regiment at Kanoude in the Jhujjur territory within the short period of a month, and led it in many a glorious action. It was, during its short existence, present in thirty-two battles and sieges. In this regiment Lieutenant Aikman won his Victoria Cross, and a great number of the men their Orders of Valour, for conspicuous bravery.

JEYPORE, Oct. 5 .- I have just heard in the city that the Political Agent, Lieutenant Colonel Brooke, has succeeded in the arrest at Scinde of that scoundrel Moghul Beg, charged with the murder of the Rev. Mr. and Miss Jennings at Delhi in 1857. I hear he would have been arrested some days ago at Jodhpore in Marwar, (where he is said to have an extensive circle of relations and friends), had not the Jodhpore officials stopped and taken the perwanals from the approvers; however, I hope the Political Agent of Jodhpore will not fail to take steps to prevent a repetition of such serious acts. I also manager of the bank was examined. He expected has been detected. He The Newars are the only workmen of the council also been arrested; some say his name is Goolzar, others say Gallizar, a son of the Goormukteesur | tion now devolving on every landholder to keep Something tells me that the Political Agent of Jeypore will also succeed in the arrest of the Shahzadah Feroze Shah. Pundit Sheodeen is determined to reward the person who arrested Moghul, and is on the look out for others .- Delhi Gazette.

THE CHUNAR INVALIDS .- Now that the station has been desolated, and all the pleasant things of the old pensioners laid waste, they have become more attached to the old place than ever, and recall the wish they once expressed to be removed to the healthy stations of the Himalayas, while the young men among the invalids prefer England. Like their brethren of Chelsea, many of the Chunar Pensioners are tied to the station. many more are gregarious, fond of one another's society, and wedded to old habits. They speak of their "village," their chapel where the best of them for years have held their week-day prayermeeting, and the cottages with their verandahs in which they have so long sat smoking and fighting all their battles o'er again, with somewhat of the same affection that the emigrant feels for the old scenes he may never see again. All this may be true, and we would be the last rudely to wrench asunder old associations. But now that the amalgamation of the armies is complete, something must be done with the Invalid and Pension Establishment. It is inexpedient to continue it at Chunar. It is folly to waste the money now contributed on a spot which must sooner or later be abandoned. The old people, once transferred to the Himalayas, will renew their youth, and find in the rosy cheeks of their grandchildren, and in the return to the healthy pursuits of their own youth in a bracing climate, more than a reward for the temporary pain of breaking asunder an old tie. The utterly materialistic life of an old pensioner or invalid on the plains will be exchanged for the invigorating and ennobling pursuits of a military colonist in the Hills. This is but part of the wider question we have so often discussed, and the settlement of which Government cannot afford longer to postpone. What is to be done with the invalids of an army of 70,000 men? Are they always to be sent to England at a great expense, when in the Hills the value of each man to the State and to himself would be doubled? Let Sir Robert Napier answer. We would remind him of the efforts of his predecessor, Sir James Outram, to raise the spiritual, moral, and physicial position of the English soldier in India .- Friend of India.

MURREE, Oct. 6 .- The station is thinning fast. Major Johnstone's survey has already left for Jhujjur. The Lieutenant-governor leaves on the 17th, and proceeds as far as Delhi. It is uncertain whether he will go to Sealkote to invest the Jummoo Rajah with the Star of India. Some persons declare that he will entrust the duty to Mr. Prinsep, the Officiating Commissioner. Mr. McLeod, the Financial Commissioner, will return to Lahore on or about the 20th, and will be followed by Colonel Maclagan, the chief engineer, and Mr. Saunders, the postmaster-general. suppose you have heard that a bank is to be established at Rawul Pindee, with branches at Peshawur and Mooltan? The provisional committee have offered the managership to Mr. C. E. Herbert, the agent to the Simlah Bank. It is believed that eventually the Government treasuries at the three places above-named will be made over to the new bank. Lots of changes are anticipated. New districts to be formed; old ones to be abolished; defunct jails to be resusci tated; and Keranies to be classified and gazetted; native deposition writers to be sent adrift chowkedars of villages to go the same way. In fact, the Punjab is in a pretty state of bouleverse ment; and I dare say that, what with the new police, and the honorary police, and no police. our gubernatorial Proteus will soon realise the summum bonum of his wishes .- Delhi Gazette.

NAGPORE.—The district is perfectly quiet. The cholera, which was raging fearfully in the Godavery districts, has abated its fury. Every landed proprietor has been called upon by the authorities to contribute one per cent. to the Road Fund. This assessment is in commutation of the obliga- | remark.

the roads passing through his estates in proper order. It has attracted the attention of our commissioner, that the zemindars between the coast and the cotton growing districts of Nagpore are levving illegal tolls from the rvots. Measures have been adopted to remedy this evil.

DALHOUSIE INSTITUTE.—At the last meeting of the Council of the Dalhousie Institute, Captain Price, the civil architect, presented a modified design for the new building, estimated to cost not more than Rs. 1,50,000. The architecture of the proposed institute is of a simple, unpretending style, but well adapted for the climate and its intended purposes; and it is, on the whole, in our judgment, as good a building as could be got for the money. It contains a large centre hall, the internal dimensions being seventy-eight feet in length by forty-five in breadth, and round this runs a corridor, twelve feet wide. There can be no reason to doubt but that the hall and corridor will easily contain any audience that can be got together in Calcutta, even for the best purpose. The plan has been submitted to the Governorgeneral, and has met with his approval, though the site of the building and the proposed area of grant have not yet been absolutely determined. The affair altogether has been a long time dragging its slow length along, but there is now some little chance of the hope that his Excellency, the present Viceroy, may lay the first stone before his departure being eventually realised.

Indigo.—The Hurkaru publishes the names of some forty indigo factories in Lower Bengal, the capital invested in which, it tells us, amounts to Rs. 95.20,000, or a little below a million sterling. In a contiguous column it gives what it calls "the loss of each of the factories in the season of 1860-61," amounting, in the aggregate, to Rs. 17,07,000. The total production of all the factories of Bengal, Tirhoot, and the North-West, is about 100,000 maunds a-year, of a value upon the spot of something below £2,000,000 sterling annually, and it is, we believe, an extreme estimate of the amount of fixed capital engaged in the manufacture, if we suppose it to be £1,500,000, which will include native capital invested therein, as well as European. How large a proportion of this fixed capital has been unproductive during the year may be readily calculated from the fact that the crop is estimated at 60,000 maunds; although the season has been most unfavourable, owing to the heavy rains. As the average produce of the last few years, therefore, has been 100,000 maunds, and the yield of the present year is no more than 60,000, we may presume (making allowance for the nature of the season), that onefourth of the factories have suspended operations in Lower Bengal; representing a fixed capital of about £400,000, magnified by the Hurkaru to £1,000,000. So, again, when we come to inquire into the so-called loss of £17,07,000, we find it dwindle down into the loss of interest upon the capital invested in the factories and their depreciation. If we estimate the loss from both causes at twenty per cent., the total damage sustained by the planters hitherto would be covered by the sum of £100,000,-Times of India.

PREMATURE RESURRECTION .- A curious incident occurred recently at Rutlam, in Central India. A young man of the Bunia caste took ill of fever, and after three or four days fell into a swoon. His friends, thinking him dead, carried him off to a funeral pyre to be burnt, as usual. The fresh air and the motion appeared to have revived him, for when he arrived at the place he began to talk, asking the people why they had brought him there. They were afraid of him, and his own relatives refused to remove him to his home. Presently the swoon came on again. and while under its influence he was placed on the pyre and immolated. When his father was asked why he had not interfered he said, "what could I do when it was self-evident that my son was possessed by the devil." This occurred in the territories of a native prince. The incident is narrated by a correspondent of the Bombay Times of India. This is one of those Ghaut murders which, in Bengal, are too common to excite BROACH AND SURAT. - We learn from the Bombay Presidency that the Collectorates of Broach and Surat have been amalgamated. By this arrangement a considerable saving has been effected to the State, without impairing the general efficiency of the public service. Surat has been made the head quarters, and a Sub-Assistant has been stationed at Broach. By the amalgamation of these collectorates, Mr. A. K. Forbes, the Acting Secretary to that Government, lost his substantive appointment of Collector of Broach, and other subordinate members of the establishment were also thrown out of employment. Mr. Forbes, it is said, until provided with another suitable substantive appointment, will receive out of the saving such a sum as will make up his pay and allowances to their present amount. A few subordinates who were thrown out of employment are to receive a subsistence allowance not exceeding one third of their pay till they can be provided with situations elsewhere.

PHOTOGRAPHS OF NATIVES .- Captain Nightingale, executive engineer, was expected at Luck-now on the 19th of October, to perform the arduous duty of taking the photographic likenesses of some of the most rare (ugly and handsome) men in the Oude district, for the Governor-general. The men did not like the idea of the likenesses of their ladies being taken; they declined in the most polite manner, by saying, "what will the Queen do with the likenesses of their women. when she has such beautiful women as the English ladies to look on?"-Oude Gazette.

Court Martial. - Three officers, Ensign O'Brien, Lieutenant Thorp, 66th Native Infantry, and Lieutenant Grant, are under trial by the court-martial of which Colonel Burroughs is president, now sitting at Barrackpore. The first officer was tried on Monday, the 1st October, and the court was adjourned till Thursday for his defence. It was again adjourned till the 7th, for some testimonials in these cases are very unfavourable.

Punjab, Oct. 2.-An inquiry is now going on elative to the death of Assistant Surgeon Watkins, at midnight, on the 20th August last, while travelling from Dera Ismail Khan to Jhung. At last the Nawab of Bhawalpore has set at liberty the family of his late minister, Ahmed Khan, who was put to the sword by him, and has released his eldest son from confinement. The Soodees or Gooroos, some time since, forwarded a grunth or book to the Secretary of State and received kheluts for the same. They have again prepared a book called Nameek Shahee, which they intend to transmit to England shortly.

CAPTAIN URMSTON has been deputed to form a Committee and proceed to the North side of the great Chumba range, to ascertain if a Sanatarium out of range of the periodical rains can be formed

THE ORIENTAL BANK FORGERY case was proceeded with on the 2nd of October. Several witnesses were brought forward to show that Mr. Andrew D'Cruz, the brother of Mr. E. A. D'Cruz, who is charged with the forgery, was in his office on the day that the cheque was presented at the Bank. He was accordingly discharged. The case was adjourned, owing to Mr. Turnbull not being able to attend from indisposition.

PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT .- With the Calcutta Gazette of the 5th of October is published a tabular statement, showing the expenditure of the Public Works Department under the several local Governments, for the year 1861-62, as sanctioned by the Government of India. The whole estimated expenditure chargeable to the British Government, exclusive of local charges, falls little short of three and three quarter millions sterling, as below specified :- Dishursed in the Public Works Department, £3,408,940; disbursed in the Home Department for Electric Telegraph charges, £65,895; Government outlay for railway control and purchase of land, £200,165. Total British Public Works Expenditure, £3,675,000. Besides this there is an estimated foreign expenditure in Mysore and the Hyderabad assigned districts, chargeable to those provinces, but disbursed by the Public Works Department, amounting to £111,600, making the total amount £3,786,000.

SUICIDE AT GARDEN REACH.—A case of suicide took place on Sunday night, October 10th, the unfortunate man being a Mr. Inglis, son of the late Mr. Hussy Inglis, who owns large property in Sylhet, and whose relations are very well off, but who had for some reasons slighted this young man, who was promised, at his father's death, £500 a year. This was not found in the will; and he had otherwise been treated unkindly, which made him enlist in the 5th Fusiliers. He, after a short time, got tired of soldiering, and bought his discharge, and has since been employed as a reporter for one of the daily papers here, but the treatment he received from his relations so preyed on his mind that he took to drinking, and in that state went to his mother's house and shot himself. He was an inoffensive quiet young man. His death taking place out of the jurisdiction of the coroner, no inquest has been held .- Oudh Gazette.

KHOORDAH.—The Englishman states that the authorities are still actively engaged in endeavouring to discover the murderers of Mr. Wavell, but that there is very little hope of ensuring a conviction. The subdivision in which the crime was committed has, till lately, been left almost entirely uuder Native control. It is spoken of as a favourable example of India in the Dark Ages, and affords, we should imagine, a true and correct picture of a Native's appreciation of his "Political Rights." Even the officials themselves would doubtless be glad to have a little of the "rampant Anglo-Saxon" element among them; and it has been openly said that the presence of a few specimens of that genus would have done much towards saving the district from its present state.

MR. J. S. MEDLICOTT, assistant in the Geological Survey at Simla, has been selected to give effect, in the presidency of Bengal, to the intention of Government signified in their late resolution-namely, that the records of each Government regarding the production of cotton in India should be placed at the disposal of some gentleman able and willing to undertake a careful analysis of their contents, and to publish the result within a reasonable period in a form calculated to be useful, as a guide or hand-book, to persons who may be desirous to embark in cotton undertakings in this country. Such Parliamentary papers and books on the subject as are immediately available have been placed at his disposal. The Governor-general has expressed a hope that he will deal with these at once, so as to be free to come down to Calcutta by the next week. His lordship has desired that he should apply himself continuously to the work until it is completed. It is the intention of the Viceroy to award a grant of Rs. 4,000 from the public revenues for the completion of the work entrusted to Mr. Medlicott.

ALLAHABAD, Oct. 18 .- After several efforts, the Government steamer Juboona and the Governorgeneral's yacht the Soonamooky, have at last made their way up to Allahabad. They had the assistance of the India General Steam Navigation Company's steamer Calcutta when passing through the strong current at Bindachul, between this and Mirzapore, but unfortunately the latter vessel struck against the side of the Soonamooky and caused some damage, which is being repaired as quickly as possible by Major Russell, of the ordnance department. The yacht is very well fitted up, and well worthy of carrying the Viceroy of India. She will lie here till the in stallation business is all over, and will take Lord and Lady Canning down to Calcutta. ghat is full of river steamers just now. Rajmahal will start on her downward passage on Monday. The camp for the troops which are expected here this week, from Jounpore, Cawnpore, and Lucknow, is being pitched on the extensive plain in front of the fort. There is one portion of the camp set aside for the durbar tents. It is not yet known whether Lord Canning will live at Government House during his stay here, or in camp. To provide against the scarcity of provisions his honour the Lieutenantgovernor has called upon the district officers of the neighbouring stations to send in grain and other stores required for the camp. His own middle of November, but he and Sir George Couper will come in to Allahabad on the 25th of this month, and remain here continuously till the Viceroy leaves the station. The Delhi Bank has been a great loser in its building operations at Allahabad. The Manager first built up a small kucha bungalow in the old station for about Rs. 3,500, and then contracted for the building of a fine pucka kotee, to cost Rs. 12,000, in the new station. The former building was constructed in such an unworkmanlike style that the late rains have rendered it quite unfit for habitation. Another heavy shower would have brought it down with a run. The Agent moved out sharp into a vacant neighbouring bungalow, and the Bank is now paying eighty rupees per month as house rent. As for the unfinished roofless kotee in Kutchpoorwa the less said about it the better. The contractor and the manager are both in England, and the sub-contractor who undertook the job has nothing to fear for the next six months at least .- Friend of India.

THE PEOPLE'S PARK .- The Madras Journals state that Sir Charles Wood has asked for detailed information regarding the People's Park, for which Sir Charles Trevelyan was so enthusiastic; and deduce from this the fact that Sir Charles Wood and the late Governor are not very intimate, as the information might have been obtained in London. As it was intended that the park should pay its own expenses, it is more likely Sir Charles Wood simply wishes to have the latest details regarding its progress, with a view to encourage similar movements elsewhere, if it has been successful.

BURMAH.—From Rangoon we (Englishman) hear that the Commissioner, Colonel Phayre, has started on his tour of inspection, from which he is not expected to return till November or Dec. Cotton is still as great a subject of interest in Rangoon as elsewhere. Two convicts managed to effect their escape a few days before the departure of the mail, after murdering the policeman who had charge of them. These men have not yet been recaptured, and great blame has been attached to the convict authorities for allowing two men to leave the main body of convicts with only one peon to look after them. Had the convicts been unarmed, this would not, that perhaps, have signified; but it seems each of them had a sickle to cut grass withthe occupation for which they had been especially told off. The peon was sent to guard them armed with a sword; and as they did not return till the usual hour, search was made for them, when the discovery of the body of the peon lying gashed and bruised in a nullah sufficiently accounted for their absence. We have also received private intelligence from Mandalay, where all is quiet; two or three pigmy attempts at insurrection having been nipped in the bud. The King of Ava has ordered two cargo flats to be built in Calcutta, and has also, with praiseworthy punctuality, remitted the money in advancestyle of doing business we would recommend to all Eastern potentates. These vessels were originally intended for the conveyance of a huge piece of marble weighing about one hundred and forty tons, which has been got out of a quarry some distance off from the city; but they will come in equally useful for the conveyance of the expected HENZADA AND THARAWADDY have been amalgamated. This measure has reduced the number of deputy-commissioners in charge of the districts, and the salaries of the extra assistants; Lieutenant W. C. Plant has been appointed Supernumerary assistant-commissioner.

COLONEL DAVIDSON, resident at Hydrabad, and Captain Fraser, assistant resident, retire from the service before the close of the year.

MILITARY MOVEMENTS .- H.M.'s 60th Rifles is expected to proceed to Bangalore, and Ooctacamund is to have no regiment, but it is to be an Invalid Depot.—H.M.'s 43rd Regiment proceed to Calcutta, and the 102nd Regiment will be located at Madras from Bangalore.

CATTLE SHOW AT NELLORE .- An official report describes the result of a cattle show held at Nellore, on the 24th of June last. It is said to have been successful as compared with former years. Nellore is celebrated for its breed of cows, but none of the best animals appeared at the show. One reason for this was that the natives fear the " evil They keep their children at home from fear of its operations, and employ charms to ward off its influence. The Ryots look upon their cows as part of their family, and will not risk the best of them in a cattle show lest the "evil eye" should fall upon them. Another reason is that, when a native is offered a price for a cow, and refuses to sell, he believes that bad luck will attend the animal ever after. The consequence is that prizes for cattle are awarded to the best that come, though they are much inferior to numbers of animals tied up in the neighbouring fields. Where, then, is the practical utility of the show?

RAILWAY CONTRACT .- The contract for the last section of the railway between Bombay and Jubbulpore has been taken by Colonel Weller, a retired Bengal officer, and Mr. Burns, lately an engineer in the Bombay and Baroda Railway. These gentlemen have both gone up-country to push on the work as rapidly as possible. Their contract allows them three years to complete the line.

THE INDUS FLOTILLA is to be reduced to six steamers and six flats, which will be employed solely for the conveyance up and down river of Government stores and passengers.

THE PAPER MILL AT TARDEO, established some years ago by the Bombay Paper Manufacturing Company, has proved a failure, and the directors have, consequently, resolved upon winding up the concern.

CAPTAIN J. HARPUR, Superintendent of Police at Rutnagherry, and lately acting at Poona in that capacity, during the absence of Lieutenant J. S. Carr, has been appointed commandant of the Goozerat Irregular Horse.

RELIEF ORDERS have been received for the re lief of H.M.'s 83rd Regt., at Belgaum, by H.M.'s 74th Highlanders, from Bellary. The 74th will in all probability arrive at Belgaum in November, when the 83rd will proceed to England, and embark for that purpose in sailing ships at Vin-

FLOGGING BY PROXY.—The Consul-General of Persia on his arrival at the Bombay Presidency issued a Notification desiring all the Persian subjects residing on the island to appeal to him, and not to the British Courts of Justice, for the adjudication of their cases. It appears that soon after the appearance of the Notification, a Persian who had a claim upon a horse dealer of the name of Aga Mahomed Huson, Shirazee, likewise a subject of the Shah of Persia, referred his case to the arbitration of the Consul. This officer sent for Mahomed Huson. Whether or not the man obeyed the summons we know not, but we are informed on good authority that he refused to submit to the arbitration of the Consul, stating that none but the Supreme Court had jurisdiction in the matter. Upon report of the matter the authorities in Persia promptly summoned the father of the refractory Huson from Shiraz, and ordered him to be flogged for the insult offered by his son to the Crown of Persia. The intelligence of this outrage was brought here from Bushire about a month ago.

EVASION OF THE STAMP ACT .- A letter from the Collector of Bombay makes known the fact, that only 15 per cent. of the hoondies paid in this town are stamped. The natives, it seems, systematically evade the Stamp Act, and accept one another's receipts and bills without the slightest regard to the requirements of the law. Government has ordered that half the penalty of conviction, in any such case of defrauding the revenue, shall be given to the informer. The most effectual way to stop such malpractices would be to punish the men who accept the bills; instead of those who draw them on unstamped paper.

BOMBAY VOLUNTEER RIFLES. - Regimental Order by Colonel G. H. Robertson, C.B., and A.D.C. to the Queen. "Bombay, Thursday, 24th October 1860.—In bidding farewell to the members of the Corps with whom he has been pleasantly associated for some months, Colonel Robertson begs to offer to every individual his best thanks for the uniform kindness and consideration he has invariably experienced from one and all. At the distant post Colonel Robertson is about to occupy he will often think of the Volunteers, and it will afford him pleasure to hear of their continued improvement in drill and discipline, and he earnestly trusts that a kindly and a friendly feeling will exist among all ranks, and that the little unpleasantness that was lately exhibited at a general meeting will die out, and that the Bombay Volunteer Rifle Corps, strong in numbers, will, ere the end of this year, be-as Colonel Robertson has always hoped and expected-a credit to this island."

REGIMENTAL MESSES .- The Commander-in-Chief of the Bombay army has decided that officers entering the Staff Corps have no right to demand the breaking up of their regimental mess, and a partition of the proceeds arising from the sale of the establishment. As long as the cadre of any regiment is preserved, the mess will continue to exist, and whatever belongs to it will remain the property of the officers attached to the regiment.

Another Cotton Screw Company has been formed in Bombay. The intention of its founders is to buy up the land to be reclaimed round Mr. Heycock's new bunder at Colaba, and begin operations there, with a view to the future establishment of the Baroda Railway terminus in their vicinity.

EXECUTION OF MAHADIA BHEEL.letter from the Ahmednuggur districts informs the Times of India of the execution of the last of Bhagojee Naik's followers at the village of Nimbgaum Yarly, on the morning of the 17th Oct., in presence of a great concourse of villagers and Bheels. . Mahadia Bheel, the leader of the men who suffered, was a notorious offender, and had been an outlaw since 1857. He originally formed one of Bhagojee Naik's gang, and took part in all the outrages and atrocities perpetrated by them. The night previous to the engagement at Meetsager, in which the Nuggur police, under the command of Captain Souter, exterminated the band, Mahadia had gone off to the village of Panigree, about two miles from Meetsager, to visit his wife, and thus escaped the fate which befel, his companions. It was on the 11th November 1859, that this desperate engagement took places Mahadia subsequently succeeded in collecting few Bheels about him, and last year headed thre gang robberies in the Ahmednuggur Zilla, and then made a detour upon the Tanna collectorate. The property carried off and destroyed during the visit to the Concan was valued at Rs. 35,000. The last act of the gang was the murder of Yessoo Bheel and his wife and child, at the village where the execution for the crime has now taken place. The spies of the police traced the perpetrators into Khandeish, where they were apprehended, a reward of Rs. 500 having been offered for the capture of their leader. We may hope that we have now heard the last of Bheel risings for some time to come. The capture and conviction of these men reflects much credit upon the district police.

MR. GEORGE TAYLOR, Master in Equity, has been recommended for one of the Judgeships in the new amalgamated High Court, to be established at Bombay.

ABOLITION OF COLLOQUIAL EXAMINATIONS .-The military authorities of the Bombay Presidency purpose doing away with what are popularly called "colloquial examinations" in the vernacular languages. Every officer will be required to pass (1) the examination for admission to the Staff, or (2) the examination for an interpretership. Should this resolution be carried out, no officer will be able to hold a company unless he passes the " staff examination" test.

Exports (Bombay, Oct. 28).—Cotton.—There has been very little doing in this market, the shippers considering the high prices now current too risky a speculation, especially when there is much uncertainty as to the future course of the home markets. Wool.—The close of the monsoon and the fresh arrivals of stocks have opened the market for this staple, and parcels as they arrive had ready buyers at our quotations. Oilseeds.—The demand for both Linseed and Rapeseed is firm, and prices are fully maintained; the former is worth Rs. 5-15 on the spot, and for future delivery Rs. 5-9 to 5-12; the latter is quoted at Rs. 6-12 for ready delivery. Sesame is nominally quoted at Rs. 24, for want of demand for shipment. Coffee.—Mocha continues very scarce; a few parcels of inferior qualities which came to hand found ready buyers at Rs. 15-8. Malabir out of stock. Pepper.—Blutteoil his a better inquiry from the native shippers, and is quoted higher. In Malabar very little doing.

labir out of stock. Pepper.—Bhutcoll hiss a better inquiry from the native shippers, and is quoted higher. In Malabar very little doing.

IMPORTS (Bunbay, Oct. 23).—Cotton Piece Goods.—A very moderate amount of business has been done in grey goods, and the prices have undergone little or no change. Bleached Goods are steady in position and value. Shirtings, Madapollams, and Jacconets have undergone little or no change. Dimity looks steady. Mulls—Ordinary, dull; fine, in request. Lappets and Coloured Lappets in demand at previous rates. Lappet Scarfs have some inquiry. Dhooties heavily held, and only saleable at ruinous prices. Cambrics, middling kind, are attracting more attention. Turkey Red Plain Cambric 45 in. 7 to 8 lbs., and Dimity and Twill, and Plain Mull are less inquired for owing to the approach of the holidays. Jacconets, Printed Mulls, and Garments remain dull. Blue, Orange, and White Prints slowly inquired at orimer low rates. Dyed Cambrics in good inquiry. Dyed Mulls are coming into favour. Twist.—For both Mule and Water Twist we have to report a very quict market. In the absence of sales, prices are noninally lower. Coloured Yarin dull and unaltered. Turkey Red Yarin in dull and slow inquiry. Metals.—Copper is rather dull, and prices have a slightly downward tendency. Yellow Metal dul and little inquired for. Iron—British Bars, Nail Rod, Sheet, and Hoop, are dull; Swedish Bars in inquiry, at steady value. Steel, both in tub and faggot, very dull. Lead in demand, but no sales reported. Spelter, steady. Tin Plates, dull, and little doing. Quicksilver, dull, and quoted lower.

THE RUSSIANS ON THE AMUR.

So much rhetorical declamation has been expended upon the expansive policy of the Russian Government that no apology need be offered for devoting some time and attention to the consideration of the real facts of the case. We are fortunate, too, in our opportunity, for it would be hard to find a more careful or trustworthy guide than Mr. Ravenstein,* who has not only availed himself of all accessible publications on the subject, but has also enjoyed the immense advantage of holding personal communication with Russian offieers who have served on the Amur. One of the minor effects of national wars is, undoubtedly, the spread of geographical knowledge. Previous to the siege of Sebastopol, how many of our countrymen, we would ask, were acquainted with the topography of the Crimea, or with the very names of the towns on the shores of the Black Sea? Thanks to the Sepoy mutiny in India, the British public became familiar for a time with many cities, rivers, and provinces, of whose existence they had before no very precise notion. Then came the campaign in Northern Italy to open out a new field of inquiry, followed soon afterwards by Garibaldi's expedition to the South, when Sicily once more rose out of the sea. Again, owing to the recent operations in China, that vast empire has ceased to be a mere geographical expression, and people now talk of the Peiho and the Yang-tze-Kiang as if they were household words lisped in infancy. And now the Russians are teaching us to extend the borders of our knowledge, and to direct our eyes to the distant and desolate regions of Eastern Siberia.

The river Amur, with its tributaries, drains an area of seven hundred and sixty-six thousand square miles, and according to Russian geographers, takes its rise in the sources of the Kerlon, which becomes the Amur after its junction with the Shilka. From the head waters of the Kerlon to the sea the course of the river is not less than two thousand four hundred miles, traversing a basin of the most varied character. Rising in the great mountain range of the Kentei Khan, the Kerlon flows for five hundred and fifty miles through dreary and inhospitable tracts. It then runs through the Dalai Nor, or Lake, and joins the Shilka at Ust Strelka, four hundred and twenty miles lower down. During the latter part of its course it passes through an immense steppe, more than two thousand feet high, which is pronounced unsuitable for cultivation, but for some distance previous to its junction the banks are clothed with woods, and occasionally open out in wide valleys beautiful with | waters into the Amur from the south, and their flowers, and capable of producing cereals. Below Ust Strelka the Amur assumes the breadth, but which soon divides into several proportions of a mighty stream four hundred and fifty yards in width, with a current of nearly four miles an hour flowing between precipitous cliffs or steep rocky slopes. On either of stately trees, impenetrable through the side the country is barren and mountainous, thickness of the underwood, lines the river thinly wooded, and only in places fit for pasturage. Numerous tributaries empty their waters into the main channel, especially from the north, and at the point of junction form small plains covered with scanty grass and stunted brushwood. Near Albazin, one hundred and twenty-five miles below Ust Strelka, the mountains recede, and verdant prairies stretch far and wide on either bank. Albazin itself is described as the highest spot on the Amur suitable for an extensive settlement. Wood and water are at hand, fish are in abundance, the cold northerly winds are fended off by the mountains, and the plains are adapted for the rearing of flocks and herds. The river, which is here five hundred and eighty yards in breadth, shortly afterwards expands, divided, however, by groups of islands more pleasing to the artist than to the navigator. On the south side steep precipices of sandstone rise abruptly from the stream, but on the opposite side the plain continues for seventy miles till it reaches a bold sandstone promontory, above which a dangerous bar stretches across the river. For the next thirteen miles steep banks and wooded hills occur, until the traveller reaches the Cossack station of Barunda. Here the soil consists of a rich black earth, clothed with a rich verdure, and wood in plenty is found on the neighbouring mountains. About three hundred miles below Ust Strelka a smoking cliff, similar to the one in the Bay of Weymouth, is an object of dread to the natives, though the phenomenon is probably due to the spontaneous combustion of coal or lignite. Below this point the high lands gradually withdraw, and give place to rich meadows interspersed with clumps of poplars, elms, ashes, apple trees, and elder bushes, with small oaks and black birches upon the slopes of the receding hills. After a while, however. the old features again recur, and barren rocks, frequently of volcanic formation, succeed to fertile plains. But the latter again appear on approaching the mouth of the Dzeya, where stands the town of Blagovesh'chensk, founded by General Muravief in 1858. This place, which contains a population of about one thousand four hundred souls, is the capital of the Amur province, and much frequented by the Chinese. The adjacent country is adapted for agricultural operations, and coal is found in the immediate neighbourhood. An extensive plain stretches for many miles below this point. covered with the most luxuriant herbage, growing to the height of five or six feet. Little change occurs in the scenery after this until reaching the defile formed by the Bureya mountains, two hundred and forty three miles below the mouth of the Dzeys, and seven hundred and eighty three from Ust Strelka. Twenty miles further on the river is inclosed between walls of stone, and narrows from a width of two miles to less than seven hundred yards, with a depth of seventy feet and a current varying from three to five-and-a-half miles an hour. Nine hundred and ninety-two miles united streams form a noble river two miles in branches inclosing thickly wooded islets. At the mouth of the Usuri, one hundred and eighty-seven miles further down, a dense forest side, with occasional openings occupied by moss-swamps. Below this junction the Amur skirts a level prairie to the north for a distance of one hundred miles, while on the right bank rise broken cliffs of clayey sandstone. Some way further on the river flows in three principal branches each a mile and a-half wide, which re-unite at the Cape of Kirile in a stream fully eight miles wide, spotted with small islands. At Sofyevsk, one thousand six hundred and forty miles from Ust Strelka, the Amur expands into several large lakes, named Kidzi, Kada, and Yome, the first of which is twentyfive miles in length by twelve in breadth, and not more than eight and a-half miles from Castries Bay. The further progress of the river to the southward is, however, arrested by a chain of mountains, which compel it to seek the ocean in a north easterly direction. Russian set tlements are now frequently met with, though generally on a small scale, the colonists being contented with their lot in comparison with their previous experiences of life in Siberia. Until lately the most important station was Nikolayevsk, situated upon a wooded plateau on the left bank of the river. In 1858 the population of this place was two thousand five hundred and fifty-two, including, however, one thousand five hundred and eighteen soldiers and sailors. The Amur is here a mile and a quarter wide, the stream running at the rate of three to four miles an hour. Twentytwo miles lower the Liman or Gulf of the Amur opens out between Capes Tebakh and Pronge, seven and a-half miles apart. The gulf itself extends sixty-five miles from north to south, with a breadth of twenty-five miles. The navigation is intricate, and no vessels drawing more than thirteen feet of water can enter the river. Such is the river Amur, for some time the boundary line between the empires of Russia and China. The existence of this river was first made known to the Russians in the early part of the seventeenth century, when a party of Cossacks who had been despatched from Tomsk to the Aldan river to exact tribute from the Tungusians, pushed on to the eastward, and in three years' time (1639) stood upon the shores of the Sea of Okhotsk. About the same time exaggerated reports were received of the opulence of the Daurians, a tribe dwelling on the banks of the Upper Amur, and in consequence an expedition under the command of Poyarkof was sent from Yakutsh for the double purpose of discovery and conquest. It did not, however, prove successful, nor was any progress made for some years afterwards. But the Russian Government has always proved singularly tenacious of whatever policy it has adopt ed, and the failure of one attempt only led to the institution of a second on a larger scale. Thus, little by little, small stations were established at commanding points, until the Chinese became jealous of such encroaching neighbours, and resolved to expel them from the territories they had usurped. Hostilities, below Ust Strelka the Sungari empties its therefore, commenced in the summer of 1683, and at the close of that year the whole of the Russian settlements were destroyed, with the exception of Albazin, which also was temporarily evacuated two years later. By the treaty of Nerchinsk in 1689, Albazin and the whole of the Amur were formally ceded to China. In this state matters remained until 1847, when Count Muravief was appointed Governor-general of Eastern Siberia. A naval expedition to explore the Amur upwards from its mouth was the first step towards territorial annexation, and within seven years were founded the settlements of Petrovsk, Nicholayevsk, Mariinsk, Alexandrovsk, and Constantinovsk. In 1854 Count Muravief descended the river from the Transbaikal provinces under the pretext of conveying provisions to the Russian squadron in the Pacific. This voyage was in every way successful, and confirmed the opinion of the Government as to the importance of commanding the navigation of a river which communicated directly with that ocean. Notwithstanding the war with France and England. the Count sent three military expeditions from Shilkinsk in the course of 1855, which were accompanied by five hundred colonists, with cattle, horses, and agricultural implements. In the following year four Cossack stations were established on the Upper Amur, a new colony was founded on the Lower Amur, and a postal service arranged between Nicholayevsk and Mariinsk. But it was in 1857 that the most rapid progress was made in Russianising this river and the adjacent regions, which were then created the Maritime Province of Eastern Siberia. In 1858 the Chinese Government were constrained to cede the left bank of the Amur down to the Usuri, and both banks below the junction of that stream, while by the treaty of Tien-Tsin they acknowledged the right of Russia to maintain an embassy at Pekin. On the last day of that year the territories of the Amur were divided by an Imperial ukase into the Amur Province, held by a local military force of four thousand five hundred men, and the Maritime Province of Eastern Siberia, held by three thousand three hundred men-independently of three battalions of line infantry and the twenty-seventh equipage of the navy. The repulse of the allies at the Taku forts, however, inspired the Chinese Government with such unwonted resolution that hostilities were on the point of being commenced on the banks of the Amur, which threatened destruction to the scattered and ill protected settlements of the Russians. But this demonstration of vigorous action passed away when the English and French forces were encamped at the gates of Pekin, and General Ignatief profited by the necessities of the Chinese to extort terms in the highest degree favourable to his own nation.

"The importance of this treaty," says Mr. Raven-stein, "can scarcely be over-rated. Russia has now stein, "can scarcely be over-rated. Russia has now acquired a legal right not only to the country north of the Amur and east of the Usuri, but also to the entire coast of Manchuria down to the frontiers of Korea. The value of this coast, with its magnificent bays and harbours, is great, quite independently of the Amur, and is fully appreciated by the Russians, who have rechristened Victoria Bay as the Bay of Peter the Great, and one of its ports they call Vladivostok—'Dominion of the East.' On the Amur and Usuri, however, the boundary line does not been the Usuri, however, the boundary line does not bear the stamp of permanency. Russia, holding one bank only of these rivers, whilst China holds the other, may at any chosen time furnish a government deairous of encroaching upon its neighbour with fertile causes of dispute, and when the time comes when the huge Chinese empire tumbles to pieces, the whole of Manchuria with Leaotong must become the prey of Russia.

in the two provinces on the Amur probably does not exceed 40,000, to which may be added about 24,000 natives, to constitute the entire population of a superficial area of 361,000 square miles. The military forces consist of about 20,000 men, with 8,000 women and children, thus reducing the number of actual colonists to ten or twelve thousand. Though sufficiently fortified to resist an attack by the Chinese, the Russian settlements are not in a condition to offer a prolonged defence against a flotilla of European gunboats, if ever it were thought necessary to institute active operations against them. The naval forces on the Pacific station are not very considerable, numbering 18 vessels, mounting 178 guns, but only two frightes-the one 57 and the other of 48 guns. In addition, there were in 1858, 13 lightly-armed vessels belonging to the Russo-American Company; besides a dozen small steamers for river navigation.

The intrinsic advantages of these regions are not very striking. There is abundance, indeed, of timber and firewood, and various cereals are cultivated with tolerable success. Fish is plentiful, but fur animals are already becoming comparatively scarce. Coal has been discovered in several places, and iron is " reported to exist," but the mineral resources of the country have not yet been explored. The ginseng root may be obtained in any quantity, and far superior in quality to that exported from the United States. Imports, however, are likely to exceed the exports, as with the natives there is a fair demand for cotton and woollen stuffs, tobacco, powder, lead, knives, millet, rice, brandy, blue and black plush, glass and amber beads, and knicknacks of gilt or silvered copper. The Russian troops and colonists, again, afford a ready market for colonial goods of all kinds, spirits, wines, beer, rice, arms, cutlery, cigars and tobacco, manufactured articles, agricultural implements, dress-stuffs, and glass ware. Many of these things are procurable from Siberia, but very inferior in quality to European goods, and also much dearer; "nor have the manufacturers of European Russia any chance as long as free trade obtains on the Amur." Still, so far as the wants of the Amur provinces alone are concerned, the trade is never likely to assume very extensive proportions. But as a highway between Russia and China the value of this mighty river can hardly be overstated. And when in the lapse of years the population increases, the moral influence exercised by the former Power upon the northern provinces of the Chinese empire will amount to dominion. There are some alarmists who maintain that this influence must necessarily be adverse to British interests, and that it is somehow the duty of our Government to oppose the development of Russia to the eastward. We do not share in these apprehensions, nor are we disposed to watch the movements of our northern rivals with an ungenerous and selfish jealousy. Past experience has shown that England has directly benefited by every advance of civilisation, no matter in what quarter of the globe. And were it otherwise, none but barbarians would envy the progress of a spirited race, or attempt to check that noble enterprise which leads to the colonisation of strange uncultivated lands, and provides for the present and future maintenance of an industrious population. So long as our maritime superiority remains unassail-

At present the number of genuine Russians, able, and so long as British traders continue to display the great qualities for which they have hitherto been distinguished, there is nothing to fear from any competition the Russians will ever be able to institute on the Pacific Ocean.

HONG KONG CADETSHIPS.

The Vice-Chancellor of Oxford University having been requested by his Grace the Duke of Newcastle, her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonial Department, to select four members of that University who may be desirous of competing for " Hong Kong cadetships," will be happy to receive the names of candidates, together with testimonials and references, on or before the 5th of December. The Vice-Chancellor will then nominate the four gentlemen who are in his judgment most likely to succeed.

The subjoined paper on the subject of these cadetships has been printed by the Colonialoffice :-

" Hong Kong Cadetships

"With a view to supply the Civil Service in Hong Kong with an efficient staff of interpreters, it is intended that a certain number of cadetships shall be established, the holders of which are to themselves for a certain time after their arrival in the colony to learning the language.

"Three gentlemen will be appointed at once to cadetships, after a competitive examination by the Civil Service Commissioners (at a time and place to be fixed by them, but not before the 1st of January next), from among candidates nominated for this purpose by the Secretary of State for the Colonies.

"Every candidate must, on the 1st day of January next, have attained the age of twenty and be under

LORD CLIVE'S FUND. ROLLS' COURT-Nov. 19.

(Before the Master of the Rolls.)

MARSH v. HER MAJESTY'S SECRETARY OF STATE IN COUNCIL OF INDIA.

This bill was filed for the purpose of obtaining a declaration that the estate of the late Lord Clive was entitled to receive from the defendant, the Secretary of State, five lakhs of sicca rupees, or the sum of £62,833. 6s. 8d. sterling; and also five-eighths of the sum of £24,128, with interest thereon from the 1st of September, 1858, subject only to the payment of such pensions as were properly payable out of the income of those sums under the provisions of the deed of the 16th of April, 1770. By that deed the late Lord Clive declared certain trusts of the other moneys, which were then invested with the East India Company for the benefit of the soldiers and sailors in the service of the East India Company, and for providing pensions for them and their widows; but it was expressly agreed that if the Company should cease to employ the military force in their actual pay and service in the East Indies, and also ships, then, and in such case, as soon as the said event should happen, the Company should pay to the representatives of Lord Clive, at their treasury at Calcutta, the said trust moneys, subject, nevertheless, to the payment of all existing pensions. The plaintiffs alleged that, by reason of the Act of Parliament transferring the government and revenues of India to the Imperial Government, the Company had ceased, within the meaning of the deed, to have any soldiers or seamen in their service. They therefore filed this bill, praying relief accordingly.

Sic Hugh Cairns and Mr. Hobhouse appeared for the plaintiffs; the Solicitor-General, Mr. Forsyth, and Mr. Melville for the defendant.

STEAM TO INDIA VIA THE CAPE .- GRAVESEND, Nov. 16th, 1861.-The Jason, 2,668 tons burden, Captain Hurst, commander, the fifth of the line of auxiliary steamers, to Madras and Calcutta direct via the Cape, and belonging to the East India and London Shipping Company, sailed hence this day, the first tide after her appointed time, at nine A.M., with a full cargo, and between ninety and one hundred passengers. The facilities and accommodation afforded by this magnificent line of steamers appear to be duly appreciated by the public, as the numerous demand for passages and freight clearly indicates. The line will be continued on the 1st of January next, by the s.s. Golden Fleece, 2,768 tons, Captain George Western, commander, and from the wellknown qualities of this magnificent vessel, a speedy and prosperous voyage is anticipated.

THE LEGION OF HONOUR.—(Whitehall, Nov. 16.) The Queen has been pleased to give and grant unto Lieut. H. C. Cattley, of Fane's Irregular Cavalry, H.M.'s royal licence and permission that he may accept and wear the insignia of the Imperial Order of the Legion of Honour of the Fifth Class, which H.M. the Emperor of the French has been pleased to confer upon him, as a mark of H.I.M.'s approbation of his distinguished services before the enemy during the late combined British and French operations against China. # ROWLANDS' ODONTO,

ROWLANDS' ODONTO, OR PEARL DENTIFRICE,
A white powder, is composed of the choicest and most recherche ingredients of the Oriental herbal. It extirpates all tartarous adhesions to the teeth, and ensures a pearl-like whiteness to the enamelled surface. Its antiseptic and antiscorbutic properties exercise a highly beneficial and salutary influence; they arrest the further progress of the decay of the teeth, induce a healthy action of the guns, and cause them to assume the brightness and colour inductive of perfect soundness. The breath also attains a grateful purity and fragrance. Price 2s. 9d. per box, Caution.—The words "Rowlands' Odonto" are on the label, and "A. Rowland and Sons, 20, Hatton-garden," on the Government Stamp. Sold by them, and by chemists and perfumers.

M. R. EPHRAIM MOSELY'S IMPROVE—MENT in the CONSTRUCTION of ARTIFICIAL
TEFTH, GUMS, and PALATES, on an INDIA-RUBBER
BASE, are secured by Letters Patent, dated becember, 1852, whereby the continual outlay of new teeth is avoided, alterations from the absorption of the gums, or any other cause, being easily remedied, and the first outlay no greater than for ordinary kinds. The extraordnary results of this application may be briefly noted as under:—It consists of one continuous piece of Prepared India-rubber. The Artificial Teeth present an uniformly even surface to the action of the tongue, preventing lodgment of food and all secretions, so much complained of in the present system. No gold or any other metal being required, all springs, wires, and fastenings are wholly unnecessary; sharp edges are avoided, a greatly-increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity hitherto wholly unattainable, and a fit perfected with the most unerring accuracy, are secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the prepared india-rubber; and, as it is a non-conductor, fluids of any temperature may be retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being at the same time provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta Mail of the 22nd October adds nothing to the news received last week from Bombay. The Governor-general was to start on the following day for Allahabad, with the intention of investing the Maharajahs of Gwalior and Puttiala, the Rajah of Rampore, and the Begum of Bhopal with the insignia of the Star of India.

The inundations were beginning to subside, but the greater part of Lower Bengal was still under water, and the indigo districts have suffered severely. In Calcutta itself no business was doing, as the Government holidays succeeding the Doorga Poojah had not yet terminated.

The amalgamation of the Supreme and Sudder Courts awaits the approval of the Secretary of State for India. The new High Court of Bengal will be presided over by ten judges, four of whom will be barristers, five civilians, and one probably a native. The three Supreme Court judges, the five Sudder judges, Sanguine hopes are, therefore, entertained that important reforms in the working of the Law Courts will ere long be instituted.

Lord Canning's resolutions sanctioning the sale of waste lands, and the redemption of the Land-tax, have been received by the European community with a burst of enthusiasm, and for the moment his lordship is the most popular man in India.

The result of the Oude Commission has at length been published, and Major J. W. Carnegie has been declared unfit to hold any civil office whatever under the Government of India. His compulsory retirement from the army will follow as a matter of course. Mr. Williams has been suspended for one year, and Mr. Forsyth severely reprimanded, while Mr. Martin's absence leaves the question of his complicity still undecided.

The news from China and Japan is wholly unimportant. The evacuation of Canton was proceeding satisfactorily, but in all likelihood that town will again be occupied by foreign troops before another year has expired. The French, those pioneers of civilisation, have been indulging in the humane and Christianlike pursuit of man stealing. The Ville d'Agra, a ship belonging to that nation, was compelled to put into Hong Kong for repairs, with a cargo of coolies on board, bound for Peru, when it was discovered that a large proportion of the poor wretches had been forcibly kidnapped. The captain of the vessel is to be sent to France for trial, and will no doubt be lauded by the Paris press for his generous efforts on behalf of the "benighted heathen."

It is said that nearly the whole of the specie shipped by recent mails to India has been for the purpose of buying up part of the excessive stocks of Manchester goods in that country on English account.

THE INDIAN FAMINE RELIEF FUND.—The final meeting of the general committee for the administration of this fund was held at the Mansionhouse on Monday last. There were present the Lord Mayor, who acted as chairman, Sir Edward Ryan, Major-general Alexander, Mr. H. M. Parker, Deputy Obbard, Mr. Dent, Mr. Low, and Mr. Goodman. Mr. Low read a balance-sheet, which had been carefully prepared and audited, showing that the total amount of subscriptions received by the London committee was £114,807. Of this there had been remitted at various times to Calcutta, including £3,498. 18s. 10d. which was to be forwarded by the outgoing mail of Monday night, sums amounting in the aggregate to £54,998. 18s. 10d., and to Bombay £57,000, making together £111,998. 18s. 10d. There had been expended in advertisements £1,982. 2s. 3d.; printing, £112. 10s.; stationery, £90. 12s. 9d.; postages, £111. 5s. 3d.; office expenses, clerks' salaries, petty disbursements, &c., £512. 8s. 5d. Over and above the money forwarded to India from the committee at the Mansion-house, it also appeared that there had been received in Calcutta up to the 14th of September from provincial committees in this country £16,374 odd, and from British colonies about £2,349. A letter was read from Colonel Baird Smith, chairman of the Famine Relief Fund at Calcutta, addressed to the Lord Mayor, inclosing certain resolutions passed at the final meeting of that body, and calling attention particularly to the following one:-" That the grateful thanks of this meeting be conveyed through the chairman to the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor and the London General Committee, for their earnest and most successful co-operation in mitigating the miseries of the famine. This meeting, as representing all classes of her Majesty's subjects in India, desires to record its conviction that the munificent charity of the English people towards the people of India on this occasion has produced moral as well as material results of the highest importance, and likely to be of permanent effect." Another resolution expressed the grateful acknowledgments of the meeting to the Relief Committees of Dublin, Edinburgh, Liverpool, Glasgow, Manchester, and such other places in England as had co-operated in promoting the objects of the fund. Colonel Baird Smith added that the prospects of the harvest in the districts recently the seat of the famine continued to be encouraging and satisfactory. It remains to be stated that the voluminous accounts relating to the fund were audited by Messrs. / Coloman. Turquand, Youngs, and Co., accountants, who gave their services gratuitously.

THE NEW CURRENCY ACT.

For the sake of those of our readers who are as yet but slightly acquainted with the provisions of "The Government Paper Currency Act," we supply the following digest:-

The Act received the assent of the Governorgeneral on the 16th of July last, and its formal confirmation from home is shortly expected.

The Act is to come into operation on the 1st of March next, and the issue of Government notes from that date is to supersede the present issues of the Banks of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, whose power to issue the first clause of the Act annuls.

Clause III. establishes a new department of the public service, to be called "The Department of Issue." No notes will be issued for a less sum than ten rupees. Clause IV. constitutes the Master of the Mint, or other Government official at Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, Commissioners of the department; the Calcutta official being the head commissioner. "Circles of Issue" are to be established, with deputycommissioners at their head.

Notes are to be issued only in exchange for silver and gold coin, or bullion; the issue against gold being limited to one-fourth the total value of the issues for silver.

The amount of silver and gold coin or bullion so received is to be retained as a reserve to pay the notes issued, save an amount not to exceed four crores of rupees, which is to be invested in Indian Government securities; the said securities to be specially set apart with the silver and gold coin or bullion as security for the due payment of the notes. The amount of the said securities is to be published monthly in the Government Gazette.

The interest of the securities, as it falls due, is to be paid into the revenues of Government, under the head of "Profits of Note Circulation;" and an account thereof is to be published annually in the Government Gazette.

The Act further declares that the issue or receipt of any engagement, in the shape of a promissory note or otherwise, to pay bearer on demand, renders the issuer and receiver, or issuer or receiver, liable to forfeit the whole amount of the said engagement. Checks or drafts on bankers, shroffs, or agents, are specially exempted,

As the Act further provides that arrangements may be made with any banks or agencies already in existence to regulate the issue and payment of the notes, the whole machinery for the purpose is ready to the hands of Government.

Government already save in the shape of income tax (exclusive of the 1 per cent. applicable for local expenditure only) upwards of eight lakhs per annum on the Indian debt. An additional saving will now be made of sixteen lakhs per annum; in other words, the profit on "note circulation" will save the interest on four crores of paper now in the hands of the public.

Sixteen laklis per annum would be the amount of interest payable upon Four Per Cent. Paper, the class of paper, it may be presumed the commissioners will purchase. Looking to the future prospects of India, Four Per Cents. are by far the most desirable of the Government funds for the purpose; for besides enabling them virtually to retire four millions sterling of the debt at a cost of only three crores and forty lakhs, the investment would plainly be tantamount to at once redeeming altogether sixty lakhs of the debt.

That this will be the course pursued we feel little doubt, as the Imperial guarantee for Indian loans must be conceded in the course of a very few years. (Indian and Home Government interests now are, and are every day more and more felt to be, one.) Five-and-a-Half Per Cents. would then, as they became redeemable, be paid off, perhaps exchanged into Fours; and the Five Per Cents, would be exchanged by degrees. At present Government could scarcely obtain four crores of Five-and-a-Half Per Cent. Paper; certainly could not do so at a less cost than 5 per saving of interest, no better off than if they had lness. bought Fours-their four crores costing them at the outset four crores and twenty lakhs in place of three crores and forty .- Times of India.

THE STATE PAPERS OF INDIA.

The Commission lately appointed to calendar the Records of the Imperial and Bengal Governments is slowly but steadily pursuing its task. Deprived already of two of its members, and likely soon to lose the valuable aid of Mr. C. J. Erskine, of the late Legislative Council, who must return to Bombay, the Commission has received a necessary accession of strength in Colonel Baird Smith and Colonel Broome, of Cossipore.

The earliest record in the Calcutta archives dates from so late a period as 1748, seven years before the battle of Plassey. From that time to 1833, or over 85 years, the labours of the Commission are to be spread. The first portion of the Calendar, equal to about 600 octavo pages, is now ready in manuscript. It is calculated that the Calendar up to 1773 will fill a volume of 800 such pages. This will give a slight idea of the labour to be undergone in connection with later years. It is evident that, as the work advances, a division into departments will be indispensable. As in England, each volume must be entrusted to a responsible editor, and if such can be found great will be the gain to Indian history. The Friend of India Library, it is pretty well known, possesses a unique collection of tracts and pamphlets on China and the East Indies, embracing both English and Indian publications, and reaching back so far as 1621, when it begins with a "Discovrse of Trade from England unto the East Indies, answering to diuerse Objections which are usually made against the same. The second impression corrected and amended. By T. Mun. London: Printed by Nicholas Okes, for Iohn Pyper, 1621." In 1641 there is "The Petition and Remonstrance of the Governor and Company of Merchants of London trading to the East Indies," and in 1661, "The East India Company's Charter, granted by the King's most excellent Majesty Charles the Second, under the great Seal of England, dated the third day of April, in the 13th year of His Majesty's reign." So full are these volumes, ninety-five in all, of old and rare matter, that we have often regretted our limited space has prevented us from giving

The Record Commission have issued eight specimen pages of the first volume of their Calendar. All the Records are arranged indiscriminately in chronological order, the contents of the chief paragraphs are given, on one margin the main subject treated of is put and on the other the volume and page. The arrangement suffers from want of clear and varied type, otherwise it seems the best that could be adopted. An index will follow, and then a key to the index. Even these eight pages give a photograph of the position of the company and the low state of the English power in Bengal before the battle of Plassey. In a letter to the Court of Directors, the Council record the depredations of the Mugh pirates about Dacca, near which, however, only yesterday, a gun boat was needed to chase dacoits. Then the Nawab was Aliverdi Khan, who murdered his predecessor, the grandson of Nawab Jaffier Khan, who was made Subadar of Bengal by the great Aurengzebe, and who transferred the seat of Government from Dacca to Moorshedabad in 1725. With English, Mogul, and Armenian merchants humbling themselves before him, his policy seems to have been to play the one party against the other, and to fleece all three. We find the Council, the predecessors of Dalhousie and Clyde, of Canning and Rose, sending a fine Arab horse to propitiate the Nawab; bribing the great Seths, the merchants, with Rs. 2,000 to secure their influence with the Nawab, and being told a present must also be sent to His Highness. They turn in their desperation to ask their rivals, the Armenians, for assisttance, only to be refused; but finally, their hearts are rejoiced by a "parwanna" from the Nawab to Mr. Drake, "the picture of friend-

These, too, were the days of financial eco-We read-" Salutes to English ships disnomv. continued, to save cost of gunpowder"-Hospital is very bare of bedding and clothing"-'paid for a piece of red taffety for gowns for the aldermen, Rs. 12-15"-" post of Master Attendant supplied by a member of the Council with title of Superintendent of Marine." The great Mahratta power which has expired with Nana Saheb in the jungle, if he be dead, was then in its glory when "the Mahrattas encamped close to Cuttack Factory, but were driven off by the Nawab's forces. Five of their principal Jemadars surrendered to the Nawab, who immediately cut off their heads." "Many Balasore weavers have moved into the Factory, owing to devastations of Mahrattas."

We have glimpses of the prices and rates of wages of this time, which will be invaluable to the future Macaulay who shall yet do Indian history justice. European pensioned soldiers received Rs. 8 a month and "Blacks" Rs. 4. The widow of the commandant of Fort William was allowed Rs. 35 per month. The Presidency was defended by 700 soldiers, the captain receiving Rs. 124, the ensign Rs. 45, and the adjutant Rs. 62. We have no data to show us what the value of these sums would be now. But in England the penny of the time of Henry VIII. was equal to the modern shilling. We find that Madeira wine brought at auction six shillings a gallon; Russian iron 16s. 6d. a maund. One despatch complains of the dearness of articles when cotton is ninepence a pound, and chunam Rs. 70 per 100 maunds. By a sudden increase in the price of stores in 1753, mustard oil rose from Rs. 9 to 13 per maund, and linseed oil from Rs. 15 to 20. The Council contract for bricks measuring 9 by 34 by 24 was Rs. 3-10 per thousand. Owing to a difficulty in procuring bricklayers, their wages were raised to one anna a day, the lowest sum paid in India to unskilled labourers now being 2½ annas in Ganjam. There is a notice of a famine in Calcutta "such as had not been known for sixty years, causing the death of many inhabitants from starvation," in 1752, before those which Colonel Baird Smith records. We trust the Commission will publish that Report on the River Hooghly, dated May 19th, 1753. What a change there is now, when the large native boat can hardly crawl where a century ago Admiral Watson sailed his frigates when he bombarded Chandernagore.—Friend of India.

THE "COTTON FROM BURMAH" FALLACY.

In these days, when "Cotton!" is the cry of Manchester; when "cotton" is the great topic of conversation, alike of the Englishman at home and his compatriot in the East; when we all stand aghast at the fearful derangement of England's trade in every corner of the globe, if the supply of this most necessary article fails, we give insertion to every letter on this subject which holds out a suggestion, however crude and theoretical it may be; trusting that, should anything practicable be able to be eliminated therefrom, it would not escape the notice of all the clever men who are at present devoting their energies to this most important subject. With this view we gave insertion, on the 8th October, to a letter on the subject of cotton cultivation in Upper Burmah; that is all the country at present under the dominion of the King of Burmah, or Ava, as he is also called. We have hitherto abstained from writing on this subject, in the hope that some of our native correspondents might have taken the matter in hand; but fearing that, if further delay takes place, a very false idea of the chances of any amount of cotton being forthcoming from the King's dominions may get abroad, we desire to lay before our readers a succinct account of the present state of the native portion of Burmah, both as regards its political, and also its agricultural status, in the hope that our remarks, founded on unquestionable facts, may open the eyes of that sanguine portion of the community who imagine that they have only to say "give us cotton," for cent. premium, and would be ultimately, in the ship," promising to favour the Company's busi- their demands to be complied with.

The great points to be considered are-Firstly, the King as an individual; the Constitution as at present existent; the Currency; and, lastly, the mass of the population, as opposed to the upper ten thousand. We purpose to show the evils arising from the first three points as exemplified in the fourth, and shall prove the truth of our deductions by incontrovertible facts. First, then, of the King as an individual. He is humane, enlightened, religious, and honest; but, as a King ruling over a barbarous nation, these virtues become disadvantages, inasmuch as his humanity prevents his meting out condign punishment to those of his provincial governors who richly deserve it for their oppression and extortion. His acuteness sees full well where his advantage lies; as in the matter of cotton as laid before us by our correspondent; but he is unable to overcome the obstinate adherence to ancient usage, which is the greatest bane of the Burmese character, and his religious asceticism causes him to abandon any project, however feasible and however well matured, should it meet with the opposition of his priests, who have access to him at all times and in all places. And his own honesty forbids him to believe the utter worthlessness and untruthfulness of the great majority of his advisers.

Secondly, the Constitution, it is almost needless to say, is an absolute sovereignty; and it is not difficult to conceive that, in the hands of such a King as we have described, the effect is most prejudicial to the interests of the country. Thus every appointment under Government is obtained by bribery and corruption, and the amount so expended by the applicant is, on his obtaining the coveted post, extorted from the oppressed and groaning people. Under the present King's rule uncontrolled oppression devours the land; for, on his being made acquainted with any act of cruelty on the part of a Governor, he is at once removed from his appointment, but not further punished. The consequence is that, fearing his recal, the office holder grinds the poor without mercy, only, on his retirement, to be followed by another whose pocket has just been bled by the officers in the purlieus of the Court, and who, profiting by the experience of his predecessor, flogs with scorpions instead of with whips, dreading no commensurate punishment in his turn.

Thirdly, the Currency. This consists of lumps of silver, alloyed according to the fancy of the possessor for the moment. There is one class of silver for the palace; that is, none is taken by the King in payment for produce which is not at least 15 per cent. better than English rupees; another, with a different amount of alloy, is the currency for rubies; another for produce not a royal monopoly; another for the ordinary necessaries of life. In fact, silver is found with every conceivable amount of alloy, from the pure silver down to that 50 per cent. lower than the rupee. Practice enables a man to tell in a moment the percentage of alloy in a piece of silver, however small it may be; and as all transfer of this precious metal is made by weights and scales, the intrinsic value is readily found. The King has lately tried to introduce a regular coinage, but the results are not favourable; the Burmese closing their eyes most wilfully to their own ad-

Fourthly, the population is so ground down and oppressed by their rulers that scarcely a day passes without some family crossing the frontier and settling on English territory, one of the chief causes of which is the way in which the Government monopolies of timber, cutch, and earth-oil are conducted. The King orders that so much good silver shall be paid for every 100 viss (365 lbs.) of cutch brought to his depots on the banks of the river; but the men in authority pay in bad silver, pocketing the difference, often amounting to 50 per cent. The inhabitants of the cutch districts are compelled to make this article, and, being a monopoly, they are compelled to sell it to the King-at a remunerative price, did they really get the amount the King has to pay for it; but numbe the profit, and more than the profit, goes to fill Court.

the pockets of the harpies set to rule over them. In the other monopolies a similar state of things exists. The agricultural population will make no effort to become rich; for the more they have, the more is extorted from them. They live from day to day, and beyond this they have no idea. What chance is there, then, of our getting cotton in any quantity from such a country? The King is not likely to make a monopoly of it, or to compel his people to grow it; and were they to cultivate it as formerly, when the trade with China was open, the amount would still be very small, the staple very short, and the price high. When an expensive water-carriage to Rangoon, and a heavy export duty are added to the above, a season would prove that the idea of obtaining cotton from Upper Burmah was utterly worthless. In the Pegu report reviewed by us the other day, Colonel Phayre, speaking on the subject of agriculture, says—" Foreign cotton-seed they will not accept. It is, they say, too uncertain in its re-sults." If the Burmese in our own territories, who are now well affected towards us, and who are rapidly becoming rich, hesitate to grow cotton such as would, if successful, tend to their individual wealth, of which, on our side of the frontier, they are not defrauded; how can we imagine that the poor, half-starved, oppressed peasantry on the other side of the frontier, who only cultivate so much as will keep themselves and their families from starvation, will risk their lives in trying to grow Sea Island or New Orleans cotton, which would, in all probability, end in failure and complete starvation to themselves?

Could the absurd etiquette which prevents the King from entering the saloon of his yacht because the sailors, in passing along the deck, would be above his head, be done away, there would be hope that, under the present King, Burmah might rise in the scale of Eastern nations; but while he confines himself to his palace and makes no effort to ameliorate the condition of his people, his country will, year by year, be more denuded of its population, who will flock to that portion of Burmah where, under English rule, they know that what they earn they can keep, without fear of the spoiler.—

MISCELLANEOUS.

RAJPOOTANA.—By advices received from Rajpootana, we learn that a party of mounted men lately entered Marwar, plundered a village, and carried off several men as prisoners. The same letters add that a court of inquiry has assembled there to investigate a charge preferred against a sepoy of the Bheel Corps for the murder of his aunt, on the pretext of her being a witch, on which occasion another sepoy of the corps was present.

SHERGOTTY.—Letters received from Shergotty, dated Oct. 10, mention that the roads are impassable in consequence of the recent rains, and that dåk runners with great difficulty convey the mails. The Governor-general's suite proceeding to Allahadad was detained there on account of the bad state of the thoroughfares.

LUCKNOW PRIZE MONEY .- The Supreme Government have instructed the General Prize Committee that the parties enumerated below, having served as volunteers during the defence of Lucknow, are entitled to share in the Lucknow prize, as privates only. In addition to the officers of the British Indian armies, the following classes of public servants and inhabitants took part in the defence of Lucknow between the 30th June and 22nd of November, 1857—that is, between the action at Chinhut and the relief of the Lucknow garrison by the Commander-in-Chief: -Civil servants of the East India Company, uncovenanted servants of the East India Company, merchants, traders, inhabitants of Lucknow, and those who sought refuge from the surrounding districts.

Mr. MacLEOD WYLLE.—The Phænix states as a rumour that Mr. Macleod Wylie, clerk to the Legislative Council, will be one of the additional Barrister Judges appointed to make up the number requisite for the Bench of the New Court.

THE NEW HIGH COURT.—The Friend of India gives the personnel of the new High Court of Bengal. It will consist of the present Chief Justice, Sir Barnes Peacock, Sir Charles Jackson or his successor, Sir Mordaunt Wells and another Barrister Judge, who will probably be sent out from England. The five Sudder Judges will be Messrs. Trevor, Loch, Steer, Raikes, and Bayley. The remaining Judgeship it has not been determined as yet whether it should be given to a native or not. In the former case, our contemporary supposes the choice will fall upon Baboo Romaprosad Roy.

VERY LIKE A WHALE .- Who has ever heard of a whale being hooked by the flukes of an anchor, and running away with the vessel to which it was attached? Yet if we are to believe Mr. Reddie's letter to the Immigration Labour Commissioners, as published in the Supplement to the Colombo Observer of the 30th September, such an extraordinary event has occurred. It appears that on the 20th of that month the schooner in question was at anchor opposite to Ramisseram Island. It was about 8 o'clock P.M., and Mr. Reddie was seated on the poop, taiking to two conductors, when suddenly the bows of the vessel were brought almost on a level with the sea; then followed a shock, and a shower of spray on the deck of the schooner, and it moved on with railway speed. Soon after a whale, apparently about forty or fifty feet in length, made its appearance at a cable's length before the vessel. went the schooner at a speed of fifteen miles per hour, then it would stop, be whirled round, and taken hither and thither. when the race would be resumed once more. This was repeated two or three times, till the schooner was dragged fifty miles from Ramisseram, when the cetaceous monster lifted its head out of water about ten feet, and then finally disappeared, not with the anchor in its capacious maw, but leaving it drifting to the vessel. The writer of this statement accounts for the marvellous circumstance by the whale running with mouth fully extended, while in search of prey, when coming with his under jaw against the fluke of the anchor, he seized it up, and having turned it in his mouth was unable to extricate himself .- Hurkaru.

NEPAUL, Oct. 6 .- The Indru Jattra festival is over. It was celebrated with great pomp this year, and our Resident was invited on the occasion. Maharajah Jung Bahadoor leaves Kat-mando with six thousand men for Western Terai shortly; and the Commissioners of Oude and Patna have been requested to get ready the supplies required by the Maharajah. One Nunuck Chund Aheer has submitted to our Resident a petition in which he has given the full particulars of the death of Dhoondia Punt Nana Rao of Bithoor, and has positively stated that he has seen the corpse of the infemous Nana Rao. The Durbar, it is said, have declined to give up the Dhang Valley for the sanitarium, as it is situated on the second range of mountains. The cold weather is fast approaching here, but the rains still continue to fall every other day.

Delhi, Oct. 14.—The Delhi Institute is now beginning to show itself above the foundation. I am glad to add that the contributions from all parts of India are numerous and increasing daily. In addition to the names already given as contributors I may add his Excellency the Viceroy, a complete set of mounted maps from the Surveyor General's Office. There has been a munder committed in the city; at least this is the supposition, as the body of a Native, said to be that of a Hulwai, was found at daylight this morning in the Chandney Chowk, the face and head covered with blood. I hope to be able, in a day or two, to tell you that the police are upon the track of the murderer or murderers. Major C. Browne, our Commissioner, returned from Simla yesterday. Mr. F. H. Cooper, c.B., Deputy Commissioner, purposes leaving on the 26th for a couple of months' relaxation. Major Stuart Graham is mentioned as the officer appointed to officiate for Mr. Cooper during his absence. Major Nicoll, Major of Brigade, is expected to rejoin his appointment to-

The Delhi Brigade was out this morning | but I do not know whether the readers will view with blank cartridge—the first time they have fired this season. They did very well, and, strange to say, there was scarcely a loose horse. The troops were back in their quarters by 7 A.M. The crowd of natives round the parade-ground was remarkable. People are arriving from the hills daily; the weather is clear and cool again; this morning was very sharp. No relief yet! I heard a day or two ago that the 3rd troop 3rd brigade Bengal Artillery will move from Muttra to Meerut, which I think very likely to be the case .- Englishman.

THE TREE OF KNOWLEDGE IN BENGAL We (Englishman) some time past received a copy of a work styled "The Hindoo Guide," by Russick Chunder Ghose. The address to the public therein contained we extract below; and following it will be found a letter addressed to ourselves, purporting to be a critique on the work :-

On either side my thoughts incessant turn, Forward I dread, and looking back I mourn.
Pope's Oddyssey.

"Ere while my entering in such tedious undertaking as I have resolved, I think it needful to say that I can scarcely help myself when I consider closely on the risk attendant on such an occasion. I am on the one hand fearful very much owing to the want of proper assistance from my friends which even fortitude itself cannot stand unshaken, on the other I am lulled by the siren praise that had so long damped the high spirits of the authors; and which was the chief aim of those poor creatures. However, as I have intended to run through it, I must take step by step with great care and attention to secure my tottering feet, lest hasty stride would precipitate me at once to the utmost down, and offer a best opportunity to the meanest critics to laugh at my fall-back, and who are gathered round me as a laugh stock for that purpose. In this exigence I have none to advise and put me in a proper way except my own reason, which without intermission directs and seconds me to my fair resolution and to pursue it 'as labour must no doubt produce half the effect if not full owing to the improper course of the time.' I have duly attended to the advices of my reason and partner in the engagement, trusting that God's blessing would never misdirect her blind pursuer; and which God has blessed in the human frame only to distinguish light and dark, good and bad, useful and unserviceable, and to judge themselves right and wrong. If such valuable advantage could be attained by the help of the reason, it is not in a manner folly on my part in following its directions for this trifling matters and temporal praise. I would further add that recommendations is at present essentially necessary for those who lost the favour of the fortune if they expect a higher grade, which I am myself deprived of, and which I cannot depend from any other quarter than from my hapless pen. The praise which is the object of thousands' aim at present is very probably in the midst of the central point of a labyrinth, and guarded on every side by the wicked mobs; therefore any endeavours on the part of an individual to reach the place of that destination are always found to be hopeless, and drive back after thousand round turnings to the very spot from whence he at first started with nothing but the hooting sounds of the crowd after him. For this reason I fear to run in search of the object which has deceived many of my predecessors with mock view. It is certain that many persons will dislike this my work, as it does not contain any kind of love matters and entertainments which they are fond of reading rather than any moral subject or any thing that discovers the national faults. But I do not mind them. I must say plainly (as 'he who keeps his plan secret gives only trouble to his heart') that it would avail some advantage in one way or other to those persons who have acquired some knowledge of the nature, and not the ignorant prejudice of his own country. It would show how they are his own country. It would show how they are in adventure in comparison to other nations of the vast maze, it would discover any particle of blot that lies in the midst of the Hindoo nation; it in the very light I see them. If it fails to satisfy the public, it will not in a least manner weigh or press my heart, as I feel myself very much delightful which my fellow brethren would take in another way. Before going more farther and farther I must give some of my own account, that from whose labour this little work produced and which the curious inquisitor would enquire, I beg to set forth. I am everywhere to be seen in the Calcutta, specially in the miscellaneous depot of M. L. G. with number of companions who, like me, have no idea of self dignity; and further detail of my life is at present unnecessary." Then follows the critical letter—"Sir, A new and strange book has lately been issued from one of the filthy and nasty presses of Calcutta. It is an ignoble production which does great credit to the author, who takes upon himself the assiduous task of writing such a book. The writer is a mushroom one among the galaxy of those literary men that adorn the best part of Calcutta. A sudden upstart of some such genius is surely an ominous sign to the place where the writer is supposed to have taken his rise. We should certainly wish the disappearance of such a cyclopedanist from this City of Palaces, and that he should assume a retired life in a jungle is our earnest desire, and there to bewilder himself with some such Newtonian or Baconian speculations as are rashly displayed in the dirty volume before us. The book is ill-written, ill-concocted, and ill-constructed. The papers and types are of the worst description, found, I believe, from the filthy drains of a fish market and the abominations of a Colvin Chaut. The very compositors of the book have not the slightest smattering knowledge of the English language, and I doubt whether they are fully acquainted with the twenty six letters of the alphabet, or the first elementary instructions of a gooroomoshai. The book, in fact, is replete with errors. very first preface is an expression of vanity and a violation of the common rules of decency Even the commonest rules of syntax are violated in every page and in every line. The name of the book is gigantic, and the mistakes are gigantic too. It is called 'The Hindoo Guide,' instead of calling itself 'The Hindoo Misguide. Every letter of it breathes an air of vanity and pe dantry. It is altogether a vain glorious production. It contains a collection of mystic essays written with the view of impressing the mind of the public with the idea of some extravagant novelty scarcely to be seen in the renowned pages of the great novelist and the essayist of modern times. The book before us is an incarnation of composition, its sentiments are new, its name is new, and its author may, if I so call, a wonder of wonders. A word more to the writer, then I am done. If ever he attempts to write anything, let him first learn the elementary principles of grammar and rhetoric; and if he has succeeded in accomplishing this task properly, then and then alone, let him stimulate to launch such a book in the world as will suit the perusal of the voracious readers of this nineteenth century. An insertion of the above few lines in a corner of your valuable journal will highly oblige your most obedient servant, R. C. C. —Calcutta, 30th September, 1861."

Per Holmsdale.—Mrs. Gordon, Mrs. Onslow, Mrs. Malcolm and child, Mrs. Tippitts, Mrs. Bruce and two children, Mrs. Thompson, Miss E. Thompson, Mis

IMPORTS (Calcutta, Oct. 22).—The holidays not yet over, business still remains generally suspended. A little business was, however, done in the import market by some speculative houses, and some 3,000 packages changed hands at a slight improvement in prices. Most importers, however, prefer waiting for the general resumption of business, in the expectation of otter prices. Hides.—In this market business has commenced; there is a heavy demand[for all kinds of Cow Hides, and the stock is less than the demand. Prices, however, are not altered. Buffaloes are dull, and in Goatskins only a small business has been done in the Cawnpore sort.

MADRAS.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE MADRAS ARMY.—As regards the military administration of the Madras army, we (Athenœum) have some information at our disposal which will be doubtless new to many of our readers. In the first place, we learn that all the patronage of the military pay and audit department in this presi-dency is to be taken away from the Governor of Madras and transferred to the Supreme Government, or rather to the Military Auditor-general. In other words, military paymasters and other officers connected with military audit are no longer to be appointed by the Governor in this presidency, but are to be recommended by the military Auditor-general for the sanction of the Governor general. In the Quartermaster-general's office a nice little difficulty has arisen. Some few days back, as our readers are aware, the post of Quartermaster-general was vacated by Colonel Reid; and accordingly Colonel Scott, Deputy Quartermaster-general, obtained the appointment, and was duly congratulated thereupon. Two days afterwards a telegram from Calcutta fell like a bombshell upon the department. It was announced that the appointment of Quarter-Master General was abolished, and the Madras Government was accordingly ordered to refrain from filling up the vacant post. This event has created no little sensation, and will lead to no little fighting between Madras and Calcutta, as well as between Colonel Scott and the Madras Government. We understand that the office of Adjutant General is to be abolished in like manner on the retirement of Colonel Wood, and that in future there will be a Deputy-Adjutant-General only. Thus, when Colonel Wood retires, there will be no little difficulty in dealing with the rival claims of Colonel Cooke and Colonel Primrose.

HYDERABAD, Oct. 4.-The Rohillas have again assembled in Rozoora and committed two dacoities in a neighbouring village. The native Government has taken active measures to prevent and suppress this evil. The minister Salar Jung has offered a reward of Rs. 500 for the apprehension of Hajee Mahomed Ebrahim, absconded from Hyderabad, who was implicated in the murder of Gobindoo Rao Marwari. 'The Bombay Government have thanked our Resident for the papers forwarded by him relative to the cultiva-tion of cotton in the Berar districts, and have requested to be furnished with any later information that may be on record. The weather is delight-The cholera, which was raging on the Masulipatam road, has ceased.

THE SHEVAROYEN .- Such is the name of the crowning Hill from which the Shevaroys take their name; and a more magnificent panorama than that which awaits the tourist who ascends its top is scarcely to be found in all the world. The Hill itself is of singular formation. Its summit may best be likened to a circular flat race-course of some three quarters of a mile in circumference; and as there is neither shrub nor tree upon it to intercept the view, the picture presented to the eye of plain, and mountain after mountain rolling away into the blue distance, is one of the most magnificent description. Since the extension of the railway to Salem, the Shevaroys have become an object of much interest to the community at large, and numbers of visitors who have thronged there during the past year evince the increasing importance past year evince the increasing importance which these charming Hills are destined to have attached to them as they become better known. That the inhabitants of Madras, Case, Esq., R. Wade, Esq., Lieut. Queen.

worn out with the heat of the plains, and exhausted with over-work, should have such a place to resort to within a day's run is a subject of congratulation; and we propose in this paper to treat of the Shevaroys as a place for the tourist and the traveller, not with reference to the capability of the Hills for the settlers and the planter. The wolf cry of fever is still occasionally raised; but the many medical men who have this year spent weeks upon these Hills are one and all satisfied that the fever, which occasionally presents itself at a particular season of the year is of a comparatively harmless character, and very subservient to treatment. Of course, if people will tempt the sun, or expose themselves to heavy rain, sit in wet clothes, or not take care to be clad appropriately for the temperature, we need not be surprised to hear of an occasional fever fit; but at this moment Madras itself is full of fever, while the Shevaroys are as healthy as any locality can be. The Neilgherries, even when the rail is complete, will always be out of the reach of the resident in Madras who is not prepared to make the sacrifice entailed by an absence of considerable duration; but the Shevaroys may be made the agreeable termination of a three days' jaunt; and the pleasure-seeker as well as the invalid may find his profit in a trip to the Shè _Athenæum.

ARCHDEACON OF MADRAS .- The Athenœum has much pleasure in announcing to our readers that the Rev. Thomas Dealtry, who has been of-ficiating Archdeacon in this Presidency during the last two years, will be fully confirmed in the office on the arrival of the new Bishop of Madras. Whatever objection might have been urged against this ecclesiastical preferment when it was first initiated, we believe that this announcement will now be received with general satisfaction. Chaplain of St. Thome, Mr. Dealtry has won golden opinions, as much by his moderate views, and conciliatory manners, as by the earnestness with which he has performed his clerical duties. As officiating Archdeacon, he has secured the good-will of those who at first objected to the appointment, by the happy combination of zeal and good taste which he has exhibited throughout the period of his office. At the same time, the confirmation is not only a just act towards Mr. Dealtry, but a graceful tribute on the part of our new Bishop to the memory of his venerable predecessor."

THE MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COM-PANY has obtained the sanction of Government to proceed with some of the works. One is an aqueduct, by means of which the main canal is to be taken across the river Hindri near Kurnool. will cost one lac and eighty-five thousand rupees. It will consist of fifteen brick arches of 40 feet span, supported on stone piers 11 feet high, the foundations of which are all to be laid on the solid rock, which is met with at depths varying from 12 feet to 2 feet below the bed of the river. The surface breadth of water will be 95 feet and the depth 8 feet. There will be a slope of 3 inches in the length of the work; the velocity will be 5,000 yards, and the volume 400,000 cubic yards per hour. Application has likewise been made to Government to sanction the construction of an annicut and head-works at Sunkasala, at a cost of one lac and twenty-five thousand rupees, and of offices and stores connected therewith, at a cost of Rs. 4,000, but as some of the land on the left bank of the river Tumbuddra belongs to a native rajah, and as arrangements for its transfer have not yet been made, Government has only granted authority for collecting the requisite materials until the transfer is completed.

Hong Kong, Oct. 15 .- The London mail of August 26th arrived here on the 9th instant. A month has elapsed since we last wrote, but, as our readers are aware, the semi-monthly mail has been resumed.

The general news from China and Japan is of a favourable complexion, but some little time will be required to determine whether the present aspect of affairs indicates permanent and solid relations of friendship between those two countries and England. We are entirely without means of ascertaining the footing on which the

we know is, that our Minister has selected Yokuhama as a place of occasional residence, in order, evidently, to give an official colour to his absence from Yedo. Of course, as Mr. Alcock is now understood to be waiting for relief from his very onerous duties as British Minister, it would be unfair to complain of any measures he may have adopted in order to secure his own personal safety; but when we reflect upon the past history of Japan in its capricious relationships with foreign nations, it cannot fail to appear that our prospects of maintaining any sort of terms with this strange people depend greatly upon the mind and character of the man who officially represents us. There may not be much to lose in our altogether dropping commercial and other relations with Japan, but such a step would not well become the English nation, and could scarcely stand as a favourable record on the page of her future history. If anything remain for us to regret, it will perhaps be that Lord Elgin should ever have negotiated a treaty with this country at all. Meantime we all anxiously await the determination of the British Ministry, if not of the British Parliament, in this very perplexing and delicate matter.

The following is the autograph decree which determines the constitution of the new government:-

Our eldest son, Tsai Ch'un, being now constituted Heir Apparent-let Tsai Yuen, Twanhwa Kingse'ou, Sushun, Muyin, Kw'ang Yuen, Tu Han, and Tsiau Yu-ying, with all their might aid him as Counsellors in all things pertaining to the Administration of Government. A Decree Extraordinary.

Tsai Yuen, Prince of I, as the prefix Tsai shows, is of the Imperial House, in the same generation as the Crown Prince.

Twanhwa, Prince of Ching, Commander-in-Chief of the Gendarmerie of Peking, elder brother of Sushun.

"Kingsh'ou, husband of the 6th of the aunts of the Heir Apparent.

"Sushun, one of the two junior members of the Grand Secretariat.

"Muyin, the Prince of I's colleague as Com missioner at Tung Chow, 1860; a President of the Board of War.

"Kw'ang Yuen, a Chinese, some time in the Great Council; a Vice-President.

"Tu Han, Vice-President of the Board of Civil Office, son of Tu Shau-tien, tutor to the Emperor.

"Tsiau Yu'ying, Vice-President of one of the lower Courts."

It will be observed that the Prince of Kung, who is connected in our minds with most of the favourable circumstances in our late difference with China, is not a member of the new administration. His name only occurs among those who are graciously excused prostration on all except occasions of high state. The foreign policy of the new Government is not yet known, but there are not wanting indications of its friendliness to foreign nations. The very strong feeling that recently existed in regard to the conduct of the Chinese Custom house authorities, and the unwarrantable imposts they were latterly exacting, has been appeased by an intimation from our minister at Pekin, to the effect that all the grievances complained of would be redressed, and all illegal exactions - of which there were not a fewwould be made good to every claimant, on application to the Government banker. are not, as yet, able to report that any such claims have been made, either successfully or otherwise, but there is every evidence that the Chinese are acting in good faith. We are of course aware that many notifications in regard to foreigners are liable to be disregarded in particular quarters, and in anticipation of something of this kind Mr. W. H. Medhurst, the Consul at Shanghae. has the following clause in a notification dated 4th October :-

"In spite of the pledge now given in Rule VI. that a certificate, taken out on goods as provided by tariff rule, will protect them from all charges other than the proper transit duty, cases will no doubt and the last of them will most probably have left brother of the Prince of Kung.

foreign embassies are, at present, in Japan. All still occur of illegal exactions on certificated goods before the end of the present month. at the place of produce as well as en route; but the Superintendent of Customs of Shanghae being unable to put a stop to such abuses, save within the limits of his own authority, there is no alternative but to report all squeezes of the kind at once to the undersigned, and he will not fail to bring them to the notice of H.M.'s minister, who no doubt will in time succeed in coming to some arrangement with the Supreme Government on the subject."

This comparatively prompt redress of grievances is, doubtless, attributable to the strong sense of their unfairness that has been felt and expressed by the Shanghae Chamber of Commerce, the general foreign public, and the English press in China. At the same time it is pleasing to notice that the change of Government has not in any way interfered with the proper action of the treaty in this very important and vital respect; and if we consider that the prohibition to visit Pekin has been virtually withdrawn-that, in fact, foreigners are now beginning to swarm in that metropolis, we think there is some reason to congratulate ourselves upon the growing relations of friendship and goodwill that appear to be arising between China and the nations of the West.

The only and the great question that may continue to be agitated for years to come, and in which there may be some risk of our committing ourselves, is our attitude with regard to the rebels.

The rebel movement is beginning to assume a new appearance in the eyes of all who care to watch the progress of events. It is impossible for foreigners here to avoid feeling a certain sympathy with the imperial cause, and various considerations combine to stimulate such a sympathy. Leaving out of view the general disreputable character that usually belongs to mere rebellion, and the particularly bad fame that the rebels in question have acquired by their doings, we cannot but know that the interests of commerce are immensely damaged by the existence and character of this revolution. Were the interests of trade merely postponed until the conclusion of a few campaigns, no one would complain; but, in the present case, the postponement is indefinite. Desolated plains and ruined cities are all that mark the progress of the Taiping movement, and it is not in the nature of things that we should have much sympathy to spare for an insurrection of which those are the only palpable fruits. During the month that has elapsed since we last wrote, there has been no engagement of importance, and we are without any kind of evidence to shew that the rebel cause has gained an inch of ground. what is more particularly deserving of attention is, a strong suspicion which has lately begun to arise, that foreign neutrality runs the risk of being speedily broken in favour of the Imperialist cause That such a course would be safe and profitable admits of question, though our abstract right so to act admits of none. There are quarters in which "the plea of humanity" has already begun to be whispered as a feasible ground for our interfering in this domestic quarrel, and other small symptoms are not wanting of an impending abandonment of neutrality. Let the home authorities look to it in time, and see that the ground is firm before they set down the foot.

From the Northern ports there is no news of consequence to record except the departure of troops from Tien-tsin. The Simoon takes the 60th Rifles, and the Urgent the Land Transport; Fane's Horse will leave in the Vulcan. The settlement of Chefoo (Yentai) has been taken under the protection of French troops, the inhabitants having become alarmed at the proximity of some rebel bands.

At Shanghai the Chinese tradesmen living on the Yang-king-pang have petitioned the Municipal Council to erect defences and maintain a guard round their quarter, as the loose marauders who leave the rebel ranks are becoming a dangerous nuisance; the expense of such protection, if granted, will be paid gladly by the petitioners.

Shameen site will speedily be built upon, and the foreign settlement may possibly resume its old importance.

A case of veritable manstealing was detected here some weeks ago, when a cargo of kidnapped coolies were liberated in Hong Kong harbour, but who are the guilty parties has yet to be determined in the Supreme Court.

The Civil Service Abuses Inquiry is at an end; the long and intimate connection which Mr. Caldwell had with Machow Wong has been viewed as affording sufficient grounds for recommending that officer's dismissal from the public service. The inquiry has embraced much of the matter investigated by a previous commission, although the result is different. The chief witness in this new inquiry has been a convict now in gaol, who has lied a good deal and expects a pardon.

A theatre is the next public edifice which it is proposed to erect in Hong Kong; the Clocktower and the Waterworks are making rapid progress.

The ground long occupied by Messrs. Dent and Co.'s gardens has been sold for the purpose of providing accommodation for a number of Chinese dwelling-houses for the wives and families of the well-to-do comprador class, whose near relatives have hitherto lived at Canton. It is needless to say that such marks of confidence on the part of respectable Chinamen as fetching their wives and families to Hong Kong augurs well for the future safety of the colony, and the maintenance of law and order among our vast Chinese population. Messrs. Dent and Co. have shown both wisdom and kindness in disposing of their land for such a purpose.

By the present mail, Mr. Mercer, the colonial secretary of Hong Kong, proceeds to England on leave of absence. As it has been suggested, erroneously, we are informed that his departure from this colony may not be temporary, it is only due to that gentleman that we should take this opportunity of recording the very high character he has always maintained both in his public and private capacity, and we feel quite certain that this community will be sorry to lose him.

We some time ago alluded to a scandal case that was before the public of this colony some months since, in which the veracity of an officer of high rank in the army was apparently im-Letters have since been received from the gentleman he named as his co-witness, and those letters seem to place this officer's veracity beyond a doubt. As to the construction he put upon what he witnessed, that must still remain a matter of opinion.

DECREES [OF THE NEW EMPEROR.] 24TH AUGUST.

1. "Let Jinshan, Prince of Jui, Itao, Prince of Yu, Yih Sin, Prince of Kung, Yih Hwan, Prince of Ch'un, Chau Tsupei, senior member of the Grand Secretariat, Sushun, a junior member of the Grand Secretariat, Tsiuenking, a President of the Board of War, Chin Fou-ngan, of the Board of Civil Office, and Miensan, of the Colonial Office, with Tu Han, Vice-President of the Board of Civil Office, attend with all solemnity to the celebration of the obsequies [of his late Majesty].

"Let Chin Fou-ngan on receipt of this decree travel night and day to our presence, there to remain.

"Let Itao, Prince of Yu, Yih Sin, Prince of Kung, Chau Tsu-pei, and Tsiuen-King make all the necessary arrangements in the capital. There is no need for them to appear before Us here. Respect this!"

2. "Let Luant'ai, Yang Ch'un, and Li Teh-li [members of the Medical Department] be deprived of their buttons and sashes.

Itao, Prince of Yu, is head of one of the eight families in which the right to the Crown remain. Twanhwa, Prince of Ching, is another. Tsai Yuen, Prince of I, though a branch of the Im-Yih Hwan is a younger IMPERIAL MANIFESTO ANNOUNCING THE DEATH OF THE LATE, AND ACCESSION OF THE PRE-SENT EMPEROR.

"We had been the object of His Majesty the late Emperor's great bounty, than which High Heaven is not more infinite. He fed and watched us. And the years of the Sainted one being but just past thirty, as We waited on Him in the palace, Our love for Him increasing day by day, [it was our hope that] He might count upon a century.

"Last summer it chanced that he was affected with a cough and expectoration, but under medical treatment he recovered, and after the Imperial tour to Lwan Yang (Je Ho) in the autumn, the person of the Sainted One was as well (as much at ease) and strong as formerly. But the continued disorders of the provinces occasioned by the pestilence of rebellion gave him anxiety by night and by day; and, in the spring of this year, a cold he had caught (or a chill to which he was exposed) caused his malady to break out afresh, while in the sixth moon he was attacked by a dysentery, which by degrees so reduced his strength, that in the 16th day of this moon he made an effort, ill as he was, to summon before him Tsai Yuen, Twanhwa, Kingshan, Sushun, Muyin, Kw'ang Yuen, Tu Han, and Chiau Yuying, and gave them a special command to write for him a decree in the Vermilion Pencil constituting Us Hwang Tai Tsz (Heir Apparent).

"With bitter tears We received His Commands, grieving and anxious, trembling and awe-We hoped that the Person of the Affectionate One might yet be saved, and that for long We should continue to receive His gracious commands. But after We had in person been informed of the Will of Him that regarded Us fondly. His malady attacked Him with increasing violence, bringing Him presently to the last extremity, and on the 17th day in the vin watch (3 to A.M.) he sped upwards upon the Dragon to be a guest on high. We tore the earth and cried to Heaven, yet reached We not to Him with Our hand or voice.

"With reverence We call to mind that His late Majesty during the eleven years that He sat upon the throne, with earnest zeal, with painful solicitude [so toiled that] He rested little amid the more than myriad [affairs that demanded His attention]; that on no day did He fail in showing respect to Heaven, or in following in practice the example of His Ancestors. Diligence in His administration of the State, love of His people, were His chief consideration. He remitted taxes, or gave time for their collection. He chose men of ability. In everything that concerned the policy of the empire, or the well-being of the people, the Sacred One was ever unceasingly forethoughtful. Of all that have blood and breath there can be none that is not most sincerely afflicted [at his death]. Our own tears are as of blood. We beat Our breast [in anguish]. Can We yet bear to speak of it? are mindful, however, that as regards the discharge of that most important trust laid upon Our insignificant Self, We may yet rely upon the unswerving fidelity of all Our servants, in the capital or without it, civil or military, be their degree high or low, who will aid Us in the work of government.

"It will more than ever behove the high officers conducting military operations to enforce with strictness the rules of their service, and with speed to put an end to the pestilence of rebellion.

"The Governors-general and Governors of Chih Li and other princes must on their part comfort the people and make them contented; that so they may, as they look upward to Him, console the Spirit, now in Heaven, of His late Majesty. This is our earnest hope.

"Touching the observances of burial and mourning, the last Decree of His late Majesty, which we have with reverence received, ordains that, as of old prescribed, the mourning shall end in twenty-seven days. Our heart cannot indeed allow that this should be. It will be Our duty, in devout conformity with the ancient limitation, to mourn solemnly for three years, that the sincerity of Our babe-like affection may be in some degree satisfied.

"And whereas the great solemnities of sacri- | LAST DECREE OR PUBLIC TESTAMENT ficing to Heaven and Earth, and in the [Nine] Temples, may not assuredly be modified because of the general (or state) mourning, We command the several Courts [whom it concerns] to make search for precedents, and after deliberation, to inform Us concerning the delegation of officers to perform particular ceremonies, and of Our own attendance at and celebration of the proper

"Let the officers and people of the empire adhere to the habit of mourning by law prescribed.

"Let these our commands be made known to all in the capital and the provinces. Respect this!"

4. His Majesty raises the Empress of the late Emperor, and I, the lady of the harem who bore him, both to the rank of Empress Dowager.

5. This cites a decree of 1846, regulating the alteration to be made in the second character of the proper name of the Prince, now Emperor.

6. This instructs the Princes and Ministers commissioned to superintend the funeral rites, to make the necessary preparations for the reception of the late Emperor's coffin, which it will be the duty of the present Emperor to accompany to Peking, where, after having been brought into the Palace, it will be carried to the Kwan Teh Tien, a chapel on Prospect Hill, there to rest until the time, to be chosen by lot, for its transference to the Mausoleum east of the city.

The Governor-General of Chih Li will see to the construction of the rush chapels, [at which the coffin must rest], and the repair of the roads and bridges this side of Ku-peh K'au, the pass in the Great Wall through which runs the road to Je ho: and he and the General of Nomads at Je He to those north of the same pass.

In the Gazette of the 26th August are further decrees.

1. Citing decrees of the last years of the reigns Kiaking and Tau Kwang (1820 and 1850), prohibits the return of the chief civil and military provincials to Pekin to prostrate themselves before the coffin. The late Emperor, as he was dying, gave orders that, as his coffin returned to Heking, the tu-tung (Banner-general) of Je Ho and the Governor-general of Chih Li were to come to Je Ho to salute the coffin, but prohibited all others, even officers of the Chih Li establishment. The war is the reason given, and the high authorities should now prosecute this with vigour.

2. Excuses prostration to various uncles of the present Emperor, the Prince of Kung among the rest. The late Emperor had extended the same favour to his uncle the Prince of Hwui. On state occasions of course all will kotow.

Since the above were translated, the usual decroe has been received, commanding the proper authorities to select a posthumous title of honour for the deceased Emperor. His father, whose reign was styled Tau Kwang, is now always spoken of as Ch'ing Hwang Ti, His Majesty the Prefect, this being one of a set of words appointed by statute for the glorification of the de-Widely as parted monarchs of the dynasty. differs the public verdict respecting the conduct on the throne of father and son, the decree now issued assigns to the latter nearly all the virtues the corresponding document, issued on his accession in 1850, ascribed to his predecessor. He was devout, filial, loved his people, invited admonition, rewarded good counsel, transacted his own business, kept the official establishment in hand, set a good example in his economy, and promoted the study of true philosophy. He sent forth armies to fight the rebels; he assisted the people suffering from drought or flood; he authorised the coast carriage of grain by sea, when the canal transport was interrupted. The great feat of his reign was, however, the repulse of the rebels in their northern expedition of

The reign Hien Fung, Universal Plenteousness, will terminate at the end of this its 11th year, on the 29th January, 1862. The style of the new reign is announced to be Ki'-siang (in Peking, Ch'i Hsiang), which may be rendered Good Fortune.

OF THE LATE EMPEROR.

On the 17th day of the 7th moon of the 11th rear of the reign of Hien Fung (August 22nd, 1861), the Nui-Koh, or Grand Secretariat, received the following decree.

"Already grateful for the disinterested affection with which His late Majesty, canonised as the perfect, had covered Us as with a canopy and nourished us, We received the trust He of His Goodness [to Us,] and of His care [for the empire,] committed to our keeping in humble accordance with the commands reiterated to Us by the Sainted One, namely, that We should regard as fixed principles, a devout fear of Heaven, the imitation of Our Ancestors, diligent attention to government, and love for the people; a respectful recognition of the three [symbols of] unselfishness, the maintenance of peace, and restraint of self-sufficiency;—as soon as We had come to the highest place the throne), We commanded Our servants to recommend Us men of worth and ability; We widened the path of words, so that all Our servants, great or small, might set forth each one his opinions; it being Our hope that so We might have the larger choice of counsel, and be informed of all things, the feeling of Our people (lit., those below) not being either hidden from Us. And from the time of Our accession until now, eleven years, We have given daily attention to the more than myriad [matters of state]. Ourself opening and perusing all documents submitted to Us, giving audience to Our servants presented, We have idled not, were it ever so little, a single day. Nor have We feiled in any case that the chief (Chili Li) or any other of the provinces has been visited by drought or flood, and that application has been made to Us by its governor-general or governor, immediately to shower Our bounteous consideration upon its people, pained in thought for their distress.

"But it is now over tenyears since war broke out, and although the large bodies of rebels who had worked their way into positions at Lien-chin and Fung-kwan Tun, as well as those of Hu Kwang, Fuh Kieng, the Kwang Provinces, and Kwei Chau, have been by repeated [blows] extirpated, peace is not yet restored to the provinces of Kiang Su, Ngan Hwui, and Cheh Kiang; these are disturbed by rebels in various districts.

"Constant reflection upon the suffering of our own black-haired people, exposed time after time to the flame of war, has tormented (lit., scorched) and worn us early and late; we could neither sleep nor eat in comfort; and thus, at last, our bodily strength has waxed weak from the wound that over-anxiety inflicted on our spirits.

"After Our Autumnal Hunting Tour of last year We halted (or abode) at Je He; [but] Yih Sin, Prince of Kung, and his colleagues, having presently placed all things essential to foreign trade on a satisfactory footing, there was peace, as in ordinary times, within and without the capital, and We had issued a degree in the first moon of this year, [declaring] that in the middle moon of spring Our chariot should return to the city, there to discourse with the princes and ministers upon [measures affecting] the government of people, that each might be given effect to in its own turn. For ever the beginning of this summer, however, [We have been suffering from] a violent dysentery, long continuance of which has induced such an increase of debility that We had at last too little strength left to rise. Could this but be [the will of] Heaven? [We did not repine,] yet, feeling that a trust so weighty as that of the divine vessel should be committed to the charge of the eldest and the best in the isz' watch, (about midnight of the 16th day) (21st August) We called before Us the President of the Clan Court, the Junior Vice-President of the same, the Ministers of the Presence, and the Members of the Great Council, and commanded them to write Our decree in vermilion, whereby Our eldest son is constituted Heir-Apparent, and these (or all) Ministers are commanded to support him with all their hearts, and to aid him in governing with their counsel.

"The Heir Apparent is humane and dutiful, quick and intelligent. He will not fail to respect the charge entrusted to him. Let him straightway ascend the throne and continue the Imperial line.

"It is said in the Classic of History, '[A ruler] should know mankind, should comfort his people.' At this moment, in the eastern and southern provinces, military operations are not attended with success, and they of the hundred surnames (the people) are scattered far from their homes, suffering pitiably the [horrors] incidental to war. Foremost, then, among [Our son's] obligations at this crisis, is the awakening of [men from their present torpor to] the study of letters, the repair [or reform] of the apparatus of war, the patronage of worth and ability, and the extermination of the hideous multitude. Can he but exert himself to discharge them?

"Let the princes and ministers who form Our suite here, and the princes and ministers now in the capital, with pure heart, and in friendly concert, unite to aid [Our son], that so his administration may improve until it attain perfection.

"The high officers commanding forces in the field in different parts of the empire, the generals commanding Manchu garrisons, the governorsgeneral and governors of provinces, have received largely of Our favour. Great is the obligation upon them to sweep [sedition] clean away, to exterminate utterly (lit., paring close) the pest of rebellion, and by giving tranquility to the empire and repose to the black haired people, effect the object We leave unaccomplished, and thus in some degree console the spirit that will be in heaven.

"Let [this Decree] be published to the Empire for the information of all men.'

THE STRAITS.

SARAWAK .- The Sarawak steamer Rainbows Captain Hewat, arrived at Singapore on the 23rd of September, having on board Sir James Brooke, K.C.B.

Before leaving Sarawak, Sir James assembled the Malay and Dyak chiefs under his sway, to the amount of some hundreds, and after alluding to the long period he had spent in promoting the welfare of Sarawak and the state of his health, which required repose, he made over the Govern-ment of Sarawak to Captain Brooke as Rajah Mudah. He expressed his hope and expectation that the future progress of Sarawak would be peaceful and prosperous, but said if his presence was again required from whatever cause, he would be ready to come out to Sarawak. The natives were deeply affected by this address, and many of them testified by tears the sincerity of their attachment for their white Rajah.

Sarawak as well as the whole coast now under its jurisdiction is described as showing the greatest signs of returning confidence and prosperity. At all the different rivers the inhabitants are busied in attending to the sago and other cultures, and it is estimated that since the reestablishment of trade on the coast at least 1.600 tons of raw sago have reached Sarawak. In Sarawak itself the utmost activity prevails. The steam mills of the Borneo Company (Limited) as well as the manufactories of the Chinese, &c., were fully employed in the manufacture of sago, tapioca, &c., while the traders in their prahus had proceeded in all directions, some even as far as Pahang, Tringganu, &c., on the east coast of the Malay Peninsula. In fact, so general was the spirit of enterprise, and so many boats were out, that Sarawak is described as having, comparatively speaking, a deserted appearance, owing to the absence of so many men and prahus. A company has been established for the cultivation and manufacture of sugar, and steam machinery for it ordered from England. The steamer Rainbow will in future run twice a month between Sarawak and Singapore, and it is probable a steam gunboat, built of wood, will be procured to keep order along the coast, an iron vessel being considered unsuitable for the work.

The Lanun squadron, consisting of four prahus, which did so much mischief at Billiton and the neighbouring islands, had safely reached its headquarters, a small island near Sulo. While Sir J. Brooke was at Labuan, on his recent visit to Brunai, a boat arrived from Sulo, several persons in which applied to him for protection, stating that they had been captured in the recent Lanun cruise, and sold as slaves at Sulo. These men were ransomed, and after Sir James Brooke returned to Sarawak were forwarded to the Dutch authorities at Pontianak. According to their accounts fifteen large pirate prahus had sailed in the beginning of the season, but they separated in Macassar Strait, the four prahus above mentioned keeping together and making a most successful cruise. From Billiton and the other places they took away a very large number of captives.-Singapore Free Press.

SIAM .- A circular or letter from his Majesty the Major King of Siam to his foreign friends in Singapore, Malacca, Penang, &c., announces the death of his Queen Consort at Bangkok on the 9th of September. The circular states that the Royal Consort had been sick since February, 1860, of a cough, accompanied by vomiting of blood. In the month of August last she lost her most respected half-brother Prince Phra Ong Chau Mongallord, who died of cholera on the 11th of that month. This event so much affected the Queen Consort that she became worse than before, and on the 7th of September she had a very severe attack of coughing, throwing up much blood. She obtained relief from the prescriptions of Siamese physicians, and on the morning of the 9th, after having enjoyed five hours' sleep, she rose and placed herself at the table and partook of her usual meal with some appetite. After this she took her youngest son on her knee, and was giving him some cake, when she was seized with a violent fit of coughing, accompanied by a great quantity of blood, so that in a few minutes she expired. The deceased was named Ramberry Bham-rah-bisamy, and was a granddaughter of the late King. She has left several sons and daughters .- Singapore Free Fress.

1. Stores issued from a magazine to regiments and detachments shall on arrival be carefully examined by commanding officers, on whose responsibility they are to be received, should no objections be offered at the time of such examination.

2. In cases where the commanding officer is of opinion that stores issued from a magazine differ in quality or pattern from the prescribed standard, a committee of selected officers will be appointed by the officer commanding the station to report on the stores. The opinion of this committee, if condemnstores. The opinion of this committee, if condemning the stores as unfit for the service, will, when confirmed by the officer commanding the station, be considered final. A copy of the committee's report is to be immediately forwarded by the officer commanding the station to the general officer commanding division for the information of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, and a duplicate is to be sent to the Inspector-General of Ordnance, in order that he may be able to call upon the ordnance officer who supplied the stores to account for their cer who supplied the stores to account for their issue.
3. The condition of all stores received by a com missary of ordnance from other magazines and de-partments, or from regiments and detachments, is to be fully detailed in the monthly return of receipts. Such stores are to be submitted for the opinion of committees only when their condition or quantity is considered by the ordnance officer to be different from that stated in the invoice, or when he wishes to avail himself of the judgment of officers of superior knowledge and experience in settling impor-tant or doubtful questions. In all other cases stores are to be received on the responsibility of ordnance

4. In the event of stores received from a magazine the event of stores received from a magazine or department, or from a regiment or detachment, being pronounced by a committee to be different in respect to condition or quantity from that stated in the invoice, the decision of such committee will be promptly made known by the commissary of ord-nance to the officer who despatched the stores, and the latter is to furnish to the Inspector-General of Ordnance any explanation on the subject which he ordinates any explanation on the subject which he may think proper.

5. Difference of opinion with respect to the quantity or quality of stores given into a magazine by a regiment or detachment at the station can be frequently reconciled by the presence of the commanding officer or his quarter-master, and the quarter-master should be directed to attend at the magazine for this purpose when his presence is remagazine for this purpose when his presence is requested by the ordnance officer.

magazine for this purpose when his presence is requested by the ordinance officer.

6, All military stores and equipments in use with regiments which have become, in the opinion of the commanding officer, unfit for further service are to be examined and reported on by a regimental committee. Copies of the committee's report and indents for articles to replace the condenned stores are to be transmitted quarterly by the commanding officer to the Inspector-General of Ordnance. In emergent cases indents are to be sent in at once.

7. In all cases when military stores or equipments in use with regiments require renewal before they have lasted the prescribed period, a full report of the circumstances is to be made by the commanding officer to the general officer commanding the division, who will, if he thinks necessary, convene a committee of experienced officers to report upon the causes which have led to the only condemnation of the stores.

8. The committee are to record whether the reaction of the cases which have led to the only condemnation of the stores.

8. The committee are to record whether the rea sons given are, in their opinion, sufficient to justify the renewal, at the public expense, of the stores in question, and the officer convening the committee is to state whether or not he concurs in the opinion of the committee.

9. In the event of the committee considering that the articles should be paid for, they are to name the party or parties who are to be held responsible.

10. Regimental equipments condemned by regiments and detachments will invariably be sent into the nearest magazine, where they will be subjected to further examination and report by the ordnance officer and if necessary by committees, as provided officer, and if necessary by committees, as provided for in rules 3 and 4.

CORRESPONDENCE RELATING TO MEDICAL

CORRESPONDENCE RELATING TO MEDICAL FURLOUGHS AS A QUALIFICATION FOR HIGHER RANK.

To the Right Hon. Sir Charles Wood, Baronet, H.M's Sec. of State for India.

The Humble Memorial of Thomas Brooks Larkins, Surgeon, H.M.'s Bombay Medical Service, RESPECTFULLY SHOWETH,—That the following rest injurious affect on his resistion. order has had a most injurious effect on his position and prospects:

and prospects—
Extract from Secretary of State's letter, No. 397, of 31st October, 1860.

"In future it must be laid down that no time, passed out of India, will be reckoned towards the qualification for the rank of surgeon major, beyond the proportion of furlough, which is now, or may be, allowed to reckon as service for retiring pen-

2. That the qualification for the rank of surgeon major is twenty years' service in India, the propor-tion of furlough allowed to reckon as service for this qualification being two years, and consequently that those medical officers who have exceeded two years must continue to serve in India such period, thus in excess, before becoming entitled to the rank of sur geon major.

geon major.

3. That your memorialist was compelled by broken health, after serving above seven years in the unhealthy climate of Guzerat, to proceed to Europe on sick certificate, under the only regulations in force at that time, namely, the old Furlough Rules. He embarked on the 1st of May, 1848, was permitted to return to his duty, "without prejudice to his rank," and arrived at Bombay on the 5th October, 1851; his total period of absence amounting to three years, five months, and five days. Your memorialist must therefore continue to serve an additional term of one year, five months, and five days. ditional term of one year, five months, and five days, before he becomes entitled to the rank of Surgeon Major, although he completed the required service of twenty years on the 12th February last, having landed in Bombay as an assistant surgeon, 12th

February, 1841.

4. That as a proof of the injurious effects of the order on your Memorialist's position and prospects, your Memorialist begs to point out that he has been surerseded by five officers of his own service, junior to himself, who have been promoted to the rank of surgeon major, viz.:—

Surgeon Forbes,
Surgeon Cameron,

Surgeon Cameron,
Surgeon Pelly,
Surgeon Manisty,
Surgeon Ward,
at this simply because these officers had the good fortune to serve in better climates than your Memorialist, or because, from possessing sounder constitutions, either had no occasion to proceed to Europe, or having proceeded there, found a shorter residence than your Memorialist's sufficient to reinstate their health.

5. That your memorialist must be further super seded, during this space of time, by every officer, junior to himself, who, within that period, shall complete twenty years' service in India.

6. That hitherto promotion in the executive grades of the medical department has been invariably regulated on the principle of seniority, a principle which it was considered desirable to maintain so recently as Feb. 14, 1860, para. 7, clause 3 of Sec. of State's letter, No. 53 of 1860:—" So long as seniority is the invariable rule of promotion to substantive rank in the other branches of the service, it is considered desirable to maintain the same principle in the medical department."

7. That this principle of seniority is nevertheless completely negatived by the order quoted in the first para. of this memorial.

para, of this memorial.

8. That your memorialist begs respectfully and especially to point out that supercession, or the loss of steps in a seniority list, is a punishment awarded by courts martial for un-officer like or un gentlemanly conduct, and your memorialist is fully convinced it could never have been contemplated that an officer, who had obtained sick leave to Europe, under the regulations which guaranteed that his position and standing in the service should remain intact,—and on the faith of which he availed himself of the leave granted him by Government, should by a regulation subsequently made, pay a penalty equivalent to punishment for misconduct, in consequence of his having exceeded a furlough of two quence of his having exceeded a furlough of two years in a total service of twenty years. Yet such is the position in which your memorialist is placed under the terms of the order quoted in the 1st para. of this memorial.

9. That, to illustrate by an example the manner in which his order would act it applied to military as well as medical.officers, your memorialist's position is similar to that of a major who, after attaining to the head of the list of majors, finds that his promotion is stopped until he shall have made up, by a continued service in India the period of absence on sick leave to Europe in excess of the proportion allowed to reckon for pension, and in the meantime is passed over by all the junior majors whose period of absence has not exceeded that proportion.

10. That your memorialist believes that such a regulation, if applied to military officers, would be considered haish and unjust, yet the effect is the same in your memorialist's case; and, moreover, a very invidious distinction is thereby made between military and medical officers, as under existing re-military and medical officers, as under existing regulations the term of service, reckoning for promotion to the rank of brevet captain, is from the date of first commission, and under the terms of the Royal Warrant for the formation of the Staff Corps, the term of service, qualifying for promotion to the rank of major and lieutenant colonel respectively, is also, from the date of first commission, without any deduction on account of furlough.

11. That the order, quoted in the first para. of this memorial, will also have the effect of causing your memorialist to be superseded by all medical officers of the same standing in H.M.'s home army who are allowed to include in their terms of service — reckoning from date of first commission—all leaves of absence, whether on private affairs or sick certificate, an invidious distinction between the two sister services, which your memorialist humbly and respectfully prays may be removed.

12. That your memorialist believes that the grievous operation of the wording of the warrant for the Indian medical service, by substituting "twenty years in India" for "twenty years on full pay," as in the warrant for the British medical service, was not foreseen at the time it was framed.

not foreseen at the time it was framed.

WHEREFORE—YOUR MEMORIALIST PRAYS,
1st. That he may be allowed—in common with military officers in reckoning the terms of their service for promotion to the superior grades of military rank, and in common with medical officers of H.M.'s home army—to reckon the term of service, qualify-ing for the rank of surgeon major, from the date of his first commission as assistant surgeon, viz., 2nd his first commission as assistant surgeon, via, January, 1841.

2ndly. That he may be placed on a footing of equality with medical officers of the same standing in H.M.'s home army, by being allowed to include in the period of twenty years service, qualitying for the rank of surgeon major, the period of his leave of absence as sick cartificate.

the rank of surgeon major, the period of his leave of absence on sick certificate.

3rdly. That the order conveyed in the Secretary of State's letter, No. 307, of Oct. 31, 1860, which has a retrospective and most injurious effect on your memorialist's position and prospects, may be modified so as to place your memorialist in his original position in the seniority list of H.M.'s Bombay medial service and your memorialist will see present cal service, and your memorialist will ever pray.

SALE OF WASTE LANDS.

It has been Lord Canning's good fortune to place the keystone of the triumphal arch commenced by Marquis Wellesley. If the latter is entitled to the honour of having built up the Anglo-Indian Empire on the rough foundation laid down by Warren Hastings, the present Governor-General may lay claim to the distinction of having consolidated the work of his predecessors, and secured its permanency through future ages. The real development of the material resources of India, about which so much has of late years been written and spoken. and towards which so little has hitherto been done, is now at last a possibility, and even comparatively easy of attainment. The one thing needful has at length been done to invite and encourage the settlement of Europeans, or at least the introduction of European capital, industry, and intelligence. Lord Canning is prepared, as the crowning act of his ever memorable administration, to carry out the instructions forwarded to his Government by Lord Stanley, and which have remained in abeyance until the present time. It is now in the power of any man, possessed of the necessary means, to purchase a large estate in perpetuity, free from all prospective demand on account of land revenue, or to redeem the existing land revenue by the payment once for all of the value of that revenue. The rules under which either of these desirable objects may be achieved are equitable in themselves. and clearly enunciated.

The prospecting settler having fixed upon the lot of land he proposes to make his own, will at once obtain possession of the same, on depositing with the collector ten per cent. of the purchase money, together with the estimated cost of survey should his choice fall upon land previously unsurveyed. The balance must be paid within three months, or interest will be charged at the rate of ten per cent. per annum, and the land will be held liable to resale in default of regular payment of such interest, should there be no crops or moveable property whence the Government claim can be satisfied. The price of unassessed land is not to exceed 5s. per scre for uncleared land, or 10s. per acre for land cleared of jungle, a due proportion being deducted for swamps and irreclaimable wastes: this scale of prices to remain in force for five years, dating from 1st January, 1862. In Eastern Bengal. Cachar, and Assam, and similar districts, no grant is to exceed 3,000 acres, and in the neighbourhood of towns, hill stations, and sanitaria, a narrower limit will be assigned. A further grant, however, may be obtained as soon as the grantee's name has been provisionally entered in the collector's records as proprietor of a lot. This second grant, being surveyed at | ject, and which may date prior to the grant his expense, will be reserved for five years, but subject to his payment in that time of ten per cent. of the purchase money, and also to his having brought two-thirds of his original grant under cultivation: on fulfilment of these obligations any additional number of grants may be successively secured. Holders of grants under existing rules, who have not yet completed the purchase thereof, will be permitted to avail themselves of these new regulations, but without being restricted as to area. In the event of more than one applicant offering to buy a particular tract, it will be sold to the highest bidder; but only in such instances, and in the case of suburban lots will recourse be had to sales by auction. Should it so happen that after the land has been allotted, a previous interest in the property be established by any person within twelve months-good reason being shown why this claim was not advanced before the allotment was made -the Government will indemnify such original proprietor, but the grantee will not be disturbed in the possession of his grant. The Government also resigns all rights of forest, pasturage, mines, and fisheries, and all power to make roads, canals, tanks, &c., &c., without making due allowance for the same. The grantee is left to consult his own convenience solely and entirely with reference to clearance and cultivation. He may cut down and clear away as much or as little as he thinks proper, and is equally at liberty to cultivate whatever crops he deems most likely to repay him. The tenure thus obtained will be "that of an heritable and transferable property held in perpetuity free from all claims either of the Government or of third persons prior to, or inconsistent with, the grant."

While anticipating the most beneficial results from the sale of waste lands, Lord Canning is yet more sanguine as to the redemption of the land revenue, believing that "increased security of fixed property, and comparative freedom from the interference of the fiscal officers of the Government, will tend to create a class which, although composed of various races and creeds, will be peculiarly bound to the British rule; whilst, under proper regulations, the measure will conduce materially to the improvement of the general resources of the Empire." We very sincerely trust that his Excellency may not be disappointed, but we much doubt if any great number of natives will be found to avail themselves of this privilege. In the first place, they have by no means a reverential belief in the permanence of the British rule; and, secondly, it is contrary to their character to purchase prospective advantages at the cost of a heavy immediate sacrifice. The terms offered to them, however, are sufficiently liberal. In the beginning of the experiment not more than one-tenth of the total land-tax in any one collectorate is to be redeemable, without the express permission of the Governor-General in Council. The price is fixed at twenty years' purchase of the existing assessment, and the tenure will be "that of an heritable and transferable property held in perpetuity free of all demand on account of land revenue, or of the Government. But such tenure will not carry with it, as that of waste lands will, immunity from any legal claims, other than those of layas, where some eighteen thousand sufferers Government, to which the lands may be sub- were daily employed in constructing a raised At that period in the city of Delhi 10,000 per-under this resolution.'

Under the permanent settlement the only person entitled to redeem the land revenue is the one who now pays it to Government, and the effect will be strictly limited to such claims, "reserving all existing sub tenures or subordinate rights of occupancy." In the case of grants already given for a term of years at progressively increasing rents, the holder will be at liberty to redeem the future land tax at the highest rate fixed for any year during the currency of his grant. It is not necessary, however, to enter at greater length into these details, except to observe that all sums paid in purchase of waste lands or in redemption of land revenue will be paid to commissioners to be periodically invested according to the requirements of the law, and for the purpose of reducing the pressure of the annual burden upon the wealth of the community.

COLONEL BAIRD SMITH'S SUPPLE-MENTARY REPORT.

On the subject of Colonel Baird Smith's conscientious industry and intelligence there can be but one opinion, however little to be admired is his excessive prolixity. It is the inveterate habit of Indian officials to compile voluminous essays whenever called upon to draw up a statistical report for the guidance of the Government. They cannot forego the opportunity of displaying their erudition and research, and of exhausting every phase of the question under consideration. Nothing is left to be inferred by the reader's own judgment, and even moral reflections and copy-book platitudes are introduced to wind up a "sensation" paragraph. But if there is one thing more than another especially dear to an Indian "Commissioner" it is the tabular arrange-ment of figures, the minuteness of which is only equalled by their inaccuracy. The report now lying before us comprises every one of the defects, as well as all the best points, characteristic of the Indian Services. It is rather such a paper as one would look for in the National Review, than the carefully condensed statement of facts and suggestions which is expected in a report to Government. Twentyeight closely printed columns of a paper larger than the Times are filled with a vast variety of details, interesting enough in themselves, but not at all necessary for the elucidation of the subject to which they relate. And it must be remembered that this is the third report submitted by Colonel Smith with reference to the late famine. Lord Canning's horror and dismay on receiving such a formidable document may easily be imagined, and right heartily must he have rejoiced to think that in a few months he would be beyond all reach of a similar infliction.

With the termination of the spring harvest the destitution of the agricultural classes became truly appalling. In the Punjab districts alone fully ninety thousand otherwise helpless poor were supported by the Relief Committees, while the total number thus maintained fell little short of one hundred and forty thousand daily. Special relief works were provided for the employment of such as were still fit for labour, and Colonel Smith describes the system pursued at the Mohun Pass, in the sub-Hima-causeway down the middle of the Pass. This large body of labourers was divided into working parties, stationed at short distances from one another over a space of about seven miles. Grass huts were erected for their accommodation, and abundant supplies of food provided at reasonable rates. The unfortunate creatures, however, had been so completely worn out by famine before they applied for aid that they were quite unfit for hard work, and it was calculated that one ablebodied man was equal to four of these emaciated beings. The sanitary arrangements appear to have been excellent, and so good was the general health of the people that at the time of Colonel Smith's visit there were only thirty-two patients in hospital out of the whole number. Of the eighteen thousand one hundred and eightythree persons employed in the Mohun Pass fifteen thousand six hundred and fifty-three belonged to the district of Saharunpoor, and of these five thousand four hundred and fiftyeight came from the town itself. And yet the pergunnah of Deobund, which is more populous than Saharunpoor, and where the famine was more intensely felt, sent only nine hundred and twenty-seven. The anomaly is explained by the existence of tribal prejudices against relief in the form of public works-common village labourers and weavers alone taking to it kindly. Some families whose private resources were not wholly exhausted divided themselves into two sect ions, which relieved one another at the works at stated intervals. The influence exercised by canals of irrigation in mitigating the pressure of the famine was very encouraging. A steadily flowing tide of immigration set in towards the irrigated tracts, to the estimated extent of 80,000 men, of whom threefifths were cultivators, each taking with him a yoke of oxen for the plough. Many of them were also accompanied by their wives and children, so that not fewer than 160,000 human beings, who must otherwise have been supported by charity, found food and shelter in "these fruitful canal tracts which run through the famine districts, as rods of iron run through tottering buildings, binding and strengthening the community." In the Bolundshuhur district the effects of the famine are painfully prominent. The decrease in the area of cultivation is calculated at two-fifths, and in the gross produce one-half, while the loss in cattle amounted to nearly 100,000 head. The emigration exceeded 48,000, and the mortality traceable to starvation is stated at 24,708, or about 31 per cent. of the entire population. the Central Section alone upwards of 80.000 human beings are believed to have perished from hunger and its incidental diseases. In the Western Section the consequences of the famine have been still more disastrous. In one district of the Delhi Division, the area of which contained 125,000 acres-87,500 of these being under cultivation-and 1,064 wells, only 2,678 yoke of oxen have been left alive. It would, therefore, be necessary to procure 15,000 yoke to admit of the usual breadth of land being cultivated, but as this would imply an outlay of some £50,000, it is clearly out of the question. In this same district, out of a population of 50,000 souls, 4,296 have perished of starvation, and 5,263 have emigrated, while in June last relief was daily afforded to 7,667 persons. The greatest suffering was about the middle of June.

sons were daily receiving food, of whom a large proportion were widows and fatherless children, and the total number of helpless poor in the famine tract was estimated at 140,000, being an increase of 60,000 since the middle of May. The average subsistence rate for each individual was about 2s. 9d. monthly, and the total expenditure up to the end of the present yearlis estimated at £95,000, independently of £70.000 laid out in aiding the impoverished agriculturists to purchase cattle and seed grain. A further sum of £20,000 will probably be required for the maintenance of the numerous orphans entirely dependent on charity, though a considerable number have been provided for in the households of the Hindoo and Mahomedan gentry.

To prevent the recurrence, or at least to mitigate the ravages, of such a terrible visitation in future years, Colonel Baird Smith offers several suggestions worthy of notice. first is an earnest recommendation that the land-tax should be settled permanently, as in Bengal. There can be no doubt that the present system of raising the assessment at short intervals to meet the increased value of the land is decidedly prejudicial to the agriculturist, and discourages him from all attempts at improvement. The Government demand is already exorbitant, but would not be thought oppressive if the natives were assured that it would never be augmented. In the Madras Presidency the land is liable to a fresh assessment every year, and though, practically, advantage of that power is seldom taken, the consequence is that no inducement is held out for the reclaiming of waste lands or the better cultivation of those already under tillage. Owing to the more accurate knowledge of native tenures now possessed by the British authorities, there would be no danger of a repetition of the blunders that have operated so unfortunately in Bengal, and the interests of all classes might, with little difficulty, be equitably secured. It has been urged, indeed, by many revenue officers, that it would be no easy task to fix the rates in districts irrigated by canals constructed at the public expense, because the accounts of the revenue and irrigation departments have become almost inseparably interwoven. An estate is charged a certain water-rate by the canal officers, but by means of irrigation its character becomes entirely changed in a few years. For instance, a certain village in the Meerut district in the year 1840 contained 676 acres of irrigated, and 299 acres of unirrigated land, besides 285 acres of waste land; but by 1860 the irrigated area had increased to 1,064 acres, including 95 acres of the previously uncultivated land, while the value of the gross produce rose from Rs. 10,664 to Rs. 18,130. This is no isolated or extraordinary case, but may be regarded as a fair example of the benefits arising from artificial irrigation. Now, as canals are made at the cost ARRIVALS.

November 20. Valkyrien, Broberg, Akyab.—91. Wild cannoble that those who gather the fruits of such enterprises should not be called upon to contribute to the public treasury in proportion to their local advantages. It is true that the country in general is benefited by the improvement of any one part, and experience has shown that even the Goojurs may be reclaimed to habits of industry by the prospect of doubling their profits. Besides it was alroted through the incomplete lines of rail-action of even the incomplete lines of rail-action of even the incomplete lines of rail-action of even the incomplete lines of rail-action of even the incomplete lines of rail-action of even the incomplete lines of rail-action of even the incomplete lines of rail-action of even the incomplete lines of rail-action of even the incomplete lines of rail-action of even the incomplete lines of rail-action of even the incomplete lines of rail-action of even the incomplete lines of rail-action of even the incomplete lines of rail-action of the Government by the intringation canals themselves are also in the highest degree metalled roads are also in the highest degree serviceable. It is only by means of roads that the railway system can be made fully to answer, and the attention of the Government cannot too soon be directed towards the construction of feeders to connect the different lines with the chief provincial marts. For this cannot too soon be directed towards the construction of feeders to connect the different lines with the chief provincial marts. For this cannot too soon be directed towards the construction of feeders to connect the different lines with the chief provincial marts. For this cannot too soon be directed towards the construction of feeders to connect the different lines with the chief provincial marts. For this this, there is every reason to believe that vast tracts of land now lying waste will gradually be brought under cultivation, and be made to contribute largely to the aggregate wealth of the community. Still, it is only fair that the public exchequer should derive a direct advantage from the outlay it has incurred for a particular object and for the special advantage of a section of tax-payers. Why, then, should there not be a village record of rights in water analogous to the record of rights in land, as a first step towards the adjustment of Government claims? Or, rather, the first thing to be done is the constitution of an Irrigation Survey and Settlement Establishment, which should regulate all that pertains to water revenue. Through this agency the perpetual settlement of irrigation rates might be arranged, and the power of redemption afforded to landowners. as is the case in Northern Italy. According to Colonel Smith, fixity of demand is universally applicable to irrigation revenue settlements, modified so as to be adapted to irrigation by the natural flow of the water, or by the use of machinery. As regards, therefore, the general dealing with the revenue of the Famine Tracts, whether derived from land-tax or water-rate, he is of opinion that it "would be safe, prudent, and profitable to the State-

"1st. To declare the public demand for the former perpetual in all districts, or sections of districts, unaffected by works of irrigation executed at the public cost exclusively, where prolonged settlements have previously existed, and where there is reason to be confident that these settlements are fair and equitable. ments are fair and equitable.

"2nd. To institute revision in districts or sections of districts where there is cause to suspect the equity of existing settlements, with a view to the fixture of the demand on the land in perpetuity in them also, with the least practicable delay.

"And, finally, to except such sections of districts as are under the direct influence of Government canals from perpetual settlement of the land revenue for such time only as may be indispensably that irrigation survey and settlement which has just been described and recommended, when the water rate should also be fixed in perpetuity.

In addition to the permanent settlement of Government demands and the development of the irrigation system, Colonel Smith attaches great importance to the improvement of internal communications, for the purpose of conveying the surplus produce of fertile regions to those less highly favoured. During the late famine the importation of food into the afflicted district amounted to about oneninth of the entire quantity required to maintain that population for the interval between two harvests. One result was the abatement of prices to the extent of 37 per cent. below their maximum, and had the means of transport allowed it, sufficient corn might have been introduced to bring down the prices to a moderate rate for a period of undoubted scarcity. With the completion of railways local famines will become almost impossible, and, as it was, great relief was afforded through the purpose, however, funds must be provided to the probable amount of half a million sterling, distributed, of course, over several years. By the adoption of these various suggestions Colonel Baird Smith is convinced that famine will for the future be partially prevented and very largely mitigated.

MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.

The Report of the Directors states that they are enabled to report favourably to their shareholders regarding the progress of operations in India, and that, seconded by the local officers of Government as to the transfer of land, the chief engineer was, on the 30th of July last, enabled to proceed with the construction of works, so that more than 14,000 labourers were, at the date of the last advices, employed thereon. Considerable difficulty was experienced and time expended in the reorganisation of the establishment which had been broken up by the stoppage of works at Kurnool, but, nevertheless, the chief engineer was in a position to break ground on the day named, having previously secured the approval of Government to the working plans and estimates of the first 174 miles of the main canal-viz., between Soonkasala and Kurnool. A system of payment to labour masters according to measurement of work done has been adopted with success. In addition to the section of 17½ miles thus entered upon, plans and estimates of the intended anicut across the Toombuddra river at Soonkasala, and the aqueduct over the Hindry River, have received the approval of the Madras Government, and preparations having been already made for their construction, they are now in course of execution; while the estimates and plans of the next 55 miles of the main canal (including the cutting at Mittacondal) had, according to late intelligence, been placed before the Government for sanction. The main canal, as planned for the double purpose of irrigation and navigation, will commence on the Toombuddra River at Soonkasala, a village distant about 18 miles above the town of Kurnool, and will continue past that town through the watershed down the valley of the Koondair, crossing to the south of the Pennair River near to Camulapore, proceeding thence to Somaish-Warum, and then traversing the district of Nellore to Kistnapatam, on the east coast of Madras, throwing off in its course numerous subsidiary channels, wherever land may be found available for irrigation. The entire length of the main trunk line will extend over about 310 miles. These works, for the purpose of construction, have been divided into five sections or divisions, and each placed under the charge of an executive and assistant executive engineer. It is estimated that between Soonkasala and Mittacondal 60,000 acres of land will be commanded for irrigation, 2,000 acres lying to the west, and 58,000 to the east of the Hindry River; the channels of distribution are not, however, yet laid out, and, therefore, the real extent of irrigation has not been ascertained with accuracy, but surveys are now proceeding for that purpose. The Koondair division of the project will, it has been estimated, command for irrigation 300,000 acres of highly-productive land in the valley.

A FEMALE FORGER .- The Madras Athenœum and Statesman mentions a curious case. The wife of a respectable man, holding a high and responsible situation in the Postal Department, was arrested on a charge of having forged a check upon the Madras Bank to the amount of 3,000 rupees. After a private investigation into the matter by two magistrates, the lady was committed to take her trial at the next sessions. It is added that the defence of the fair delinquent is such as will reflect no credit on the morals of that Presi-

FINE HEAD OF HAIR.

The BEARD, WHISKERS, and MUSTACHIOS are realised by the use of ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL

ROWLANDS' MACASSAR OIL.

THIS ELEGANT and FRAGRANT OIL possesses wenderfully nourishing powers for promoting the growth, preserving and beautitying the human har. It prevents it from tailing off or turking gr. y, strengthens weak hair, and makes it beautifully soft, curly, and glossy. In the growth of the bard, whiskers, eyebrows, and neustachios it is unfaining in its stimulative operation. In reference to the hair of early childhood, the use of the oil a strended with the happiest effects; mild, invitorating, and purifying in every instance, it dispels scurf and dandraft, and renders unnecessary the use of the fine comb. In all climates it alike displays its incomparable results, and has long been an established favourite in India. Price Ss. 6d., 7s., 10s. 6d. (equal to four small), and 21s. per bottle.

PRICHARD'S AROMATIC STEEL PILLS for weak and relaxed constitutions, are especially recommended to persons residing in India and other hot climates. Their immediate action is to disperse that unpleasant feeling of relaxation and langour, by constringing and invigorating the muscular and neivous system, and strengthening the whole frame. By supplying the waste to which all weak constitutions are liable, they arrest that premature decay of nature so common in all hot climates. In boxes, 1s. 14d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s.

Prepared by W. PRICHARD, Apothecary 65, Charing-cross, London, and may be had of all Medicine Vendors.

No medicine will so safely and speedily resture a deranged stomach or orpid liver to order. No other preparation will so effe tually and heathly conduct digestion so that sia ms. flatulency, and other tormer-ts of dyspepsis cannot, by any press bitty, arise; or, if its sent, will be soon cured. The power of these Pills in removing acidity of the stomach, sick hendsche, billousness, duarthers, dysentery, and debility, is wonderful. They act as tonics, alteratives, and general regulators of the frame.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Indian journals received by the Bombay Mail of the 12th November are full of detailed descriptions of the Grand Durbar held at Allahabad on the 1st of that month. As a spectacle it appears to have been extremely magnificent, and well calculated to impress the native chiefs with a due sense of the honour conferred upon them in being made members of the new order of knighthood. His Excellency the Viceroy has at length definitively decided that Allahabad is to be the seat of Government in the North-West Provinces, and has given orders for the erection of such public buildings as will be required for that purpose.

It was originally Lord Canning's intention to proceed from Allahabad to Lucknow before returning to Calcutta, but his lordship's movements will probably be changed in consequence of receiving the sad tidings of Lady Canning's death, which took place at Calcutta on the 18th November. The Countess had for some time past been in indifferent health, and in the hope of amendment had tried the effects of a change of air by a trip to Darjeeling. Apparently, her case was too desperate for so mild a remedy, and thus another victim in high places has been sacrificed to the climate of Bengalclearly showing the advisability of moving the seat of Government to a more healthy locality. The late Lady Canning was the eldest daughter of the late Lord Stuart de Rothesay, G.C.B., and Lady Elizabeth Margaret, third daughter of Philip, third Earl of Hardwicke, and was born in 1817. She married, September 5, 1835, Earl Canning, then the Hon. C. J. Canning, the only son of the well-known statesman. Her ladyship was for many years Lady in Waiting to the Queen, and was deservedly much esteemed at Court. The late Countess was sister of Louisa, Marchioness of Waterford.

Although only four native princes have received from the hands of the Governor-general the insignia of the Order of India, both the Gaekwar and Holkar were invested with that Order in their respective dominions on the same day that witnessed the durbar at Allahabad. At Baroda the ceremony of investiture was performed by Major Wallace, assisted by Mesars. Mansfield, Warden, and Gibbs, of the Stevenson, Dr. Corbett, Qrur, Twigg, Lieuk Hay.

Civil Service; while at Indore Major Keating officiated, in consequence of the death of Sir Richmond Shakespear. That distinguished and meritorious officer died of bronchitis on the 29th October.

It is positively asserted that Lord Canning's last act will be to extend the permanent settlement of the land revenue to the North-West Provinces. The unanimous reports of Colonel Baird Smith and Mr. Paterson Saunders have probably encouraged his lordship to determine upon the final adoption of a course to which he is known to have been longifavourably disposed.

Cholera appears to have been raging very fearfully in Cabul, but, by the latest accounts the mortality had diminished to fifty per diem. It has likewise committed terrible ravages in Rajpootana. In other parts of India the general health, both of natives and Europeans, is all that can he desired.

A rumour of serious income-tax riots in Assam had reached Calcutta, and it is even reported that Lieutenant Singer has been barbarously murdered at Nowgong, and his body thrown into the river. Hoping against hope, it is yet possible that there may have been some exaggeration in this statement.

As the Penal Code of India will become law from the 1st of January next, it has been notified, for the information of Junior Civil Servants, that they will be examined at future Departmental Examinations on that Code instead of on the Criminal Regulations of 1827.

Elsewhere we give a long list of officers appointed to the Staff Corps. The forthcoming Relief will also be found fully detailed, and likewise some final remarks on the Amalgamation catechism by the Secretary of State for India.

REMARKS ON "QUESTIONS" AND "ANSWERS."

No. 960 of 1861.—His Excellency the Governor-General in Council is pleased to publish for general information the following observations by the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, on answers given by Government of India to questions connected with the late changes in the India Army, and published in Government General Order Nos. 598 and 606, dated 9th and 11th July, 1861.

QUESTION.

6. [Paragraph 50.] An Officer is permanent Second in command, and Acting Commandant of an Irregular Corps. Will it be necessary for him to join the Staff Corps before he can become permanent Commandant?

Answer.

6. No. It rests with the Commander-in-Chief or with the Government. Officers not joining the Staff Corps " will continue to be available, as heretofore, for their present duty, or for any other duty to which they may be appointed by Government."

REMARKS.

- 6. Approved. The Government or the Commander-in-Chief can appoint him if they see fit.
- 7. [Paragraph 50.] If an Ensign signifies his wish to volunteer for general service, and after he has done so, but before he is nominated to a British Regiment, a vacancy occurs among the Lieutenants in one of the present Regiments of Native Infantry, would he, by having volunteered, forfeit his claim to the vacant Lieutenancy, supposing him to be the senior applicant?
- 7. An Ensign will not be debarred the benefits of intermediate regimental promotion under existing regulations, occurring up to the date of his transfer to one of the new Line Regiments.

7. Not approved. (See Despatch No. 319, dated August 10, 1861.) The answer should be:—

An Ensign will not be debarred the benefits of intermediate regimental promotion under existing regulations, occurring up to the date of his transfer to a British Regiment other than one of the new Line Regiments. If transferred to one of the latter, his position will be determined with reference to the rank he actually held in his former regiment on the 18th February, 1861. No subsequent alteration or adjustment of rank will be

8. [Paragraphs 50, 58.] If an Officer volunteers for general service, does he thereby cease to derive any benefit from casualties occurring in his present regiment, subsequent to his volunteering, but before he is provided for in a British Regiment?

8. No: volunteering beyond the requirements of the new Line Regiment will not make any difference in the position of Officers.

8. The answer should be as follows:

No; volunteering beyond the requirements of the new Line Regiments will not make any difference in the position of Officers, unless and until they are transferred to other Regiments of the Line.

- 9. [Paragraph 50.] An Officer having volunteered for general service in the Line, will he, in the event of his service not being required in any Regiment of the Line, be then in the same position as before he volunteered; or does he, by merely volunteering, surrender his former posi tion in the Indian Army, and render himself amenable to the Staff Corps Rules?
- 9. He remains in his former position unaltered. He has nothing to do with the Staff Corps. 9. The answer should be as follows:
- No. He remains in his former position unaltered, unless and until he is posted to a new Line Regiment. He has nothing to do with the Staff Corps.
- 14. If their services are not required by Government for new Line Corps, are Officers, volunteers for general service, liable to be posted to any other Corps, and if so, will they enter as juniors of their rank?

- 14. Such Officers will not be liable to be posted to any other Corps.
- 14. Not approved; the answer should be: They are not compulsorily liable, although eligible. All Officers posted to British Regiments enter as juniors of their rank.
- 15. [Paragraph 52.] A Colonel and Lieutenant-Colonel commands a Regiment of Madras European Infantry. He inquires whether, if he elect for general service, he will forego all future claim to off-reckonings and Colonel's allowance?
- 15. His election for general service, should he be accepted, will disconnect him from the Indian service, and he will forego all claim to Colonel's allowance in the Indian Line.
- 15. Approved; but add the following:will become eligible to a Regiment under the regulations of the British Army."
- 17. [Paragraph 55.] In the event of either of the new Line Regiments being ordered Home, are any of the Officers who have accepted the invitation to join it liable to be placed on halfpay, consequent on the Regiment being reduced to the strength of the Home Establishment?
- 17. They will be subject to the conditions of Her Majesty's Line service. The strength of Infantry Regiments on the Home Establishment is at present the same as that of the new Line Regiments in India; in the Cavalry Service the Home Establishment is less by one Troop than the strength of a Regiment in India.

17. Approved; but add the following:-" Less by 1 Major, 1 Captain, 1 Lieutenant, 1 Cornet.

18 [Paragraph 56.] How and when is a Major of one of the new Line Regiments to obtain promotion to Regimental Lieutenant-Colonel, and from that to Regimental Colonel?

18. "In the promotion to the Field Officers, the fitness and efficiency of Officers will be taken into account." As regards Regimental Colonels, no instructions have been received by Government."

19. Not approved; the answer should be:-The Major will obtain promotion when the Lieutenant-colonel is removed from the Regiment by death or otherwise; his fitness and efficiency being taken into account. His future appointment to the Colonelcy of a Regiment will be made in accordance with the usages of the British

20. [Paragraphs 68, 69.] Are the Officers commanding the European Infantry and Native Infantry Depots, and the Depots at Landour, Wellington, Aboo, Khandalia, &c., and the Adjutants and Quarter-masters of the same to be considered to have been on Staff duty whilst so employed?

20. Depot Staff Officers are not on permanent Staff employ, and therefore are not entitled, as such to enter the Staff Corps. But in the event of their subsequently obtaining admission into the Staff Corps they will be entitled to count as Staff service the time passed as Depot Staff

20. Not approved; the answer should be: Officers commanding such Depots and Depot Staff Officers shall be considered in all respects to have been on the Staff during their tenure of such appointments, provided they shall have passed the prescribed test in Hindustanee, and are in all other respects qualified.

27. [Paragraphs 69, 84, 87.] Is an Officer who has been doing duty with the Sappers and Miners to be considered to have been on Staff employ while so doing duty?

- 27. These Officers are permanently appointed, in the same manner as Officers permanently doing duty with Irregular Corps; and service passed with the Sappers and Miners will count as Staff service.
- 27. Approved; the question having no reference to Engineer Officers.
- 30. [Paragraph 74.] Whether Officers, now on the Staff, volunteering and being selected for the new Line Regiments will be allowed to retain their Staff appointments under Rule 74?
  - 30. Yes, if the C. in C. can spare them.
- 30. Approved, but add:-- "And the appointments be purely military, held for a limited period, and which do not require that an Officer be seconded."

- 38. [Paragraph 78.] With reference to paragraph 78, are Officers on the Staff obliged at once to declare whether they desire to join the Staff Corps, with the option of correcting their election within six months?
- 38. It is not necessary that an Officer should send his decision in to the Adjutant-general's Office before the 21st October, 1861, but it must reach the Adjutant-general's Office by that date. The decision once announced in General Orders cannot be cancelled.

39. Approved; but add:-- Except in the case of an Officer resigning the Service under the scheme published in G. O. G. G." (See Despatch to India, No. 320 of 10th August, paragraph 24).

- 39. [Paragraph 74.] An Officer on the Staff belonging to one of the present European Regiments having accepted the invitation to join his representative Line Corps, can be not have the benefit of paragraph 74, the same as any other Officer of a British Regiment [Vide paragraph 74 and 89.] i.e., elect within six months to join the Staff Corps, and be eligible for promotion under the provision of the Royal Warrant?
  - 39. Yes.

39. Not approved; answer should be:-

Having once been posted to a Line Regiment, he is no longer eligible, under paragraph 74, to join Staff Corps. He will have already had the option of doing so, and have made his election for a Line Regiment.

- 41 [Paragraph 84.] Does the time an Officer of the Staff Corps may be on leave, in or out of India, count towards the periods required to be served in the Staff Corps for promotion?
- 41. Yes.
  41. Not approved; the answer will be found in Despatch from this Office, No. 315 of 9th August.
- 45 [Paragraph 85.] Will a substantive Lieutenant-Colonel and Brevet-Colonel, joining the Staff Corps on its formation, be eligible to "get one step of rank " on transfer to the Staff Corps, i.e., will he be promoted to substantive " Colonel" or " Major-General?"
- 45. There is no such rank in the Staff Corps as substantive Colonel. No instructions have been received regarding promotion to Major-general in the Staff Corps.
- 45. Approved; but add after the first clause: "As a matter of course, all Colonels in the Staff Corps will be placed on the General List of the British Army for promotion to Major gen."
- 49. Should a Major of upwards of 22 years" service retire before the 1st October next, can he claim, in addition to the Major's pension, the extra pension of £50 per annum offered by the Secretary of State?
- 49. Yes. If he have served 22 years in India, of which not more than two years may have been passed on leave, he may retire before the 1st October next, on the pension of his actual rank, and will be entitled to the extra pension of £50 in addition.
  - 49. Approved; but add:-
- "Should an Officer retire before the 1st Octo ber, 1861, having been posted to and received a step of rank in the Staff Corps, such posting and promotion will be cancelled."
- 51. [Paragraph 93.] Can Officers of the Staff Corps take 20 months' leave on Private affairs, retaining their appointments?
- 51. Yes. Such is the rule laid down in the 93rd paragraph of the General Order. But a reference has been made to the Secretary of State on this point.
- 51. Not approved; see Despatch from this Office, No. 301, dated 2nd August, 1861.
- 52. Are the above 20 months referred to available in one indulgence, or are they the aggregate of sundry short leaves?
- 52. The leave may be in one period, or it may be the aggregate of sundry short leaves, subject to the conditions of the new Furlough Rules; vide paragraph 20 of the same.
  - 52. Not approved; see preceding answer.
- 64. [Paragraph 93.] Is the substantive rank of Officers in the Staff Corps to be considered to be their only regimental rank, the Staff Corps being their only Regiment?

54. Yes. The Staff Corps is their only regiment, so to speak; but the term is an incorrect one.

54. Substitute the following answer:-

"Yes." The Staff Corps is their only regiment, and their rank in it up to that of Lieutenant-Colonel inclusive is substantive rank.

56. [Paragraph 93.] Is it compulsory, with reference to the latter part of paragraph 93, on all Officers joining the Staff Corps to select the new Furlough Regulations, or is this intended merely for British Officers joining the Staff Corps? And are Indian Officers allowed the option of selecting the old or new Furlough Regulations, as guaranteed to them by General Order by the Governor-general, No. 1,150, of 17th November, 1854?

56. All will be under the new Furlough Regulations. No option is allowed to an Officer who may join the Staff Corps. He must accept the new Rules as one of the conditions of joining that Corps.

50. Approved; but add:—"He brings with him to the Staff Corps so much service for pension as he may have acquired up to the date of joining, whatever rules had applied to him up to that time."

57. [Paragraph 93.] Can an Officer of the Staff Corps proceed to Europe on leave on private affairs (retaining his appointment) as often as his service can be dispensed with, or does this privilege refer to leave on private affairs in India only?

57. Officers of the Staff Corps will be under the new Furlough Rules, except as to the increase of 20 months explained in the General Order. These Rules prescribe periods of service to be performed in India at intervals between furloughs.

57. Approved; the increase referred to being from 15 to 20 months.

58 [Paragraph 94]. What number of "Colonel's allowances" will be appropriated to the Madras Staff Corps, and from what date will they become available?

58. This question is under the consideration of her Majesty's Government.

68. Approved; but add:—" And will be decided as soon as the strength of the Corps is ascertained."

59 [Paragraphs 96, 98.] Should an Officer be placed on the half-pay list or be unemployed, under paragraphs 96 to 99 of the General Order, will his time thus passed in India count towards retiring pension?

59. If on the half pay list, no; as no half-pay service counts for pension.

But Officers in the Staff Corps, though not actually employed, will be allowed to reckon their service during such period towards promotion and pension.

59. Approved; the second clause amended as follows:—

"But Officers in the Staff Corps, while in India and available for duty, will, even though not actually employed, be allowed," &c.

65. [Paragraph 103.] Must a Lieutenant-Colonel joining the Staff Corps serve two years from the 18th February, 1861, to qualify him for the superior grade, under the provisions of Clause 103 of the Amalgamation Order, or five years, counting from the original date of his substantive rank?

65. Five years, counting from the original date of his substantive rank, provided he have been on the Staff the whole period; if not, five years from the date from which he, as Lieutenant-colonel, held Staff employ. (Vide paragraph 85 of the General Order.)

65. A Lieutenant-colonel in the Staff Corps can attain to the rank of Colonel by Brevet either under the Staff Corps Warrant, Clause 2 of General Order of Governor-general, 10th April, para. 84; or under the operation of the Royal Warrant of the 31st January, 1859, Clauses 8-10.

72. Will the election by an Officer of "general service" debar him from the benefit of the £50 bonus sanctioned by G.O.G., 8th March, 1861, No. 79?

72. No. The offer was made to all Officers of the Indian Army.

72. Approved; but add:—"But will not apply to those who may have been posted to the new Line Corps."

73. Should the option be given to young Officers of the General List, who entered the Service subsequently to November, 1859, to volunteer for general or local service, or the Staff Corps,—one young Officer having stated, that from the terms of the declaration made by him at the India House, he did not consider that he had any choice in the matter?

73. There is nothing in the declaration made by these young Officers at the India Office to compel them to elect for general service. The option must be given to them in common with other young Officers of the Indian Army.

73. Not approved; the answer should be:—
According to the declaration made by those young Officers at the India-office, they have no choice, but the option may be given to them in common with other young Officers of the Indian Army.

No. 961 of 1861.—The following paragraphs of Military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 371, of 14th September, 1861, are published for general information:—

1. "My attention has been directed to paragraph 6* of the General Order by His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, dated the 19th April last, relative to the grant of Furlough to Europe to deserving Non-Commissioned Officers."

2. "In order to prevent any misconception with respect to the assistance to be afforded by the State towards the passage of the wives and families of such of those Non-Commissioned Officers as are married men, I consider it desirable that it should be distinctly notified that the sum of £ (20) twenty is the total amount to be allowed for both the passage to Europe and the return voyuge to India, as stated in paragraph 1 of my Dispatch, No 442 of 1860."

With reference io the foregoing, it is hereby notified that the sum of  $\mathcal{E}$  (20) twenty is the total amount that will in any case be allowed for both the passage to Europe and the return voyage to India for the families of Non-Commissioned Officers who may be granted Furlough to Europe.

No. 962 of 1861. In continuation of Government General Order, No. 807, of the 12th September, 1861, the following paragraphs of a Military letter from the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, No. 373 of the 14th ultimo, are published for general information:—

are published for general information:—
Paragraph 1. In my Despatch, No. 320 of the 10th August last, paragraph 24, I stated it to be my wish that the option of retiring upon the terms then made known to you, should be given to all Lieutenant-Colonels and Majors of Cavalry and Infantry on the effective list of the three Presidencies, including such as may have already elected for the new Line Regiments or the Staff Corps.

2. It is possible that the latter portion of this paragraph might be understood as restricting such option to Field Officers only, and I desire to explain therefore that the principle of including such Officers as may have already elected to join the new Line Regiments, or the Staff Corps, is to apply also to such of the Regimental Captains as may become eligible to Annuities under paragraph 22 of my Despatch above referred to.

R. J. H. Birch, Major-General, Secretary to the Govt. of India.

INVESTITURE OF THE STAR OF INDIA. Foreign Department, Camp Allahabad, Friday, Nov. 1.—On Tuesday, the 29th October, the Viceroy and Governor-general admitted successively to a private interview, the Maharajah of Gwalior, the Begum of Bhopal, the Maharajah of Puttiala, and the Nawab of Rampore.

On the arrival and departure of the above chiefs, the following salutes were fired :---- Scindia, 19 guns; Bhopal, 19 guns; Puttiala, 17 guns; Rampore, 13 guns.

"* Para. 6.—A passage will be provided by the State for Non-Commissioned Officers granted furlough, but not for their wives or families, but to assist in taking home their families, an allowance of £20 is sanctioned by Government."

On Wednesday, the 30th October, his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General, accompanied by the secretary, the private secretary, and an aide-de-camp, and escorted by a squadron of dragoons, paid return visits to the above chiefs at their respective encampments.

At each encampment a royal salute was fired on the arrival and departure of the Governorgeneral.

This day at 11 o'clock, A.M., his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-general, as Grand Master of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India, held an Investiture of the said Order, for the purpose of investing with the Insignia of the Order:—1. Maharajah Scinda; 2. Maharajah of Puttiala; 3. The Secunder Begum of Bhopal; 4. The Nawab of Rampore; who have been nominated and appointed by her Most Gracious Majesty, to be Knights of the Order.

The chiefs to be invested, and also the civil and military officers of Government at Allahabad, and such others (including the relatives and attendants of the chiefs to be invested) as were invited to attend, took the places allotted to them in the Durbar tent, previous to the hour appointed for the investiture.

The European officers were placed on the left, and the Native gentlemen and political officer on the right of the dais; each political officer being at the head of his own party and nearest the dais.

The centre street of the camp was lined with cavalry, the European Cavalry being near the tent, and the Native Cavalry at the lower part of the street. A guard of honour was drawn up at the entrance of the tent to present arms to the chiefs as they entered.

The chiefs, on entering the Durbar tent, received the following salutes:—Scindia, 19 guns; Puttiala, 17 guns; Bhopal, 16 guns; Rampore, 13 guns.

At the hour appointed, the Viceroy and Governor-general, accompanied by the Secretary to Government, the Under-secretary, and his personal staff, entered the Durbar tent under a royal salute.

When the Governor-general had taken his seat, and as soon as the salute was over, the secretary read in English first, and then in Hindustanee, the Notification of the 5th July, regarding the institution of the Order by her Most Gracious Majesty.

The Maharajah Scindia was then conducted by his Excellency the Commander-in-chief, Sir Hugh Rose, G.C.B. and K.S.I., and by the Secretary of the Order to the front of the dais, the Undersecretary to Government standing close to the Governor-general's right with the cushion bearing the insignia for Scindia.

The Governor-general then rose, and addressed the Maharajah as follows:—

"Maharajah Scindia,—In the name of the Queen, and by her Majesty's commands, I here invest your Highness with the honourable Insignia of the Star of India, of which Most Exalted Order her Majesty has been graciously pleased to appoint you to be a Knight."

The Governor-general at the same time placed the ribband and collar upon the Maharajah's neck, and then delivered to his Highness the Star.

The Secretary translated the above address into Hindustanee.

The Maharajah was then conducted to the chair by the Commander-in-chief and the Se-chair by the Commander-in-chief and the Secretary.

The same ceremony was observed with each of

The same ceremony was observed with each of the other three Knights in succession, each being addressed in the same words.

When all had resumed their seats, the Governor general rose and addressed the newly-invested Knights in the following words:—"Maharajah Scindia, Maharajah of Puttiala, Secunder Begum of Bhopal, Nawab of Rampore,—I have executed the commands of the Queen in investing your Highnesses with the Insignia of the Star of India. I now desire to congratulate you upon your admission into the Brotherhood of that Most Exalted Order—an Order declared by her Majesty to be instituted as a public and signal testimony of her regard for the princes, chiefs and people of India, as a commemoration of her resolution to take upon herself the government of the British territories in India, which resolution was three years ago, on the anniversary of this day, proclaimed to all India from this spot, and as a means by which, according to the usage of sovereigns, her Majesty may be enabled to reward conspicuous merit.

"It was the gracious wish of the Queen that in the execution of her commands nothing should be omitted which might serve to testify her Majesty's consideration for your Highnesses, who have by your loyalty, constancy, and good service merited this mark of her Royal favour, or which might tend to show respect to her Majesty's Most Exalted Order.

"I am satisfied that on your parts nothing will be wanting to uphold the high dignity of that Order, and that, enjoying the peculiar honour of being amongst the first selected members of it, you will continue to set before your fellow countrymen a prominent example of cordial attachment and sympathy between the Feudatory Princes of India and the Crown of England."

The Governor-general's address was then read in Hindustanee by the secretary.

The Governor-general then moved from his chair to the chairs of the Knights, and shook hands with and congratulated each in succession.

After having done this by the Nawab of Rampore, the junior knight, the Governor general left the tent under a Royal salute.—By order, &c., H. M. DURAND, Offg. Secy. to the Govt. of India, with the Governor-general.

OFFICIAL PURITY AND INTEGRITY.

The resolution of the Governor-general in Council on what has come to be known as the Lucknow Note Case, like all previous decisions on those personal questions which occupy so much of the attention of the Government of India, is strictly just to the offenders, and vindicates that reputation for official purity and integrity which adds so much to the stability and success of British rule in the East. A narrative of the case need not detain us long.

The attention of Government and the public was first drawn to the purchase, by certain British officers in Oude, of Government Promissory Notes under suspicious circumstances, by the trial of the sheristadar of Major Carnegie, one Koorban Ali, who was convicted of forgery. Lord Canning last January appointed Mr. Schalch, then Commissioner of Chittagong, to proceed to Lucknow, and there report on the pecuniary transactions not only of Major Carnegie, but of all officials who had purchased Notes after the re-occupation of Lucknow. His report, sent in on the 7th February last, though not in all respects approved by Government, forms the basis of the Resolution. On the capture of Lucknow in March 1858, the market was flooded with Government Securities of three kinds. The worst were those known as "Geela" or wet, of which the rebels had obtained possession on the sack of the city, and which, not being blank endorsed, were generally negotiated under a forged endorsement; these were offered at the trifling rate of from 10 to 25 per cent., from a tenth to a fourth of their par value. A second class of notes belonged to persons suspected of rebellion. So long as their owners feared confiscation they offered the securities at from 35 to 55 per cent.; but when that fear was removed, they sold them at from 60 to 70 per cent. The third kind of notes were those which were sold by loyal bankers at from 70 to 75 per cent. Here was a temptation to officials who might not be actuated by the highest sense of honour, or whose cupidity overcame their prudence. Of these three yielded to the temptation, Major Carnegie, Mr. Martin, of the Civil Service, now in England, and Mr. Williams, an uncovenanted extra assistant.

Major Carnegie's conduct fully deserves the epithet of "shameful" applied to it in the resolution. His civil rank was Deputy Commissioner, he acted as city magistrate, and he held the office of one of the Lucknow prize agents. In the last capacity Major Carnegie had under his charge, according to his own statement, promissory notes valued at five lakhs of rupees. Believing that such notes could not be considered as legal prize, instead of reporting his possession of them to Government, he disposed of some of them to himself, purchasing them at depreciated rates through his official subordinates. In no case did he keep a record of such extensive transactions, which were contrary to all the rules of official procedure. Of the five lakhs two were thus disposed of or returned to the owners still implicated in rebellion, and of even these two Rs. 26,000 are unaccounted for. The remaining three lakhs were sent by him as prize agent to the treasury "in so careless a manner and with such utter disregard of the forms of business, that one lakh out of the three cannot be accounted for." Apart from the doubt as to whether the prize notes were not more than five lakhs, and apart from the fact that, out of these five, one lakh and 26,000 rupees remain un accounted for, Major Carnegie purchased in all Rs. 2,28,900 worth of notes. Of these Rs. 90,000 worth fell into his hands as prize agent: Rs. 1,38,900 worth he bought at rates much below the market value of good paper, and both he pur-chased through his official subordinates. In two cases the conduct of the sellers was under investigation before him'; in another he was aware that threats were used to effect the purchase, and in others it is feared the full price agreed on did not reach the sellers. In several cases he became the recipient of forged notes; he was aware that his subordinates induced holders to sell at a depreciated rate on false representations; he "offered valuable consideration" to two parties interested in the inquiries pending before Mr. Schalch, and he incurred debts to natives living within his jurisdiction. Notwithstanding his previous good service he is declared unfit and unworthy to hold any civil office. His sentence as a military officer is referred to the Secretary of State.

Messrs, Martin and Williams appear as purchasers of notes at depreciated rates, both on their own account and in conjunction with Major Carnegie. In one case we read that Major Carnegie pointed out to Shirfood-dowlah, a seller, "how foolish it was to sell the notes to Messrs. Martin and Williams for 45 per cent, when he (Major Carnegie) was willing to pay 50 per cent., as he had done for the others;" so that they were bidding against each other. Mr. Williams, when in charge of the Treasury, purchased notes to the value of Rs. 61,000 on his own account, "at unduly depreciated rates, knowing the depreciation to have arisen from peculiar causes and to have been effected by his official position." Not only so, but part of the price has remained unpaid for more than two years, and he employed Government officials to effect his negotiations, purchasing in one case from his own subordinate. As his offence was not committed singly, as he occupied a "very subordinate position," and as the example of his superiors was "eminently such as to lead him astray," he is punished by suspension from office without salary for one year. Mr. Martin, the civilian, being absent on furlough, the Governor-general is not in a position to pronounce on his conduct. He will certainly fare worse at the hands of Sir Charles Wood than of Lord Canning, but all the details of his transactions are not known, and it would be premature to prejudge his case. There remains only Mr. Forsyth, at present Commissioner of Lahore, but in 1858-9 secretary to Sir R. Montgomery, Chief Commissioner of Oude. Of the 18,000 rs. worth of paper which he purchased, only Rs. 10,000 was taken below the current rate of the day from one Benaresee Doss, who, having received intelligence of the issue of Treasury Bills at increased interest on the 26th January, 1859, three days before the notification appeared in the Gazette, offered Mr. Forsyth Rs. 10,000 worth at 62 per cent. Mr. Forsyth is "strongly reproved" for want of circumspection in this transaction with a man not wholly beyond his official authority, but there is no ground for any reflection on the uprightness of his conduct. Twelve other officials purchased securities from March, 1858. to January, 1860, but at the fair market rates and Thus is a representative of each service, military, civil, and uncovenanted, punished. When we remember the confusion which attended the rebellion in Oude, and the re-organisation of the administration, we see in the fact that there were only three officers thus guilty, another evidence of that which has ever been the glory of the English in India, their high morale. And in the frank exposure and unsparing condemnation with which the few guilty have been visited, the people of the country will learn that to their rulers there is no possession so dear as a scrupulous love of honour, truth and justice, which in their highest forms are the offspring of the only religion that teaches its followers to avoid every appearance of evil.—

THE GRAND DURBAR.-A correspondent of the Delki Gazette gives the following description of the grand durbar held at Allahabad on the 1st November:-On Friday we went to the grand durbar, the first, I believe, to which ladies have ever been publicly admitted, hitherto only a chosen few used to witness the durbars from behind a purdah! You will certainly see a good representation of the whole scene in the Illustrated London News, and a more imposing one I have scarcely ever witnessed. The magnificent durbar tent was superbly carpeted, a throne was erected in the centre having a beautiful canopy and drapery of red satin damask and gold ornaments, the step leading up to it covered with a rich gold embroidered carpet, the State chair covered with red damask and gold. The arms consisting of two most fierce looking golden lions couchant, the footstool to match the above, and when Lord Canning was seated on this elegant throne, looking round in silence for several minutes, while the royal salute was being fired, he really looked every inch a King. On his right were arranged a number of chairs on which were seated, first, the Commander-in-chief, second, Maharajah Scindia, third, the Rajah of Putteeala, a magnificent-looking chief, whose attire attracted everybody's attention. It consisted chiefly of gold cloth on a green and scarlet ground, and his jewels were on a scale of splendour such as I have never seen before; a double string of pearls round his neck, nearly touching his waist, each pearl quite as large as a sparrow's egg, and quite round. An ornament of huge diamonds fastened to the front of his head dress, something in the shape of a helmet, made of gold, studded with innumerable precious stones; and such a fine soldierlike looking man! A Seikh he is, and therefore superior to the natives of other parts of India in intelligence and comportment. To the right of him sat her Highness the Begum of Bhopal, the first woman on whom I fancy the honour of knighthood has ever been bestowed, and I believe the first Mussulman Princess, who has shown her face in public. It would be difficult to describe this quaint little personage, her dress was more gorgeous than becoming, according to our notions of ladies' costume. She wore very tight cloth of gold trowsers, so tight from the knee down to the ankle, that the wonder is how she ever managed to draw them on; white cotton socks, a green and gold "chupkun," and a cloth of gold shawl thrown awkwardly round her shoulders hanging down the right side, a scarf round her head, and a pair of worsted green gloves completed the little Begum's costume. She felt perfectly at her ease and looked the queen, and conducted herself to the admiration of every looker on. Next to her sat the Nawab of Rampore. All the above were invested with "The Most Exalted Order of the Star of India," the insignia of which are, as you probably know, valued at £900. All the Princes and Begum received it very nicely at the hands of the Viceroy, and all bowed gracefully and made some kind of a speech, excepting Scindia, whose manner, it was remarked by all, was not only uncouth but disrespectful, for he never even bowed or uttered a syllable after receiving so high a mark of her Majesty's favour, but turned his back on Lord Canning and walked to his seat with a most unpleasant expression of countenance. On the left of the throne sat first the respected Lieutenant governor of the North Western Provinces, Mr. Edmonstone, then Sir Bartle Frere, Mr. Ritchie, and other grandees. On each side of the tent were seated crowds of civilians and military officers, and on a raised platform at each end sat the ladies. I fortunately arrived in time to secure a good seat, so that I could see everything connected with the ceremony to perfection. While the durbar was breaking up I went up and shook hands with the Begum and congratulated her highness, she seemed highly pleased. and said that it was all owing to the Lord Saheb's kindness that she had received such a mark of favour. In the evening we went to see beautiful fireworks, which cost the Government, I am told, 25,000 rupees. The principal representations were Victoria Crosses, Stars of India, and 'God Save the Queen' in brilliant succession. A portrait of her Majesty (a transparency) was beautifully exhibited at a short distance from the 'Shemianah' from which the elite witnessed the spectacle. Suddenly the whole picture appeared to be in a blaze, and on the point of being blown up! I thought this a strange way of doing honour to our beloved sovereign's likeness, turning it into a sort of 'Guy Fawkes!' when, as if touched by a magic wand, the flames were extinguished and the portrait re-appeared in every respect unscathed. I then concluded this little scene was intended to be symbolical of the late terrible mutiny. I do not know whether the native Princes, or, indeed, any of the other spectators, looked upon it in that light or not, but such was my impression."

CASHMERE.—A correspondent of the Delhi Ga zette, who has lately been visiting Cashmere, brings to notice the inconvenience and risk of life attending a sojourn in the happy valley, on account of there being no medical man in the place supplied with medicines. This last season there were no less than three hundred visitors there, including ladies and children The medical men who happen to be there are, as a general rule, most ready and willing to give their professional services to those that require them, but they are generally without medicines, or, at all events, have only a small supply. This year two medical men were detained at Srinuggur the whole period of their leave, because the patients they were attending were too ill to be left. One of them at one time had no less than eight patients. This has been a standing cause of complaint for years, and great is the inconvenience and anxiety; in some cases, more than anxiety the want of medical advice gives rise to. Dr. Honigberger, when he was residing in the valley, used to be most kind in giving his professional aid to English travellers laid up with sickness, and that, too, gratuitously. But as the trip to Cashmere has become a regular thing. the Government might appoint a medical officer for the duty during the season, just as they do in the Hill stations; and we hope the attention of the Punjab Government will be drawn to it.

RUMOURED DEATH OF LIEUTENANT SINGER A statement has reached Calcutta officially, which places the safety of Lieutenant Singer, of H.M.'s 75th, Deputy Commissioner of Assam, in some doubt, but it will be seen that it rests at present on the very loosest information. Major Hop-kinson, the Commissioner of Assam, who is travelling on circuit in the steamer Lucknow, heard, when at Tezpore, from Lieutenant W. Phayre, of the late 54th N. I., Deputy Commissioner at that place, that he had received a letter from Lieutenant H. Sconce, 74th N. I., Deputy Commissioner of Nowgong, to the effect that Lieut. Singer, having gone out a few miles from Nowgong to prosecute certain inquiries, was reported to have been set upon by the villagers and murdered. The informant of Lieut. Sconce had neither seen the murderer himself, nor had he been told of it by an eve witness. His authority was a man who had heard a rumour that the brains of the Assistant-Commissioner had been beaten out, and his body thrown into the river. On receipt of this intelligence, Major Hopkinson immediately despatched a body of troops to Now- Calcutta actively engaged in its work of mercy.

gong, which is but a day's march from Tezpore. and went back himself in the steamer to Gowhatty to bring up reinforcements. These movements are alarming enough, but it will be seen that they have been made solely on the authority of a story received at third hand. Lieutenant Singer may still be alive, or if murdered, his death is not very likely to have occurred from political causes. For these facts we have been obliged to the prompt courtesy of the Bengal Secretariat.-Hurkaru

SIR RICHMOND SHARSPEAR AT CHILLIANWAL-LAH,-During the Punjab campaign Sir Richmond Shakspear was summoned along with other staff officers to his more legitimate military duties. He had command of the battery of heavy guns on the famous mound at Chillianwallah, a spot destined to be the last resting place of many a brave soldier. Few who witnessed an exciting scene in which Sir Richmond bore a part upon that mound will ever forget it. His orders were to keep on the look out, and if the Sikh army turned out to attack the British camp, to fire three guns, the signal of alarm. It was on a Sunday—the day was fine and clear—most of the officers off duty had gone to attend Divine Service in Lord Gough's tent, when there was a movement in the enemy's camp. Sir Richmond Shakspear was sent for and came up. All looked anxiously to see what the Sikhs were abouttheir camp was alive like an ants' nest. It was the usual hour for Divine Service in the British camp, and they thought they would catch the lion unprepared. So they turned out, got under arms, and advanced. Sir Richmond watched them attentively. Unwilling to disturb the camp needlessly he would not give the order to fire till the movements of the enemy placed their intentions beyond doubt. Then it was by his orders that the guns boomed forth the signal of alarm. At the third report the whole camp sprung to life as if animated by a magic touch. Soldiers poured out of their tents, and hastened with speed but without noise or disorder, with their arms in their hands, to their parade; horses were harnessed, guns limbered up; and in a wonderfully short time, scarcely any longer than it has taken us to write, the British force was under arms, each regiment drawn up in line on its own parade, the beams of the noonday sun flashing from their bayonets. Even the wretched creatures the pandies moved with an alertness not peculiar to them, and stood to their arms, probably under the impression that they would be safer upon parade near the Europeans than anywhere else. It was enough for the Sikhs: they saw we were prepared, and wisely retired .- Delhi Gazette.

THE CALCUTTA SOCIETY FOR PREVENTION OF CRUELTY TO ANIMALS. - The establishment in Calcutta of a Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals is worthy of record, and of imitation by the other Presidencies. Mr. Harington's Act seems to have done some good in the Mofussil. An equally efficacious law exists in Calcutta. but it is rendered comparatively useless by the indisposition of the public to prosecute offenders. The same stolid indifference and cruelty which lead the lower class of Asiatics wantonly to torture their beasts of burden or to wear them to death, prevent the native police from observing or apprehending those who are guilty. Christians confine themselves too much to the European part of the town, and pass too rapidly along the streets to notice the number of diseased and suffering beasts of burden that are to be continually met with. A society is wanted to put down what is at once a nuisance and an outrage, by employing agents to prosecute offenders, as in London and many of the large towns of England. There cruelty is now, happily, the exception; here it is the rule. The new society will, probably, find that in some respects the present law is not adapted to meet the evil, and may be useful in procuring its amendment. The provisional committee consists of the leading representatives of all classes, including some of the most wealthy and intelligent Hindoos and Parsees. The co-operation of the London Society

LATE COMPANY'S CAVALRY .- The Englishman has the following:—"It has been ordered from England, whither the matter was referred for the decision of the Home military authorities, that the formation and postings of the three new Hussar regiments to be constituted from the late Company's European Cavalry Corps, shall, as regards the officers, be drawn out and gazetted in this country, by his Excellency the Commanderin-chief, subject, of course, to what is called her Majesty's approval; and measures are now being taken to prepare the regimental lists of the Officers accordingly, to be transmitted to England as soon as they can possibly be completed. When confirmed at the Horse Guards, the three new Cavalry Corps will appear in the Royal Army List; and, except as regards the absurd and unjust cadre system, the officers will cease to have any further service connection exclusively with India; and may prepare to try the general service for which they elected, and which, if we are not very much mistaken, will be a hard trial to some of them."

CHOLERA AT CABUL. - The following account of the appalling ravages committed by cholera in Cabul, we borrow from the Delhi Gazette: "Cabul, Oct. 7 .- Cholera is so very bad in Cabul, that almost all the sirdars and chiefs are sitting at home, and praying for the disappearance of the disease. Every one is distributing cash, rice, and sheep, in charity to the poor. To-day's account of the dreadful disease is said to be about three hundred of all classes. From the 5th to 12th October there has been no public Durbar, all the shopkeepers and merchants of the city have struck off their work; no supply of corn or any other thing is brought from outside, as the people are afraid to come to Cabul. It is all right in the villages and other places outside of Cabul. The Ameer is day and night in the Balla Hissar, and is always engaged in hearing the Koran, and having food distributed to the poor. The Cabulees, with their Korans hanging round their necks, are walking about from one Mohulla to the other, offering their services as Koran readers if any one wants to hear. In short, the terror of sickness has so greatly overcome the Cabulees that every one has forgotten himself. Grave-diggers being scarcely procurable in the city, the people are obliged to keep the dead bodies at home for three days and sometimes more. This is not only the thing by which the poor citizens are compelled to keep their friends' corpses at home, but there is another, and that is, they cannot get men to remove the bodies to the graveyard. When the supplies stopped coming in and shops were closed, the people began to starve, and this was another scourge which nearly all the Cabulees feel .- Oct. 13 .- This morning a number of Cabulees waited on the sons of Meer Waeez, and said that as the mundee or bazaar was closed they could not get any kind of grain for any price, and therefore they were starving. The Cabul priests—that is, the sons of Meer Waeez, having sent for the shop-keepers desired them to open their shops and to sell the corn to the people. Accordingly the bazaar was opened, and the wheat was sold at three Cabul seers or fifteen seers to the rupee." Later accounts are, however, somewhat cheering, as the sickness seemed to be abating, and the victims of the disease were said to be fifty daily.

MEDICAL ANNUITIES .- The following are the medical officers who have had annuities for 1862 assigned to them :-J. F. Forsyth, Esq., F.M.C., principal inspector-general; C. Mackinnon, Esq., M.D., inspector-general; Sir W. B. O. Shaughnessy, M.D., surgeon-major; George Paton, Esq., M.D., surgeon-major; S. H. Batson, Esq., surgeonmajor; W. J. Loch, Esq., surgeon (retired); J. A. Staig, Esq., surgeon (retired).

REBEL LEADERS.—Salabat Khan, the murderer of the late Major Burton at Kotah, who was so cleverly apprehended in Oude, is to be hanged on the scene of his guilt-more than four years after the deed. It is said that the ex-Nawab of Furruckabad has died at Mecca. Feroze Shah, of all the leaders of 1857, alone remains unaccounted has been asked, and we trust soon to see that of for, while the question of the Nana's death has not yet been satisfactorily settled.

NAGPORE.-The experimental crop of cotton in the Raipore district has proved a complete failure; the amount of cotton yielded being less than a quarter of what, under ordinary circumstances, might have been expected. Two new dispensaries are to be constructed at the stations of Nachegaon and Belaspore, and to be managed by Messrs. King and Carr. The Central Committee for Industrial Arts lately wrote to our Commissioner expressing their regret that there as no prospect of any private contributions being forthcoming from Nagpore, and requested that one more effort might be made to induce the manufacturers to send an assortment of their fabrics to the forthcoming Exhibition on their account. Our Commissioner in consequence has called on the district officers to submit a list of raw products indigenous to the territory to this end, and has requested them to report in what manner, and to what extent, contributions may be expected from their districts in furtherance of the object in view .- Englishman.

CACHAR.—The Hurkaru has obtained from Captain Stewart, Superintendent of Cachar, statistics of the cultivation of tea in that province. There are now about 80 Europeans there, who hold 53 grants. The number of acres already granted is 104,782, of which 81,132 have been surveyed, and 5,957 brought into cultivation. The crop of tea of the season 1861 is estimated at 197,880 lbs., which, at 60 rupees a maund, would be worth £16,490. The crop for next year is estimated at 390,820 lbs. worth £32,568. One Company holds 12,000 acres, another holds 11,500, but the average of the holdings is between 3,000 and 5,000 acres. The writer says—"We have seen the accounts of one of these gardens, the outlay upon which up to the end of 1862 will have been about £10,000. The value of the crop of that season will be at least £6,500, but probably £1,000 to £1,500 more. This is surely encouragement to tea-planters."

ROADS AND HIGHWAYS .- The North-west Government are doing what they can to complete the road communication between Agra and Bombay. The worst nullahs and the worst parts of the road are being first bridged and metalled. The road in question runs from Agra to the Chumbul river, and thence to Gwalior, Seepree and Goonah. The thirteen miles of road near Dholepore, with the Chumbul ravines on the Dholepore side, are now the only obstacles to traffic between Agra and Goonah, provision having been made for boats and bridges of boats over the Kharee, Outungun and Chumbul rivers during the months requiring them. From Goonah to Biourah a great many bridges are still required, but there is little real difficulty for the cold weather traffic. The cotton traffic has not as yet been great along this road. Similar activity is being shown in Bengal and Nagpore. Bombay is neglected, and the Bombay papers jump to the con-clusion that all India is as bad. The military high road from Cawnpore to Saugor has now been made an imperial road. All produce, including cotton, from the districts of Jaloun, Jhansie Lul lutpore, Saugor, and the districts south of it, runs along this road to Cawnpore. It is at all times passable for wheeled carriages except at Gerrar Ghat, which is avoided by a detour through Scindiah's territory; and again for seventy-three miles from Oraie to Jhansie during the rains. It has been proposed to construct an iron tramway from Kalpee to Cawnpore, but sufficient data are not yet forthcoming to warrant the execution of such a work.

MAJOR BAGOT, late commandant of the Nusseree battalion, has been placed in arrest, and will shortly be tried by court martial, on charges of the most serious character, no less than that of having disposed of a quantity of Government stores for his own private advantage. He had obtained leave to go home, and was on his way to Calcutta, when the order to return reached him. Major Bagot is an officer of twenty-one years' standing, was A.D.C. to the Commanderin-Chief at Maharajore, and served in both Punjab campaigns, and is decorated with the bronze star, two medals, and three clasps.—Hurkaru DELHI, Nov. 6 .- His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief arrived early this morning. The customary salute was fired at 6 A.M. It was too late for the expected Brigade Parade to come off in the morning, so we are to have it this afternoon. Brigadier-General Wheeler arrived yesterday, and it is likely that the Commander-in-Chief will return with him to Meerut.

SIR HUGH ROSE AT BARRACEPORE.—On Saturday morning, October 26, his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, on his way up-country, accompanied by Brigadier General St. G. D. Showers, commanding the Presidency Division, reviewed the Barrackpore Brigade. He passed the most flattering encomiums on H.M.'s 6th Royal Regiment, which he complimented not only on its present state of discipline, order, and efficiency, but on its past character; and concluded his laudatory remarks by wishing the corps a hearty and approving farewell, on its approaching departure for Europe. still more impressive, if possible, were his Excellency's approving remarks on the condition of the Provisional Cavalry Regiment, commanded by Captain J. B. Saunders, whom Sir Hugh Rose thanked and complimented, expressing his thorough and complete satisfaction with the soldierly appearance and bearing of the men, with their drill, with the internal organisation and discipline of the corps, with the physical and sanatory aspect of the soldiers; and with all the minor accessories relating to his command; not finding fault with, or taking exception to, a single matter subjected to his searching scrutiny and investigation. His Excellency also gave due praise to the adjutant of the provisional cavalry regiment, Lieutenant B. Cuppage, and to all the officers; and he concluded his address by stating that, as a reward for his exertion, and success, he had been pleased to confer upon Captain Saunders a staff appointment, which he would join on losing his command consequent upon the dispersion of the corps. Captain Saunders has been appointed Major of Brigade at Allahabad, and will proceed thither next month, when the Provisional Cavalry Regiment quits Barrackpore to join three new Hussar Corps in the Upper Provinces. Captain Saunders is one of the Cavalry officers thrown out of employ in his own branch of the service by the amalgamation; otherwise we believe that his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief would have recommended him for the command of the depot in England .- Englishman.

Mr. T. H. Cowie, of the Calcutta Bar, has been appointed to officiate as Advocate General for the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal, until further orders.

COLONEL J. TRAVERS, just brought upon the list of Brigadiers in General Orders, is to receive the command at Saugor; and probably Colonel Chamberlayne gets the command of the Central India Horse; both excellent officers, and justly rewarded.

CIVIL SERVICE ANNUITIES .- The following members of the Bengal Civil Service have obtained annuities for the ensuing season :- H. Stainforth, Esq., the Hon. J. P. Grant, G. Lean, Esq., W. P. Masson, Esq., R. N. Farquharson, Esq., E. Thornton, Esq., J. S. Dumergue, Esq., C. Hugh Lushington, Esq., G. P. Leycester, Esq., H. G. Astell, Esq.

HYDERABAD.—The insignia of the Star of India for his Highness the Nizam of Hyderabad, have at last arrived. They were sent by the Viceroy of India, by the Moulmein, to the care of the Collector of Masulipatam, who forwarded them by special messenger to the Judge of Ahmednuggur. Assistant-surgeon Allum has been appointed Durbar surgeon at Hyderabad, and his service with the Nizam's minister will count as service towards pension from the British Government. Captain Fraser has proceeded to Bombay on privilege leave for two months, the duties of second assistant being performed by Major Thornhill, first assistant resident. Certain inhabitants of the assigned districts have complained to the authorities against the officers of the telegraph department for molesting them. The matter is now pending decision.

Mr. T. Wheelen has been engaged by the authorities to compile the Madras "Handbook on Cotton," on a salary, says a local journal, of Rs. 1.500 a month.

of this increase was due to immigration from Burmah and the Shan States. There were 1,108 Europeans, or descendants of Europeans. Pilgrims from the Chinese territory and from Yunan come in considerable numbers to worship at the famous Rangoon pageda, and many of them appear disposed to settle in the country. The revenue for the year 1859-60 amounted to Rs. 46,51,938, and the cost of civil administration was Rs. 22,30,736, leaving Rs. 24,21,202 for military defence. When the returns were made up in April, 1860, the regular troops serving in the province were 8,943 in number, of whom 2,190 were Europeans, and there are also local corps above 1,000 strong, detachments of which are stationed at the outposts along the frontier. The total value of the imports and exports of the year was Rs. 2.87.98.658, and the Customs' duties realised Rs. 9,58,162. Cotton piece goods of the value of Rs. 26,98,302 were imported, and silk piece goods of the value of Rs. 17,91,122. Rice and paddy are the chief articles of export; timber to the value of Rs. 4,59,960 was exported. There are fertile forest tracts which are thrown away upon the Karen population, who sacrifice fine trees upon the mountain sides in order to produce a single crop of cucumbers from their ashes; the next rain washes away the vegetable soil, and a crop cannot be raised again for some years. The number of heinous crimes is very large considering the sparseness of the population, but the greater proportion occur on frontier districts liable to the incursions of banditti; and it is encouraging to find in the last return a considerable diminution of serious crime as compared with the previous year, resulting, it is believed, from more efficient measures of police. Many of the convicts are employed on public roads, clearing drains, filling up swamps, and the like —a great benefit to the population in a country where the fall of rain is about 100 inches in a year and jungle springs up rapidly. Pegu exports a little cotton to Eastern Bengal; and efforts have been making to introduce a description of cotton which should offer inducements to cultivators to grow it on the fertile mountain landcountry once densely populated, some of it now in a great measure deserted, but which under the influence of peace and a wise administration ought to attain its former state. In the mountainous districts, inhabited by the Karen tribes, the Rev. Dr. Mason and Mrs. Mason have been labouring for some years, establishing schools and educating native Christian teachers. Lieutenant-Colonel Phayre, the Commissioner of Pegu, has described a meeting at which he was present in these mountains of Christian congregations, or deputies from them. He found 700 or 800 Karens present, clad in their picturesque national dress, sitting under the shade of a temporary shed of bamboo with forest-clothed mountains all around. Several of the young Karen ministers and teachers ad dressed the assembly in earnest language, exhorting the people to make increased exertions for the education of their children and to support religion, and some of the chiefs also briefly addressed the meeting. It was announced that the associated churches had subscribed above Rs. 500 towards the maintenance of the central schools at Toungoo, where boys and girls are trained as teachers for the village schools. The Commissioner was much struck with such a spectacle in the midst of tribes so very recently savage, and with no written language. In the normal school for teachers the more advanced pupils are instructed in the properties of bodies, the laws of motion, the rudiments of astronomy, land measuring, the first principles of plane trigonometry. Dr. Mason states that these wild tribes, just awakening from the sleep of ages, are seeking knowledge with intense interest. The schools are supported by chiefs, who ten years ago had never seen a book in their language, and who gloried in kidnapping women and children and selling them into irredeemable slavery.

MISCELLANEOUS.

MR. SILLAR having complained of the want of assistance experienced by him during his recent tour in the cotton-growing districts of this Presidency, a report was called for from the Revenue Commissioner Southern Division, and it having appeared that the want of assistance complained of was not experienced in the districts under this Government, but in those of the Nizam's territory, the Resident at Hydrabad was referred to on the subject. Colonel Davidson has now explained that Mr. Sillar experienced difficulties because timely notice was not given of his intention to pass through any portion of the Nizam's territory, and has requested that such notice may be given when any gentleman who may be deputed next season to visit the cotton districts purposes to pass through the Nizam's dominions.

MHOW, Nov. 3.—A grand tumasha was held on the 1st Nov. at Indore, on the occasion of the investiture of his Highness the Maharajah Tookajeerow Holkar with the insignia of the Exalted Order of the Star of India. Major Keating, Officiating Agent to the Governor-general of India for Central India, acted on the occasion in consequence of the lamented death of Sir Richmond Shakespear. The large Shamira, with two large durbar tents, were pitched in front of the Residency, in communication with each other, and in the centre a platform was erected on which the musnud was spread and the guddee placed. Two silver chairs were on the platform, for his Highness the Maharajah and Major Keating, and at three o'clock in the afternoon a squadron of H.M.'s 3rd Dragoon Guards were paraded in front of the tents as a guard of honour, and a quarter of an hour afterwards the Meer Moonshee left the Residency for the palace to receive his Highness. Exactly at four o'clock Captain Bannerman, assistant to the Resident, proceeded to meet his Highness, accompanied by three Staff officers, a troop of Dragoons and the splendid band of H.M.'s 72nd Highlanders. On his Highness's arrival at half-past four he was received with the usual salute of seventeen guns, and on his entry his Highness was received by Major Keating with a hearty shake of the hand, after which his Highness was introduced to Major General Farrell, commanding the Malwa division, and several other officers. His Highness then took his seat on the silver chair to the right of Major Keating, the officers belonging to Mhow and Indore on the left, and all the Durbaree suite, the Amlahs and native chieftains on the right of his Highness. When they were settled in their places, Major Keating ordered the "Star" to be brought, and it was so accordingly by Captain Bannerman, the assistant, with three staff officers, on a silver tray, and all officers and others present rising from their seats. Major Keating addressed a very good speech to his Highness, declaring the purport and intent of the order with which he now had the honour of investing him, and clasped the "Star" round his neck A royal salute of twenty-one guns was fired, and the assemblage were re-seated. Pan-soparree, goolab, and utter-boquets were distributed, and the

SIR RICHMOND SHAKSPEAR .- We regret to have to announce the death, at Indore, on the 29th Oct., of Colonel Sir Richmond Shakspear, Agent to the Governor General for Central India. The news of this melancholy event reached Bombay through the telegraph of the same day. Sir Richmond died of bronchitis, and his death will be much regretted by all who knew him. As a mark of respect for his memory all the public offices and markets at Indore were closed. lamented officer was to have invested his Highness Holkar with the insignia of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India to-day (1st November), and in order that nothing should be wanting to give effect to the ceremony the following troops from Mhow had been ordered to proceed to Indore :- two Divisions 4th Company 2nd Battalion H. M.'s Bombay Artillery; three Troops of H.M.'s 3rd Dragoon Guards; the head-quarters wing of the 72nd Highlanders; and the headquarters of the 4th Regiment Bombay N. I. (or rifle corps). There are at present stationed at Indore one company of Bombay Foot Artillery and two companies of the 72nd Highlanders. In consequence of the death of Sir Richmond Shakspear the order for the movement of these troops has been countermanded, and the ceremony of installation has been postponed until after the arrival at Indore of his successor. Sir Richmond was a colonel in the Bengal army, and for nearly twenty years he was employed in political offices in India. During the mutinies he was resident at Baroda, and he succeeded Sir Robert Hamilton at Indore on that officer being appointed Governor-general's agent at Gwalior .- Deccan Herald.

RANDERS.-We understand that Government have sanctioned the sum of Rs. 15,000 for the construction of a pier at Randeir, a town situated on the south of the Taptee, opposite to Surat, to facilitate the shipping of cotton.

INDORE .- A correspondent of the Times of India reports, that at Indore opium has risen Rs. 100 a chest. Provisions, generally, are dearer than usual. Holkar has given Rs. 500 for a tomb to be erected over the remains of the late Mr. William Harvey. The statue erected by the Maharajah in memory of Sir Robert Hamilton, in the centre of the public market-place, was recently uncovered.

THE CINCHONA EXPERIMENT.

In the middle of the seventeenth century s new remedy in cases of fever was introduced into Europe under the name of Jesuits' Powder. This potent febrifuge, the rare qualities of which were first accidentally discovered by the Jesuit missionaries in South America, was derived from the bark of a tree called by the natives of Peru Kina, or Kinken -the Cinchona of botanists. The true Cinchona is indigenous to the Cordilleras, and is spread over the mountainous region lying between 10 degrees north and 22 degrees south latitude. Though occasionally growing on lowlands, it prefers a lofty elevation, and is found in the greatest perfection at an altitude of 5,000 feet above the sea. The temperature of its native habitat has been estimated to vary from about 53 degrees to 62 degrees Fahrenheit. Heat and drought are fatal to its existence, while moisture and cold sensibly increase the medicinal virtues of its bark. There are many varieties of the plant, but the difference in the quality of the bark is mostly due to accidents connected with its preparation for the market. It has always hitherto, however, been an exceedingly costly drug, the price of quinine varying in London from ten to fifteen shillings the ounce, and in India reaching to double that sum. Indeed, for some years past the Indian Government has expended not less than £50,000 per annum on the purchase of this invaluable medicine, although the use of it has been chiefly restricted to the European troops. If quinine were obtainable at a reasonable price, there is no doubt that an immense demand for it would arise among the natives, who fully appreciate its merits as a febrifuge and tonic. To Mr. C. R. Markham is due the credit of endeavouring to place this valuable medicament within their reach, by introducing the tree into the lofty regions of the Neilgherries. This gentleman had formerly served as a midshipman on the South American station, and though no botanist, had acquired a general knowledge of the vegetable productions of the Cordilleras. After much importunity he succeeded in impressing upon Lord Stanley, and subsequently upon Sir Charles Wood, the expediency of cultivating the Cinchona on British territory for the use of British subjects. He was accordingly despatched to Peru at the expense of the Indian Government, and, after much labour and difficulty, he arrived in the Madras Presidency with a collection of plants and seeds brought from the mountains of South America. Unfortunately, however, the extreme intendent of the Government gardens at Ootacamund. The seeds likewise failed to germinate, and this first attempt terminated in failure and disappointment. Stimulated rather than discouraged by ill success, the Madras Government has persevered in its efforts to acclimatise the Cinchona, and in his report, dated 4th June, 1861, Mr. McIvor states that at that time he had upwards of 2,000 plants under his care, and all thriving luxuriantly. Experience has shown that they grow best in the midst of low brushwood, which affords a certain degree of protection against cold winds, although it was at first supposed that it would be advisable to place them under the shade of forest trees. This idea has been found to be erroneous, as the drip from the trees cuts to pieces the leaves of the young plants. There is now every reason to hope that by degrees they will become habituated to the climate, and that every year their cultivation will become more and more general. In the first instance it is the Government alone which can bear the expense of such a costly experiment, but after a short time it may be confidently expected that in every coffee plantation the Cinchona will be found, and an abundant supply of quinine obtained at a moderate price for the use of both natives and Europeans.

ARTIFICIAL IRRIGATION IN THE NORTH-WEST PROVINCES.

In Colonel Baird Smith's last report on the Famine Tract a large space is devoted to a review of the irrigation system of the Doab, and much valuable information is brought together with a fulness of detail only equalled by its accuracy and precision. The most important branch appears to be that which is dependent on wells, by means of which upwards of four millions of acres are rendered fertile out of the nineteen millions constituting the superficial area of that district. It is not that there is any inherent superiority in well irrigation, but the water being obtained with difficulty and at a great comparative cost, is turned to the best possible account. "No waste is permitted; every channel is tended with exceeding care; the crop is not allowed to receive a drop more than is indispensably necessary to its maturity; and the limited supply at command is made to do the maximum of useful work." As a rule water is found throughout the Doab at a depth of ten to eighty feet below the surface, whence it is raised by various kinds of machinery. In some places the Persian wheel, with its chain of earthen pots, is still preferred; in others a huge leather bag is drawn up from below by oxen descending an inclined plane; while in others, again, by wooden scoops worked by men, throwing it up from lift to lift, or by a pot or bag at one end of a long lever loaded at the other extremity. The wells themselves are either permanent or temporary. The former are constructed of masonry, and on an average are each equal to the irrigation of about nine acres, while the latter-frequently nothing more than simple excavations down to the subsoil water-supply the requirements of onethird of that area. The total number of America. Unfortunately, however, the extreme hasonry wells in the Doab exceeds 70,000, the surface; but supposing wells to cost there only half the average price, the results shown imply that the agricultural community have invested steadily from year to year not less than 1½ lakh, or about £12,500, in increasing their supply of irrigation from perished one after the other within a few drought from one-fourth of the entire area. masonry wells in the Doab exceeds 70,000, months after being handed over to the super- | Jheels and tanks also contribute to the genera weal, but to such a slight extent that they may very fairly be passed over without further notice.

> We come now to the consideration of the canal system, founded on that which prevailed under the Mogul dynasty. The protective influence of the Eastern Jumpa canal, the oldest of all, is estimated at 850,000 acres, or about 1,320 square miles. The Ganges Canal. from which so much has been reasonably expected, fell comparatively short of this standard of utility. Up to the end of July the supply was sufficient, but from that time it rapidly diminished, and the consequences to the crops of rice, sugar, and cotton were most disastrous.

> "During," says Colonel Smith, "the months of January, February, and March, 1861, the entire visible stream of the Ganges was returned into the canal. A traveller could cross the river dry-shod below the Weirs, and only a petty fraction of the volume escaped by leakage. I am aware of no instance in ordinary seasons, when the minimum stance in ordinary seasons, when the minimum volume of the Ganges at Hurdwar has fallen below 8,000 cubit feet per second. In 1860-61 it did not exceed 5,600, of which about 300 were lost by leakage through the Head Weirs, and about as much more by percolation through the porous bed between Hurdwar and Roorkee, leaving 5,000 as the standard minimum available for irrigation."

> Nevertheless, the area protected from the effects of drought exceeded one million of acres, or about 1,560 square miles. It must also be remembered that none of the great branches of this canal were in operation. In consequence of the financial pressure following the mutinies all minor channels were left incomplete, the funds provided being barely sufficient for the prosecution of the works on the main channel. The existing means of irrigation-including wells, jheels, tanks, the Eastern Jumna Canal, and the Ganges Canal -are together equal to the protection of 544 per cent. of the entire area of the Doab, still leaving 454 per cent. to the changes and chances of natural irrigation. Colonel Smith, however, is disposed to believe that not more than 30 per cent. of this area need be taken into account, but even this amounts to 5% millions of acres, of which 1,400,000 must be brought under actual irrigation.

> "To do this through the agency of wells would re-"To do this through the agency of wells would require about 65,000 permanent and 270,000 temporary works of the class, implying an expenditure for the former of about 200 lakhs of rupess, or £2,000,000, and for the latter of about 13½ lakhs, or £135,000. If the works were to be done solely through the agency of temporary wells, an expenditure of about 23½ lakhs of rupess, or £235,000 would be the works were to be done to be a separate to the works were the separate to the separate to the works were to be done to be a separate to the works were to be done to be a separate to the works were to be the works were to be the works were to be the works were to be the works were to be the works were the works were to be t ture of about 234 lakes of rupees, or £235,000 would be required. But the works would not last on the average more than four years, if made in the economical way supposed, and hence about 600,000 rupees, or £60,000 per annum, would be added to the costs of culture."

> Irrigation channels could not be made for less than 14 million sterling, but the safest guarantee against future drought is to be obtained by the extension of all three sources of water supply. Where the assessment is light the agriculturists may be trusted to look after their own interests, and still more will this be the case under a permanent settlement.

> "The district of Goruckpore, for example, has, "The district of Gordekpore, for example, has, within twelve years of ordinary character, increased its number of wells from 82,845 to 41,527, or by 8,792, and its cultivation by 183,213 acres; and like indications will be found wherever the settlement presses lightly. From the geographical position of the district named, water is probably not far from the surface; but supposing wells to cost there only the fit the narrange price the scales above imply that Colonel Smith is of opinion that the Ganges and Jumna rivers will not be available for a further extension of irrigation by canals, and the streams that rise in the sub-Himalayan range, or within the Doab itself, are generally dry from September to June, so that not more than half a million of acres could be protected from drought even were they utilised to the fullest extent. Even this aid, however, is not to be despised, if it can be obtained for a proportionate expenditure. But the first thing to be done is to complete the works connected with the Ganges Canal, which cannot be done without a considerable outlay. The headworks alone are estimated at £100,000, and their immediate execution is pronounced indispensable to the proper development of the scheme.

Westward of the Jumpa the comparative areas, protected and unprotected, are not so accurately defined as in the districts of the Doab. It appears that the Western Jumna Canal irrigated 169,306 acres of spring crop in 1861, and 298,985 acres of autumn crop, which may be regarded as equivalent to a protected area of 1,374,873 acres, or 2,150 square miles. Between the Jumna and the Sutlej this canal affords the only permanent and reliable security against drought. Wells and rivers, indeed, afford a certain degree of protection to about 3,500 square miles; but the entire area of the tract of country between those two rivers is fully 10,000 square miles, so that very much remains to be done. The Western Jumna Canal is, fortunately, capable of great extension, and at a moderate outlay may be rendered sufficient for the requirements of 2.750 square miles, or one-fourth more than its present area of utility. But it is from the Sutlej that means must be obtained for irrigating the upper section of this great tract of country :-

"The Sutlej has the characteristics of a first-class "The Sutlej has the characteristics of a first-class irrigating river. Its volume is subject to no greater fluctuations than the volumes of the other rivers rising in the Central Himalayas. It is altogether improbable that in the worst drought we can have it will lose more than about one-third of its ordinary minimum discharge. That discharge had been ascertained to be very nearly 5,000 cubic feet per second, and a reliable volume of 3,250 cubic feet might, therefore, always be had from this stream. Such a volume duly distributed, as the Jump. Canel suptherefore, always be had from this stream. Such a volume duly distributed, as the Jumna Canal supplies were in 1860-61, would be found sufficient for an area of irrigation of about 900,000 acres, and would insure against the effects of drought a tract of country having a total area of not less than 4,220 square miles. Colonel Baker estimates the cost of a canal from the Sutlej, carrying 2,500 cubic feet per second, at 25 lakhs of rupees, or £250,000. It would increase the volume by 80 per cent. and the probable cost by 100 per cent., making the one 3,250 cubic feet per second, and the other 50 lakhs, or £500,000. I doubt whether such a volume can be delivered, over such a country, at a less cost for works of every class than about Rupees 1,500 per cubic foot of continuous discharge. The returns can readily be judged of from those of the Jumna Canals during the past year. I find that these have been in round numbers. the past year. I find that these have round numbers:—

"For the spring crop—Rs. 200, per cubic foot of continuous discharge.

"For the autumn crop-Rs. 80, on the same standard.

"So estimated, the ultimate returns for the Sutlej Canal would stand thus:-

Spring crop Autumn ... Rs. 6,50,000 ••• ,, 2,60,000 Total annual revenue ... Rs. 9,10,000 Total annual charges , 2,50,000

Ultimate net revenue Rs. 6,60,000 "This would give a return of about 13 per cent. on the capital, which is about the ordinary return given of prosperous irrigation would be of inestimable im-

In the Agra and Allahabad districts nothing has yet been done, though possessing considerable capabilities. Robilcund also stands in urgent need of additional facilities for artificial irrigation, and experience has proved that under the guidance of sound engineering skill there is no investment of capital so remunerative as the providing a permanent supply of water. The entire system at present in operation is admitted to be defective, having grown out of the imperfectly understood regulations and usages which subsisted under the Mahomedan rulers. A thorough revision, therefore, is now called for, and not impossibly the last act of Lord Canning's administration may be the appointment of a Commission for this very purpose, in accordance with the excellent suggestions and report of Colonel Baird

PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL NAVIGA TION STEAM COMPANY.

The directors state in their annual report that the company stood possessed on the 30th of September last of stock in ships, less the amount set apart for depreciation, amounting to £2,189,700; also of freehold and leasehold property in England, and docks and premises at Calcutta, Bombay, and other stations, £122,868; and stocks of coals, naval and victualling stores, amounting to £430,421; also cash at bankers', investments, bills receivable, balances in agents' hands, and debts due to the company, £552,081, making the total assets £3,295,670. The capital received from the proprietors amounted to £2,100,000, and on debentures to £500,000; total capital, £2,600,000. The liabilities of the company, in bills payable and otherwise, amounted to £338,943, making the total capital and liabilities, £2,938,943, showing a surplus of £356,727. This surplus was represented by the balance at the credit of the guarantee insurance fund. The gross revenue from freight, passage money, postal service contracts, charter money, and other sources, amounted for the twelve months ending the 30th of September last to £2,288,289, and the expenditure, including interest on debentures, reserves for insurance, wear and tear, and depreciation, to £2,131,432, leaving a net profit of £156,857. To this was added £1,033 from the preceding year, making a disposable sum of £157,890. this was deducted £143,500 for the dividend of 7 per cent. for the year, leaving a balance of £14.390.

The proprietors' underwriting account showed a balance of £89,941, out of which £61,500 was deducted for a payment to the proprietors at the rate of three per cent., leaving £28,441 to be carried to the guarantee insurance fund, which would then amount to £356,727. The directors had recently accepted tenders for the construction of three new iron steamers—namely, two of 1,000 tons each, and 400 horse power, and one of about 2,600 tons and 500-horse power, to replace four ships which had been sold. The last new ship, the Mooltan had completed two trips between Southampton and Alexandria, and the result had been such as not only to justify the expectations held out, but to warrant the directors in the further adoption of the principles introduced in her machinery for the purpose of effecting economy in the consumption of fuel. The Formosa, Granada, and Shanghai were still under charter to the French Government in the East. The Haddington, since her conversion to a sailing ship, had added fairly to the general profits of the company, and had gained a high character as a fast and safe cargo-ship in the Bombay trade. She was despatched from Southampton on the cost less than £10,000. Since the last meeting the China mail service was, at the request of the Government, restored to its original condition of a fortnightly communication. The two new ships of one thousand nine hundred tons referred to above were destined at present to reinforce the com-pany's fleet engaged in this branch of their operations. The whole postal service between England and India and China was being carried on subject to a termination on twelve months' notice, either from the Government or the company, the original term of the contract having expired. The necessary notice of twelve months had not been served on or by the company, and the detailed time-table of the operations of the mail service for the year 1862 had just been agreed to between the directors and the Postmaster-General. The whole service, including that with Australia, had never been worked with greater efficiency and punctuality than during the last twelve months. During the past year no casualty creating a charge on the underwriting account had occurred to any of the company's ships; and when it was borne in mind that the distance annually traversed by the fleet amounted in the aggregate to not less than 1,261,350 miles, and that much of the navigation was of a peculiar and intricate character, the shareholders might, as underwriters, fairly congratulate themselves on such a result. An instalment of £5 on the new shares was paid on the 1st of April last,—£30 had consequently been paid on those shares, leaving £20 on each,-in all £400,000, available as capital. The sum borrowed on debentures had reached its limit of £500,000, and the directors did not experience any difficulty in the renewal or reissue of the bonds as they fell due. The commercial operations of the company during the year had been on the whole satisfactory; and, while in recent reports the directors had had, in adverting to a progressive advance in the receipts, to point with regret to a proportionate increase in the expenditure, due chiefly to the enhanced cost of coals, they were enabled in the accounts of the present year, which exhibited a slight falling off in the receipts, to show that there was a more than corresponding diminution in the expendi-They were consequently enabled to recommend the usual dividend of 31 per cent., making, with the 31 per cent. already paid, 7 per cent. for the year. The amounts payable under the present report would therefore stand as follows :-Dividend, 31 per cent.; underwriting account. 3 per cent.; in all, 6} per cent.; and these payments would be made, free of income tax, in one warrant, on the 27th of December.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY.

The report of the directors states that, in consequence of the progress made in the heavy embankments, bridges, stations, and other works, Mr. Purdon, the chief engineer, has confirmed his former anticipation as to the opening of the line in May next. To effect this the necessary arrangements have been made to despatch to India the equipments for the line. The rapid progress in the works is the more satisfactory, as the periodical rains, which commenced five or six weeks earlier than usual, curtailing to that extent the working period, were unusually heavy, and the inundations excessive, the water rising to a higher level than it has attained for many years past; but the result has proved the accuracy of Mr. Purdon's calculations, both as to the height of the embankments and the openings for watercourses. The report, with extreme regret, alludes to the loss sustained by the death of Sir J. C. Melvill, the official Government director; it also notifies with pleasure the appointment of Mr. Juland Danvers, by the Secretary of State for India, as Sir J. Melvill's successor.

The report of Mr. Purdon, the chief engineer, dated Calcutta, September 23, 1861, states that the general formation and embankments for 67 miles out of the 110 miles under contract may be the capital, which is about the ordinary return given by fully developed canals of irrigation of this magnitude. The Sutlej Canal would traverse parts of the districts of Umballah, the Pattiala territories, Hissar, and Bhuttians, thus including a section of country in which the strengthening effect of a Zone boilers in ordinary sailing ships would not have of about eight miles of earthwork still remains to tions can be ballasted the moment the earthwork closes. There are 24 miles of permanent way laid, and all the rails, chairs, sleepers, &c., distributed nearly throughout the whole of the remainder of the line, so that this portion of the work may henceforth be expected to progress rapidly. The progress made with the stations has been most satisfactory during the past halfyear. The walls of the various buildings for passengers, goods, and locomotive engines and carriages at Calcutta are almost all ready for the ironwork of the roofs, some of which have arrived from England. Six of the locomotive engines are upon the rails on the Calcutta station ground. The erection of these and the remainder of the rolling stock will be proceeded with in time to run a train throughout by May next. The capital account to the 30th June last showed that £842,020 had been received, and £762,680 expended, leaving a balance of £79,339.

BOOKS.

Narrative of the War in China in 1860. By Lieut.-colonel G. J. Wolseley, 90th L.I. Longman and Co.

At length we have a clear, impartial, and fairly written narrative of the recent operations in Chins, together with some curious information regarding the Taipings, acquired during a brief residence at Nankin. The main features of the war are still too familiar to render it necessary to recapitulate the leading events that resulted in the occupa-tion of Pekin by the allied forces, but as the memory of them grows dim in the lapse of years the real value of this volume will be more justly appreciated. It is evidently the work of a clear-headed soldier, competent to form a correct judgment upon the orders of his superiors, and, indeed, upon whatever came within the scope of his own personal observation. The French rifled-guns he declares to have been fully equal to our Armstrong pieces, "their precision being quite as good, and their service as efficient." The bad firing of our infantry seems almost incredible after all the fuss that has been made since the introduction of the Enfield rifle, but the charge is nevertheless irrefutable. On one occasion an infantry battalion formed square and fired several volleys at a body of Tartar horse with-out killing a single man. Nor was this the only time when volleys at long ranges proved just as harmless as in the olden times. But for general readers the most interesting portion of Colonel Wolseley's agreeable narrative will be his description of the Imperial Palace, and his own experiences among the Taipings. The belief entertained in some quarters that these rebels profess the elements of Christianity will effectually be dispelled by a perusal of the chapter relating to them and their truly bar-barous customs. There is also a pleasant diary of a voyage up the Yang-tze-Kiang as far as Hankow, which will be found both amusing and instructive.

SARAWAK.—The meeting of the Ethnological Society, held last Wednesday evening, was a very full and animated one on the occasion of an address from the Bishop of Labuan on the Sarawak Sovereignty of Borneo and its inhabitants-the Dyaks. Under the government of Sir James Brooke, it had of late years greatly increased its original boundaries. The Sarawak river flows out to sea by five mouths, and the country is bounded by mountains, entirely on the land sides. It is so much watered that people go about in boats from one place to another. Limestones predominate round Labuan; between them and the sea sandstones, while on the coast primitive and volcanic rocks and granite are met with. There are important antimony mines, and gold also tempts the Chinese diggers, whose mutinous conduct some years since will be well remembered. All along the coast are numerous fine rivers, the mouths of which form excellent harbours, where ships can enter with ease. From this region the great part of all the sago taken into Singapore is brought. Coal is seen everywhere along the river banks, and one important colliery has been worked by the Borneo Company. It is a good steam coal, and, though not better in reality than ours when fresh, is superior to the cargoes brought out, which are always more or less deteriorated by the voyage. The present race was considered to be of Hindoo origin, and to have been preceded by a more ancient black one. Their religion and the finding of Hindoo antiquities confirm this The Dyaks are of two sets, the one living view. on the hills, like our Highlanders; the other, very numerous, in the plains. Of these the more powerful go to sea, and are formidable enough to overawe the Malay pirates, whom they often make to serve in their boats. Their superstitious tra ditions were well and entertainingly narrated, and the subjects formed points of the highest interest for comparison with those more or less of the same character so universally prevalent among Their houses, or rather house, untutored races. for it is one building from end to end, is raised on a timber platform, twenty to thirty feet high, crossed by laths. This affords a means of ventilation, and allows all the refuse to fall through to the ground beneath. The back part is divided apartments for the married couples, while the young men sleep, and weaving, spinning, and other domestic operations are performed on a long wide verandah in front. The sea-Dyaks' houses are perched in inaccessible places, to which access is given by a roadway of notched stakes. which are removed on signs of danger. Passing their lives in cutting each other's heads off, there is no wonder they adopt such precautions. Under the good rule of Sir James Brooke, and after the just lesson taught them in 1849, these fellows have been brought under the influence of public opinion even there, and their habits and residences are fast changing in character. They have a rude method of smelting, reducing the small lumps of iron ore to a soft and malleable state without melt-Of the iron they manufacture sharp and formidable swords. Some bury their dead, others burn them; but the Malays build a deathboat, in which they despatch the corpse to sea, with a great freight of personal valuables. The Bishop thought the future of Sarawak very promising if Sir James and the missionaries are well supported. The tribes esteemed the English as friends, and it would be a great pity to allow them to fall into the power of the Dutch, who use the Malays as middlemen to grind them in their commerce and dealings. Moreover, affording shelter, as the islands in this region all do, for an enemy, the Bishop thought it would be unjustifiable to let any of them pass out of our hands from the difficulty we must have in driving him out if he sought refuge among them.

Ensign J. J. O'Brien, of her Majesty's Indian Army, attached to the First Battalion 6th Royal Regiment, has been found guilty, and dismissed the service by sentence of a court martial for failing to attend the place appointed for parade, and in two or three other instances of " highly improper and unofficerlike conduct," in associating himself with non-commissioned officers, in dining at the sergeants' mess, and subsequently appearing in a state of intoxication on a public road, &c.

TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES, on an INDIA-RUBBER
BASE, are secured by Letters Patent, dated December, 1853, whereby the continual outlay of new teeth is avoided, alterations from the absorption of the gens, or any other cause, being easily remedied, and the first outlay no greater than for ordinary kinds. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted as under:—11 consists of one continuous piece of Prepared India-rubber. The Artificial Teeth present an uniformly even surface to the action of the tongue, preventing lodgment of food and all secretions, so much complained of in the present system. No gold or any other metal being required, all springs, wires, and fastenings are wholly unnecessary; sharp edges are avoided, a greatly-increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity hitherto wholly unattainable, and a fit perfected with the most unerring accuracy, are secured; while, from the adhess and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the prepared india-rubber; and, as it is a nonconductor, fluids of any temperature may be retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being at the same time provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation. DENTAL SURGERY, 9, GROSVENOR-STREET.

THE ILLUSTRATED HORSE DOCTOR;

Being an accurate and detailed account of the various Diseases to which the Equine Race are subjected, together with the latest mode of treatment and the requisite prescriptions, written in plain English.

By EDWARD MAYHEW, Esq., M.R.C.V.S.

"A BOOK WHICH SHOULD BE IN THE POSSESSION OF ALL WHO KEEP HORSES.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"The production of this book has indelibly stamped the name of Edward Mayhew as the greatest benefactor the horse ever had. He and he alone, of the many veterinary writers whose works are before the many veterinary writers whose works are before the public, has hit upon the quality of information, and the form to convey it, which the public have so long desired. We think it a suggestion worth the notice of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals that they should come to some terms with the publishers for a portion of the work to be reproduced, in the form of a pamphlet, to be given away to every groom, coachman, carter, and cabman, in fact all men (who have not means to buy one) whose business is among horses. It would be an act worthy fact all men (who have not means to buy one) whose business is among horses. It would be an act worthy of such a philanthropic body, and quite in keeping with its object—viz, to prevent cruelty. We regret that our limited space will not admit of us quoting the parts to which we allude, but there would be no difficulty in compiling such a pamphlet, for the whole work teems with the most wholesome advice to every class, from the peer to the costermonger. There is no animal in creation more adapted nor more willing to serve man than the horse; but, we regret to say, that there is no animal whose natural history, capabilities, and general treatment are so little understood. The poor creature is frequently suffering from chronic disease, or temporary infirmity, while his master continues to whip him to his work, and exact his pound of flesh to the very utmost, for pleasure or for profit. But although there are thousands of brutes in human shape, who wilfully torture horses, yet there are hundreds of thousands who do so through sheer ignorance of his nature, and symptons of disease or infigurity under which for the sands of brutes in human shape, who wilfully torture horses, yet there are hundreds of thousands who do so through sheer ignorance of his nature, and symptoms of disease or infirmity under which (at the time) he is often suffering. To such men as these the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' would be worth its weight in gold, as its precepts would often save a valuable horse from premature death, and serve the cause of humanity at the same time. Every form of disease and symptom is not only illustrated by a master hand, so that the complete novice may at once see (by comparing the suffering animal to the particular illustration that bears upon its case) with what disorder his horse is afflicted, while the causes and treatment are detailed with a clearness and simplicity that is quite refreshing to those who have perused other veterinary books, the contents of which are generally mystified by high-flown language and technical terms, while the prescriptions, being in Latin, are quite unintelligible to the class who have most to do with horses. The test for glanders and spavin, which have been the cause of innumerable disputes between vendor and purchaser, and the cause of some of the most emicent professions, being siving their avidage in courts of the rest for siving their avidage in courts of the rest for siving their avidage in courts of the rest for siving their avidage in courts of the rest for siving their avidage in courts of the rest for siving their avidage in courts of the rest for siving their avidage and sevent and the cause of some of the most emicent professions. innumerable disputes between vendor and purchaser, and the cause of some of the most eminent professionals giving their evidence in courts of law in direct contradiction to each other is clearly illustrated and explained, as are also many important disorders which many writers have left unnoticed. The subject of 'breaking down,' upon which thousands of our readers desired information after the misfortune to Dundee, is treated with an excellent illustration representing a horse after its affliction, with the jockey dismounted. There are upwards of four hundred illustrations in the work, each a faithful representation of the whole, or part, of the body of the horse during the symptom or progression of the disorder to which it applies; and we need only mention the names of the Messrs. Dalziel as a gnarantee that they are executed in the best possible manner. Indeed, we unhesitatingly pronounce the Illustrated Horse Doctor' the very best and most useful book of its class ever published."—Sporting Life, July 17, 1861.

"One of the most valuable works that we possess upon the subject, all the diseases to which the horse is liable being lucidly described, and the remedies stated very clearly. The wood engravings, which are numerous, well illustrate the text, and serve to complete the character of a work which all who possess a horse must desire to be master of also."—News of the World, June 24, 1860.

"In order to make a good book two things are essential—an author competent to treat the subject he takes in hand, and a publisher spirited enough to give the writer a loose rein in the production of his work—that is, liberality in allowing him all means and appliances for rendering it a master-piece. The publishers of "The Illustrated Horse-Doctor" deserve the highest credit and the greatest success for giving the world this admirable volume in its present costly shape. Its intrinsic merit deserves every penny which has been spent upon it, and, inasmuch as we have never seen a book brought out with better taste or finish, the cost of its production must have been very serious. No one with the least equine knowledge can require to be told that Mr. Mayhew is the man for the task which he has undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished. His high reputation in the veterinary art, and his qualifications as a practised writer on domestic animals, render him the very person for supplying an intelligent and interesting work on the diseases of the horse, which would be devoid of mere professional technicalities, whilst, at the same time, his skill as a draughtsman, and humour as a witty observer of life, enabled him to illustrate with his pencil what he had written with his pen. We advisedly say that "The Illustrated Horse-Doctor" is the very best book of the kind which we know; and what gives it an especial charm is, that the author so thoroughly sympathises with the noble animal which he describes. Without pretending to go into any analysis of this valuable work, we at once pronounce it as scientific, yet intelligible; informing, yet highly amusing; acceptable to the profound horse-doctor, yet the work of all others for the bookshelves in every gentleman's sanctum; admirable in every way as a practical treatise on a very important subject, which it elevates altogether out of the region of quackery; and the tone is so learned, yet easy; so close to business, yet gentleman-like, that the dedication to Sir Benjamin

"Although the book will be mainly valued as an instructor to those who have to do with sick and suffering horses, all the causes of which are treated in detail of symptoms and treatment, yet it may with great advantage be studied by the owners of horses, who never think of treating them for disease—who, when their studs are ill, always call in the veterinary surgeon, and leave the patients in his hands; for in its pages they will find hints and advice, compliance with which is as much more important than the remedying disease as prevention is better than cure. Take the following as a sample of this:—'Above all, attend to the stabling, and let the box be large and well ventilated. Food is eaten but occasionally during the day; air is as essential as more substantial nutriment of life, and is consumed night and day. Food has to undergo a complicated change, and to travel before it joins the blood. Air is no sooner inhaled than it is immediately absorbed by the blood.' Are not these brief sentences full of importance to the keepers of horses?"—Western Morning News.

"The above is a volume of cyclopædic proportions written by a wise, philanthropic, and scientific man. The numerous illustrations—by the author himself—are simply marvellous for their power of delineation, and more so of expression; and none but a man who knew the structure of the animal, within and without, could have given these transcripts with the diagnosis of disease and illness, together with the (so to speak) physiognomy of pain and suffering, in so wonderful a manner. It is in every sense a perfect book, and calculated to be of essential benefit to 'man and horse.'"—Dispatch, June 24, 1860.

"We have no doubt that this valuable dictionary of the veterinary art will meet with signal success. We have before us a compendious history of all the diseases which horsefiesh is heir to, and which man's abuse has bequeathed to it, with directions for treatment, and the necessary remedies, likewise the exposure of popular fallacies. . . . That horses suffer greatly from the ignorance of their riders more than from any intentional cruelty is very certain; but whatever the cause the effect is the same. A horse sinks exhausted in the field, after only a shart run, and the rider is thunderstruck. Had he read Mr. Mayhew's book, and taken notice of the warning signal, of which, poor man, he was unaware, and put on the break, the catastrophe would not have been. It is in cases such as these, or where accidents happen in out of the way places, much useful information is to be gained by the general reader. . . The work concludes with a brief summary, arranged in alphabetical order, of the subjects previously treated on, upon which great care has been bestowed, and the known ability of the author guarantees its worth."—Sam, July 2, 1860.

"Mr. Mayhew is not only master of his subject, but knows how to teach others to master it also. The volume describes all the diseases to which horses are exposed throughout the infinite variety of circumstances in which they are placed; traces each disease to its cause, as far as it can be ascertained, and points out the course of treatment which should be adopted in every case. In pursuing this clear and thoroughly practical method of inquiry and exposition, Mr. Mayhew draws in all the collateral light that can be brought to bear upon his topic, and shows to what extent the calamities to which horsefiesh is heir may be referred to the ignorance, neglect, and brutality of owners; making, upon the whole, a large percentage in the bills of mortality. . . It will be gathered from what we have said, that the acope of this valuable and interesting publication is hardly expressed in the title. It is undoubtedly a Manual for the 'Horse-doctor,' and by far the most exhaustive that has ever appeared; but it is also a great deal more. The moral side of the question is a largely and sympathetically discussed as the medical, and the great mass of the public who know nothing about horses will derive lessons from the perusal of the work which they could not have anticipated."—Home News.

"We are inclined to think that this is about the very best book respecting the treatment of equine disease that ever has been written or published. The author is evidently well acquainted with the duties of his profession, and willing to give a world-wide extent to his own useful and practical experience, so that those who read may adopt his rules and regimen, and save that noble animal, whose use is one of the greatest blessings mankind enjoys, from much pain and suffering. In country districts, where the horse doctor cannot easily be summoned, this book will be invaluable; whilst, in more frequented localities, its use will always be found to be safe and judicious."—Bell's Messenger, June 28, 1860.

"The great mass of them (the illustrations) are wonderfully faithful, and they are so varied and interesting that we would undertake to get rid of the most confirmed bore that ever pressed heavily on mankind for a good two hours by only handing him the book, and directing his attention to them. It is a well-known fact that grooms only remember the names of four or five diseases, and are sadly indiscriminate in their knowledge of symptoms. This book furnishes at once the bane and the antidote, as the drawings show the horse not only suffering from every kind of disease, but in the different stages of it, while the alphabetical summary at the end gives the cause, symptoms, and treatment of each."—

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marseilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarued to any part of India, via Bombay and Marseilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following Calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Southampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency.

Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of India and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Bouthampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening. Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 27th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE Calcutta Mail of the 8th November confirms the sad intelligence of the murder of Lieutenant Singer at Pholagooree. A large and disorderly meeting of ryots, it seems, was help for the purpose of opposing the collection of the new Income-tax, and the police proving unequal to the task of dispersing them, Lieutenant Singer was sent with a small party of sepoys to repress the tumult. At first he partially succeeded, until some of the rioters, taking courage from his forbearance, rushed in upon him and beat him to death with their latties; after which his body was flung into the river. The European residents at Nowgong then fortified the Treasury, and prepared to defend themselves to the last extremity, but in a few days afterwards the Commissioner arrived with a reinforcement of native troops. The insurgents, however, appear likely to give some trouble, and have assembled in force at various points. The pro spect is certainly not inviting for European settlers.

In the North-West Provinces the agriculturists complain of the continuous rain-fall, and begin to understand that it is quite possible to have too much of a good thing. The indigo districts of Bengal have likewise suffered from an unexpected rise of the river. which has swamped the newly-sown seed.

Considerable excitement prevailed for a few days in Calcutta in consequence of the receipt of a telegram from Galle, announcing the death of Lord Elgin. On the arrival of the steamer it turned out that the deceased nobleman was Lord Eglinton, and thus terminated the various speculations as to Lord Canning's successor.

The news from Japan is unsatisfactory, though not of a very definite nature. In China the maintenance of peace with foreign Powers is tolerably assured, as Prince Kung appears to be increasing his influence. At Cheefoo the rebels were repulsed by the allied troops, and for the interests of humanity, it is expedient that an armed intervention should take place.

The quarterly general meeting of the proprietors in the East India Company was held on Thursday, at No. 3, Lothbury; Colonel Sykes, M.P., in the chair. The accounts having been read, the Chairman declared the ordinary dividend provided by the Act of Parliament, and stated that the warrants were made out, and would be payable on the 6th of January next. A long conversation took place on the position of the company, after which the meeting broke up.

The following gentlemen passed the examination for direct appointments on the 10th inst:-Messrs. W. Jones, R. Bartholomew, G. R. B. Drummond, H. Kingscote, S. Hotham, C. T. Johnson, N. M. M. MADAGASCAR.-The Sémaphore of Marseilles says:-" By the Massilia, which has just arrived, we have news to a late date from Madagascar, viá Réunion and the Mauritius. The new King, Radama II., after throwing open the entire island to Europeans, was engaged in carrying into effect a pacific revolution, which, if he persists, will secure the happiness and prosperity of his kingdom. Radams, who acts under the guidance of two Frenchmen, MM. Laborde and Lambert, by making Madagascar a free kingdom, desires to assure to it all the advantages of modern civilisation, by which foreigners would be the first to profit. The island has hitherto been closed to strangers, and the capital, regarded as a sacred city, was only visited at rare intervals by Enropeans, but now foreigners have perfect liberty to establish themselves where they please, and commercial liberty is granted to all. Foreigners are hastening to take advantage of these privileges; already have a great many planters gone to establish themselves near Tamatave, where the King has made large concessions of land. The future prospects of the island are so satisfactory that the planters of the Mauritius already think of sending to Madagascar part of the emigrants destined for their colony. Radama is also melting great reforms for his own people, and, contrary to what might have been expected, encounters no opposition. He has already given encouragement to education and the useful arts, and has abdished the penalty of death. The promises mede by him will be kept, since long before his assemble to the throne his excellent sententiate known and esteemed."

SIR RICHMOND SHAKESPEAR.

India has lost another worthy disciple of that peculiar school of "soldier-politicals" whereof Sir John Malcolm may be considered at once the founder and the type. It has contributed to the marvellous structure of our eastern empire a succession of master builders, whose names will shed an enduring lustre on the service to which To their potent influences for they belonged. good over the minds of a rude and impressible people may be attributed a large share of whatever success has attended our efforts to ameliorate the condition and conciliate the good will of the countries we hold in subjection.

Sir Richmond Shakespear, agent to the Governor-general in Central India, whose lamented death from bronchitis occurred at Indore on the 28th Oct., was one of a family favourably known in the civil and military services of India from an early period. He joined the Bengal artillery from Addiscombe about the end of 1828. After ten years of dull regimental routine in a period of profound peace, during which his mind was gradually accumulating sound knowledge and his character becoming favourably developed, the British invasion of Affghanistan suddenly offered a field well adapted to arouse the dormant energies of our officers, and he was fortunate enough to be selected to accompany Major D'Arcy Todd, of the Bengal Artillery, as an assistant on a political mission to Herat. With an ardent and chivalrous spirit of adventure tempered by prudence, a genial and generous nature, and good average abilities, he proved himself a most valuable acquisition to the mission. On the 14th of May in the following year, 1840, he was deputed to Khiva to carry to a successful issue the negotiations already begun by Captain James Abbot for the liberation of Russian captives, whose detention as slaves in Toorkistan had been made a convenient pretext by Russia for invading that country and thereby imperilling, as was supposed, at a critical period, our prestige in Central Asia.

More fortunate than his gallant predecessor, who failed chiefly from want of the necessary credentials, Shakespear, following closely in Ab-bot's wake, and armed with the requisite political powers from his own Government which the latter had lacked, reached Khiva on the 12th June, about three months after Abbot's departure for St. Petersburg. His efforts were speedily crowned with complete success. The Khan, yielding to his urgent representations, agreed to make a full surrender of his human sport; and the fiat went forth throughout the province of Khiva that all Russian captives should be brought into the capital by a given day. With a punctuality rarely experienced in Asiatic diplomacy, a large number of these unfortunates were duly made over to the British Envoy on the 5th of August, the very day fixed for his departure for the Russian frontier. Others joined his camp on the line of march, and by the 14th of August, the whole, amounting to 416 souls, were transferred to his custody. But there lay still before him the wild Toorkman desert with its lawless and turbulent tribes, where his friend Abbot had but recently reaped bitter experience of treachery on all sides; he had, therefore, still but too much cause for anxiety and caution. It was destined that he should reap nothing but success and glory. On the 15th of September he reached the Russian fort of Nova Alexandroffski. There, with his whole party of emancipated victims, he embarked for Oochuk, where he anchored on the 23rd, and on the 1st October finally delivered over his grateful protegés to the Russian Commandant of Orenburgh. What a proud and happy moment must that have been for the young Artillery officer! How infinitely preferable such a triumph to the greatest of victories gained by human slaughter! His task thus nobly done, he hurried on to St. Pertersbug, where a flattering reception awaited him from the Emperor. Not to at two millions sterling, and—more valuable | than all beside-640 prisoners, among whom were many belonging to the wealthiest families in Khiva. Seldom, if ever, has a negotiation been effected in the East so creditable to all parties concerned; nor since the brightest days of chivalry have the honours of knighthood been more worthily won. Neither is it the least noticeable part of this remarkable drama, that the three chief actors therein were young officers of the Bengal artillery-D'Arcy Todd, James Abbot, and Richmond Shakespear.

On Sir Richmond's return to India in 1841 a new field of distinction lay open before him, and again his good star prevailed. During his absence the Cabul tragedy had been enacted. He was now to take no mean part in avenging it. Accompanying Sir George Pollock as Military Secretary with the army of retribution, he shared in its glories on the victorious march to Cabul, and there it fell to his envied lot to take a distinguished part in the liberation of those British captives in whose fate the anxious sympathies of the whole nation had, for upwards of eight weary months of prolonged suspense, been concentrated. Putting himself at the head of six hundred Kuzzilbash horsemen, to treat for whose active cooperation he had been deputed by General Pollock, and rightly judging that his personal example would operate as the most effectual stimulant to prompt exertion, he assumed the responsibility of command. With characterresponsibility of command. istic ardour, he urged an immediate advance to the rescue of his countrymen and countrywomen. These latter had fortunately contrived meanwhile to bribe their guards in the valley of Bameean, when on the very eve of being carried across the Toorkistan frontier into what seemed hopeless slavery. Escorted by these mercenary and still doubtful allies, they were hastening across the lofty mountain passes of Hindoo Koosh to the British camp, in hourly peril of being intercepted by some of Mahomed Akber's scattered forces. They had just crossed the Kaloo Mountain, 14,000 feet above the sea, when Sir Richmond Shakespear's unexpected appearance on the scene, with his gallant little band of horsemen, dissipated all remaining fears and bade the fugitives rejoice at their accomplished deliverance. A few more hours sufficed to restore Lady Sale to her gallant husband's arms, and her sister heroine in misfortune to the safe custody of British bayonets. Memorable indeed was that happy meeting of the rescuers and the rescued on the heights of Suffed Kak, crowned on either side by British soldiers, whose exulting cheers rent the air. But the happiest actor in that exciting scene must, without doubt, have been the brave young knight whom Providence had thus, a second time, selected as an instrument of merciful deliverance to the captive. Henceforth he was a made man, and, having chosen a political career as best suited to his genius and most congenial to his feelings, he successively filled the posts of Resident at the Courts of Gwalior, Jodpore, Baroda, and Indore. For a brief interval during the second Sikh war he rejoined his regiment and rendered good service in command of a heavy battery in the hard-fought fields of Chillianwalla and Goojerat. His honourable and useful career amply fulfilled the promise of his youth, and when at last so prematurely arrested by death, he occupied the distinguished post of Governor-general's Agent for Central India, and was still regarded as a rising man.

In private life he was as deservedly honoured and beloved as in his public capacity he was esteemed and valued. In him the native princes of Central India have lost a kind friend and a judicious adviser, and the Government an able and faithful servant. The news of his death will summon tears of grateful regret into many an eye, both near at hand and afar off in the wilds of Russia. When the nature of his services is considered, even as so imperfectly sketched in this tribute to his memory, we feel a strong conviction that the British Government be outdone in acts which grace humanity, the will be doing honour to itself not less than to the latter restored to the Khivans merchandise valued deceased soldier-statesman, in evincing its sense of his merits by some special act of liberality to his widow and family of nine children left, we fear, but indifferently provided for.—Friend of India,

WASTE LANDS.

An official catalogue of culturable waste lands, following close on the resolution which offers them for sale in fee simple, has been published. This completes the great measure ordered by Lord Stanley in his despatch of 22nd December, 1858, and finally adopted in the resolution of 17th October, 1861. The immediate occasion which led Lord Stanley to write that despatch, seems to have been the application of Mr. Atherton, on his retiring from the Bengal Civil Service, for a thousand acres of land at Holta in Kangra, fit for tea cultivation, which were granted to him at an annual quit rent not exceeding at any time one rupee an acre, but not including the right to mineral products. In expressing his approval of this grant, Lord Stanley desired to be informed of the extent of culturable waste throughout British India, that her Majesty's Government might be enabled to afford all necessary information to applicants in England. The result is in the "papers" before us, and the publication would have been of more value had it been submitted to a competent precis-writer, with power to call for facts in which it is still defective, and with instructions to compile a uniform catalogue, such as Englishmen, who have never visited India. could understand. This should now be done.

The population of British India is about 150 to the square mile, while that of England is 350. This one fact, if we remember the small holdings of the peasantry and the absence of machinery and improved agriculture, will give us some idea of the vast extent of uncultivated land. Colonisation of the plains, in the ordinary sense of that term, is impossible for a white race. But so far as extent of land is concerned, India could for the next century absorb more settlers than Australia or even Canada. The function of the European in the plains is that of a captain of labour, not of a labourer, and the same is meanwhile true of the Hills. Even there the white man, the pensioner or veteran, will not work with his hands in the midst of a black population however sparse. This would no doubt be overcome were military colonies planted and a large and independent white population introduced. But it is to the capitalist not the labourer, and to the large rather than the small capitalist, that India offers advantages. And there is this fortunate circumstance that wastes abound in the very climate which is adapted for the European. On the plains wherever they are fertile, especially in the provinces drained or watered by large rivers, the population is as high as 600 and 700 to the square mile. But this advantage has the serious drawback that in the Hills the population is too scanty to meet the present labour demand, comparatively trifling as it is. This will be the future difficulty of the settler, and it is one he will help to overcome only by a familiarity with the language and character of the natives, and by a scrupulously upright treatment of them, to which, indeed, self-interest as well as higher motives will lead all but the uneducated.

In compiling from these "Papers" a list of the culturable wastes, we divide them into the two classes of those which enjoy Hill climates and those which are fitted only for capitalists, who, like the Indigo planters, will purchase the produce grown by native labour. It is impossible to distinguish accurately in every case between wastes in the Hills and in the Plains, but the distinction is generally adhered to below. The figures refer to acres :---

In addition to these Hill wastes we must remember that hundreds of miles in the Punjab are at present locked up by a settlement which allows the neighbouring villagers to keep them for ever waste if they please. Several Europeans have purchased from the natives small patches of five or ten acres, but they complain bitterly of the litigation which the coparcenary tenure involves. To many the Punjab will prove most attractive for tea-planting, and Sir Robert Montgomery has promised "to review the subject." While in Cachar on the east, within the last few years, eighty Europeans have engaged in tea-planting; in the Kangra and Simla hills four joint-stock companies have embarked in the cultivation, besides private individuals, many of whom are officers of the Royal and Indian armies. Last year no less than twenty-two Europeans and three hundred and seventy-five natives applied to the Government plantation for seeds, but the supply did not satisfy a tenth part of the demand. We trust all the local authorities will act with the same despatch and frankness as the Government of Oude, which issued the following notice immediately on the receipt of Lord Canning's resolution :-"Grantees wishing to avail themselves of the terms stated in the fee simple resolution are re- governor still beards the Government of India

THE TAX BIOT IN ASSAM.

The Lieutenant-governor of Bengal has been unusually unfortunate in his journeys from the He seldom leaves Belvidere but an emeute takes place which makes his presence at head-quarters desirable. General Anson and Sir John Lawrence were summoned from the Hills by the mutiny, Lord Canning was called away from his well-deserved rest at Simla by Sir Charles Trevelyan's rebellion, and now, on a smaller scale, but equally illustrating the truth that the Hills will one day lose us India, Mr. Grant no sooner reaches Darjeeling than the people of a district in Assam rise in insurrection, and murder a British officer, while all the tribes of the far Eastern Himalayas are excited, and the residents of Nowgong repeat the experience of 1857 by fortifying the Treasury. The result of Mr. Grant's absence is that all papers must be sent to Darjeeling, all orders delayed, and it is difficult for the public to obtain information at once official and recent.

From our own correspondence we learn that for some time Assam and the hilly districts of Eastern Bengal have been in a state of discontent. Unlike the Bengalees the Mongolian blood of the people is easily roused to unpremeditated acts of savagery, after brooding over fancied wrongs or invasions of their rights. The Incometax riot at Moulmein, where Major Hopkinson was also unfortunately commissioner as he now is of Assam, the chronic inroads of the Kookees, the periodical raids of the Garrow tribes, the occasional revolts of the Naga aborigines, and the collision of the Assam Tea Company with their labourers,-all occurring within the last few years, show that the Assamese and Indo-Chinese tribes, generally, require careful handling. Taxgatherers, especially, thrown in among such tribes, would be likely to excite them, while the very proper prohibition of the cultivation of opium, has irritated them. It is not so long since the imposition of a House-tax, recommended by Mr. Allen after his visit to the country, drove the Cossyahs to revolt. Ageneral dread of taxation has been long hanging over the province, and the immediate occasion of the outbreak in Nowgong is said to have been an attempt to assess or to collect the Income-tax. The people met at Phoolagooree on the 16th October to protest. The police, by the orders of Lieut. Sconce, the deputy commissioner, directed them to disperse, but they refused. Lieut. Singer, the assistant commissioner, went out on the 18th with a few peons, armed with unloaded muskets, and found some three thousand people again assembled in a most excited state. While gently attempting to induce them to disperse, he was struck to the earth with a bamboo stick and there mauled to death. The police fled, Lieutenant Sconce entrenched himself in the Treasury, and the 7th Battalion of Military Police were afterwards sent out and beat off a few who still remained on the scene of the murder. There are sufficient police to hold the district until troops can be despatched. Meanwhile Kamroop, a little lower down the river, is in a state of excitement, and the hill Nagas are said to be pouring down to their favourite trade of rapine. One of our correspondents on the spot, on questioning some of the more excited, was told that the Sirkar had forbidden the cultivation of Kani or opium, and had been making inquiries about their bathing places, and that cows were being killed.

This outbreak, and the disturbances in Sumbhulpore and Chittagong, afford Mr. Grant new arguments for keeping up his military police. Months ago we showed that what Bengal wanted was the abolition of these police, who are in general of doubtful courage when not Sikhs, and the assignment to Bengal of a fair proportion of the Sepoy Army. As it is, because the Lieutenantquested to intimate their wishes with as little on the police question, and amuses the public by a Committee which never meets except to disagree, the question of the proper military force for Bengal is left unsettled, and a petty riot may be allowed to grow into a serious insurrection. # THE POST OFFICE REPORT.

We are in receipt of the "Annual Report of the Operations of the Post Office of India for 1860-61." This report opens with an apology for its late submission, and, without further preamble, enters on business. The first subject treated of is the increase of post offices, and here we find that in Bengal there are thirteen more than in the previous year; in Madras two; in Bombay sixteen; and in the North Western Provinces three; the total number in each, including receivinghouses, being respectively 271, 162, 201, and 280, giving a total of 914. The number of Inspecting Postmasters' Divisions are-in Bengal ten; in Madras ten; in Bombay eleven; and the North West Provinces fifteen. The distances which the mails were conveyed are as follows:-

Av.total 1 14 6 ... 15 15 4 ... 21 6 10 ... 8 9 2 There is a slight increase in the cost of conveyance by mail-cart and horse owing to the high price of horse-feed, and the additional weight of the Overland mails between Bombay and Calcutta. There has been a gradual falling off in the number of letters sent through the Post Offices in Bengal, Bombay, and the North West Provinces, since 1858-59. But in Madras there has been an increase in each succeeding year over the former. crease is attributed to the with The decrease is attributed to the withdrawal of European troops from India. There were in the four Presidencies—in one month of 1858-59, 3,036,393 chargeable letters passed through the Post-office; in 1859-60, 2,824,052, and in 1860-61, 2,804,606; the averages of the three years being 36,436,716, 33,888,624, and 33,655,272. The number of chargeable letters which passed through the Post-office in one month prior to the introduction of the halfanna postage in 1854-55 was 1,014,406. As shown above, it was, in 1860-61, 2,804,606 an increase of 1,790,200. The penalty of double postage on bearing letters appears to offer no check on their transmission, for their number is on the increase. The reasons assigned for this are premising that the practice is entirely confined to Natives, the distrust the Natives have in the safe delivery of prepaid letters, and the habit they have of writing the object of their communication on the outside of the letter, which the addressee having read, declines its acceptance, and so defrauds the Postoffice.

In the number of newspapers transmitted through the Post-office there has been a falling of, in 1859-60, of 1,239,948 covers, and in 1860-61, of 541,344—this is likewise attributed to the increase of charge on newspapers received from England via Southampton and to the compulsory prepayment of them.

There appears to be a considerable increase in the official correspondence transmitted by post. The causes assigned for these are—first, the large number of offices formed in consequence of the annexation of Nagpore and Oude; secondly, the extension of the educational department; thirdly, the formation of the Civil and Military Finance Commissions; fourthly, the introduc-tion of the Budget system; fifthly, Income-tax; and, sixthly, the extension of the electric telegraph; and owing to the uncertainty of its communication, the necessity for sending a copy of each message by post; and, seventhly, the residence of officials, civil and military, during the hot season at hill stations and sanitaria, apart from their offices. The Director-General asserts that he has no reason to think the privilege of franking is abused, excepting by inattention to weight and bulk of official correspondence; that the imperative necessity for minimising the same has never been pointed out; but that when this necessity is fully realised by all conducting official correspondence, he believes "there can be no doubt the reduction that is feasible in respect to weight and bulk will probably not be less than fifty yer cent."

Dr. Paton further remarks :-

"It is almost incredible the enormous quantity of enclosures or annexures unnecessarily sent through the Post Office by all, but chiefly by large offices, especially in the Vernacular Departments. There can be no doubt that there would be no such waste of stationary and clerical labour, if the correspondence in all public offices was conducted on the principles by which banking and mercantile firms are regulated in such matters."

The importance of reducing the bulk of official correspondence is undeniable; the number of official letters which passed through the Post-office in 1860-61 was 8,769,876, or one-fourth of the entire number transmitted, while their weight, from the paper and envelopes used, doubtless fully equalled if it did not surpass that of the letters on which payment was levied. There can be no reason if the Director-general's suggestions are followed why the reduction in the bulky, unwieldy, and, in the majority of instances, unnecessary correspondence should not fall even below 50 per cent. of the present weight. We hope that Government will give this subject its serious attention, for, in insuring a reduction in the bulk and weight of correspondence as at present carried on, a saving to Government will be effected in two heavy items in the present annual charge for stationery and office establishments, both being susceptible of no little reduction.

In 1858.59 the number of chargeable, paid, and service letters and newspapers transmitted from thanna to thanna through the district post was 4,325,630; in 1859.60, 4,927,661; and in 1860.61, 3,988,635, showing an increase of 602,031 covers in 1859.60 over the previous year, and a falling off in 1860.61 of no less than 939,026. As the with drawal of the European troops cannot have had any effect on this, we wait for explanation of what, at present, we can only consider some clerical error in compiling the report. The financial results are as follows:—

Net receipts Disbursements	•••	 ···	Rs.	40,30,320 50,22,015	7	6 5
Deficit Official Postage				9,91,694 23,84,734
Surplus		 	Rs.	13,93,039	15	11

showing that the charge for service letters is upwards of one half of that of paid and chargeable letters and newspapers. These returns appear to have been compiled with much care. The short-comings of the department are freely admitted by the Director-General, and plain and practicable suggestions for improvement offered. From this we gather hope that, under his management, we may have less cause to complain than we have heretofore had.—Englishman.

MISCELLANEOUS.

GRANT TO MR. COPE.—We learn from the Delhi Gazette that the Punjab Government has granted to Mr. Cope a valuable strip of land in fee-simple, in consideration of his exertions towards the development of the agricultural resources of the Punjab. The grant was accompanied by a complimentary letter from the Governor-general in Council.

THE PUNJAB.—The revenue of the Punjab in the financial year 1859-60, £2,957,058, was twenty lakhs of rupees over that of the previous year, an increase due in great part to the imposition of the trade tax, extending taxation over the non-agricultural population. Large sums were laid out upon roads and canals; but the entire local expenditure, including the cost of the local corps, left a surplus of £1,187,417. The Imperial charges, however, in respect of the regular army and military public works would go far towards turning this into a deficiency of as large an The correspondence carried by the post has trebled since 1855, a proof of the value of rudimental education. The number of scholars increased largely in the year. A first-class school was established by the Government at Lahore, in which, to meet the views of the chiefs and courtiers of the old Sikh monarchy resident there, a higher department was created, into which none but the sons of persons eligible for the Governor-General's durbar are admissible; without this they would not be sent at all. The change which may be hoped for in the Sikh aristocracy may be measured by the fact that Runjeet Singh used to keep his Royal accounts by cutting notches on a stick. The police report a slight increase of crime in the year, but a larger proportion was detected and punished than in the previous year. Of the cases reported three-fourths were brought to trial. and of the persons tried three-fourths were convicted; and above a fourth of the property stolen was recovered. The police reports assert the gradual extinction of infanticide, and the extinction of thuggee is only prevented by the number of old hardened practitioners at large. The returns from the district courts show above 6,000 sentences, of which flogging was a part or the whole; a recent change in the penal laws had extended the list of crimes to which this punish ment is allotted. The practice of poisoning by giving dutoora has attracted attention. Dutoora grows in many parts of the Punjab, and it is given sometimes in the form of a sweetmeat to a traveller, or mixed up in a family dinner by the poisoner disguised as a fakeer or a Brahmin, or administered to a dancing girl in order to plunder her of her ornaments, orto a cartman for the sale of his bullocks, the accomplices hanging back until the drug has taken effect. One man, a Mussulman, confessed to seventeen of these murders. It was considered that it would be necessary to make the possession of concealed dutoora a criminal offence. Ignorance and superstition cause the people to be easily imposed upon by designing characters. Some agitation was created in the course of the year by rumours of the appearance of the "Imam Mehndee," a prophet expected by the Mahomedans at the end of the world. Several persons were convicted of publicly uttering sedition, and sentenced to various slight nunishments. which had the effect of putting an end to the temporary excitement. It came out also that there had been a discussion among certain Mahomedans employed in the educational department concerning the lawfulness, in reference to their faith, of serving the British Government. The frontier tribes were a source of some trouble. A plundering expedition of 3,000 Mahsoods, a principal branch of the Wuzeree tribe, was most gallantly checked by Ressaidar Sahadut Khan, of the 5th Punjab Cavalry, the native officer at the frontier post of Tank, with less than 200 men at his command. He led the Mahsoods to follow him until he reached ground where cavalry could act, and then, in the midst of their shouts of derision and an ill-directed matchlock fire, to their amazement the little body of cavalry faced about, charged the wild disunited mass of hillmen, and put them to almost instant rout. Personally brave and of vigorous muscular frames, these warriors wanted the power of combination to resist a charge effectually; and the whole body became a helpless rabble, and lost a tenth of their number before they regained the safety of the mountain pass. Our loss was one killed and fifteen wounded. The officer did not go unrewarded for his judgment and intrepidity; a sword of honour was presented to him, and he was admitted to the second class of the Order of the Comastah killed,"

British India, with the title of Bahadoor. Upon the whole, the year was one of progress and prosperity in the Punjab. The Mahomedan population, excluded from the city of Delhi on its capture by our troops, were allowed to return, and the attachment was taken off their houses.

LOCAL BUDGETS. - With a view to ensure uniformity of practice in the check and control of expenditure in the case of municipal and other local funds, the India Government have directed that a Budget estimate of expenditure chargeable to the various local funds be submitted by the officers charged with their control, through the local Governments, to the prodepartment of the Government of India: and when sanctioned, that the estimate be forwarded to the deputy auditor and accountant. general concerned, who will be guided thereby in admitting charges passed by local officers, on the distinct understanding that the limit of the estimate is to be strictly observed, and that the available assets at credit of each fund shall in no case be exceeded. If the receipts of the year fall short of the anticipations of the estimate, a corresponding reduction must be made on the expenditure, as local funds cannot be allowed. without special permission being first obtained, to overdraw the credit under debt account. local funds being in a position analogous to that of a private drawing account at a bank, the receipts and charges of these local funds will not be incorporated in the Imperial budget of income and expenditure, but there is no reason why these funds should not be subject to the same watchful scrutiny on the part of the officers of account as are all other expenditures .- English-

A NARROW ESCAPE.-Captain Delane, of the Gov. gen.'s suite, whilst travelling up on the Grand Trunk Road, met with an untoward accident which might have been fatal, but from which he escaped with rather severe contusions about the head, and a narrow chance of a more severe injury to one of his eyes. From the account given it appears that the carriage, whilst descend ing one of the steep hills between Burhee and Topchancey, gained so much way on it owing to the steep declivity, that the horse was powerless to keep it on the main road, and consequently it swerved off to the side of the road and struck against an overhanging tree with such force that the whole of the upper part of the carriage from end to end was torn completely off, shattering the carriage almost to pieces. An unfortunate syce sitting on the box was knocked off and killed on the spot; the coachman and the bearer were swept off, but fortunately escaped unhurt, and Captain Delane, who was fast asleep at the time, was awoke by the terrific crash and found the upper part of his carriage flying away from him, receiving at the same time the injuries already described by the splinter board as it was swept away. His escape from most serious injury was miraculous, as evidenced by the complete break up of the carriage, and the large splinters of wood which were found lying about the bottom of the carriage .- Englishman.

DISTURBANCES IN RAJSHAHYE .- The Hurkaru reports some further disturbances in Messrs. Watson's concerns in Rajshahye. The Hoogulbariah Factory in the Shikarpore concern has been broken open and looted, the iron safe plundered, and the factory papers thrown about the compound and into the water. "The servants were bound, gagged, and severely maltreated. Upon this intelligence reaching the manager, he dispatched three messengers in different directions in search of the Darogah who was not to be found, nor at the date—three days afterwards of his letter to head quarters had anything been heard of him. It is supposed that he and the rest of the police were influenced by certain weighty reasons to keep out of the way. time previously the assistant of the factory was superintending the sowings of the factory's neezabad lands, when an attack was made upon him and his servants by the ryots of the surrounding villages. He was on horseback and managed to escape, but the servants were severely beaten and PUNJAB, Oct. 18.—No rains have fallen here since the end of September last, and the cold weather is slowly progressing. The Maharajah of Jummoo, Runbeer Singh, held a grand durbar the other day, to receive the Governor-general's despatch relative to the bestowal on him of the exalted order of the Star of India; when he, in durbar, bending a little, thanked her Majesty the Queen and the Governor-general for the intended gift. The Assistant Commissioner of Dalhousie has been deputed by our Lieutenant-governor, I understand, in search of a sanatarium in the Great Chumba Range.

CACHAR, Nov. 20.—Nothing is now heard relative to the infamous Nana's younger brother. This scoundrel first made his appearance in the Rajshaye district; from thence he passed to Rungpoor and Assam; and when this reached the ears of the authorities, he fled not known where, but ishtahars are still hanging on the trees for his apprehension. The Angamee Nagas, who lately caused some trouble in the Nowgong district, have been forbidden by the authorities to enter the British dominions, and to take away any quantity of salt or other merchandise.

DELHI, Oct. 31 .- The Commander-in-Chief is expected here from Allahabad on the 4th or 5th. The General is coming over from Meerut to look at the troops, and will await his Excellency's arrival. Rumours are rife regarding a regular change in the Civil officers of Delhi. Some are reported to be going—one to retire from the service, another to England on furlough; and we hear several names mentioned as their successors. It is not improbable that Mr. Melville will come here as Commissioner. Umballa (Cis Sutlej States) is to be reserved for Sir H. B. Edwardes. Mr. Brandreth, the officiating commissioner, is going to Rawul Pindee, unless some other or more coveted appointment is offered during his present visit to Allahahad. Rawul Pindee is a favourite station with officers in the Punjab commission. We are, at length, having cold weather. The last two mornings have been very sharp, but clouds still hang about, and we can scarcely do without punkhas during the day. Major Browne, commissioner of Delhi, has gone into camp; he is marching towards Bullubgurh, and will return in about ten days.

RENGAL RYOTS .- The Indian Empire is constrained to admit that in many cases the rvots of Lower Bengal have broken their contracts under the pressure of a combination which has been brought to bear against the planters. A frank admission of this kind on the part of the authorities months ago, would have led to reform and prevented irritation. Both parties are gradually coming to the light. The writer thinks that the ryots will sow indigo this year if left to themselves. The planters are raising the rents of squatters, and are suing ryots under Act X. of 1836 in the Civil Court for non-fulfilment of contract, and for inciting others to fraud. The inundations have ruined the rice crop in many places, and the Committee-wallahs, as might have been expected, after having extorted as much money out of the ryots as they could, have left them in the lurch.

FORGERY AND FLOGGING.—Shaikh Barakut Oolla, a rich Mussulman of Delhi, has been found guilty of fraud and forgery. He has been sentenced to two years' imprisonment in irons, to pay a fine of five hundred rupees, and to suffer thirty lashes one month after the passing of the The flogging has created quite a sensentence. sation in the city. The Maliommedans have petitioned the authorities several times to remit the flogging, and to take a heavier fine instead. The request has been refused. His offence was the serious one of altering two hundred into one thousand two hundred rupees, the amount allowed him as compensation, on the certificate ticket.

INDIGO.—The Allahabad Gazette says the indigo planters of the N. W. Provinces have had a good season, unlike their brethren in Tirhoot. Even had it been possible to sow indigo in Lower Bengal, the crop would have been destroyed by the inundations.

TEA GROWING IN KUMAON.—A correspondent of the Hills makes some useful remarks on tea planting in Kumson. He refers specially to the plantation of Konsansie, which he describes as resembling some well-cared for estate in Scotland or Wales rather than a forest tract in the heart of Kumaon. The soil is highly productive and the supply of water abundant. He says that it is useless to embark in tea planting without a capital of at least Rs. 20,000. This is the general opinion. Then the garden is not in full bearing till the seventh year—and when an abundant crop is obtained there is the difficulty of finding a market for it. "The Konsansie plantation commenced in 1857, and costing Rs. 100,000, yielded this year not quite 6,000 lbs. of tea, which, at Rs. 2 per lb., would be Rs. 12,000, not nearly the annual expense of working the concern. Next year it expects to double its yield, and so on every year till at the seventh year it may pay 10 or 20 per cent. to the shareholders if they can sell the The home market is taken up by the Assam and Cachar tea. The only chance the writer sees for tea in the North-West is the development of a market for it among the native population. The European customers are too few to consume the tea that is already produced. "The natives on all sides are beginning to like and buy tea. The Zemindars of Oude, Rohilcund, and the Punjab like it. There is a market large enough amongst the native community, but they won't buy till you manufacture at a price which they can afford to Upon the whole, Assam and Cachar apgive." pear to have many advantages over the North West as tea-planting districts.

RIOT IN JESSORE.—There has been an affray in Jessore between a party of military police and some ryots. The latter, on their return from Jessore to Jenidah, after delivering up a prisoner at the former place, are said to have impressed some ryots to carry their baggage. The victims were followed by their friends, an affray took place, one ryot was bayoneted to death and three wounded.

THE "PUNJAB BANK, LIMITED," has been projected with a capital of Rs. 500,000, in 5,000 shares, the head office to be at Rawul Pindee and branches at Peshawur and Mooltan. The provisional committee consist of military men and merchants on the spot. The Bank has applied to manage the treasuries in these places. Upwards of 3,500 shares are said to have been taken. We may expect to see other banks start up in all the trading districts of India, but the terms on which Government will make over the treasuries to new undertakings, or to any but the branches of the Bank of Bengal, will be necessarily most stringent.

THE MURDER OF LIEUT. SINGER BY THE RYOTS OF ASSAM .- The Government are in possession of authentic accounts of the recent tragedy reported by us to have taken place near Nowgong. The news has been conveyed to the Bengal Government in a letter from Colonel Hopkinson, Commissioner of Assam, giving cover to a communication dated 20th of October to his address from the Deputy Commissioner of Nowgong. Captain Sconce reports that on the 15th of October, having received information that a meeting was to take place at the village of Phoolagooree, to take into consideration the recent orders regarding the collection the Income-tax, he ordered the Thanna Darogah to proceed there, and take with him a jemadar and ten burkundauzes. This was done, and the Darogah reports that about 11 A.M. on the 16th people began to assemble in the village, and their numbers by 3 P.M. amounted to between two and three thousand. At this time the Darogah considered his interference called for, and he directed the assembly to disperse. On their refusal to do so, he despatched a messenger to Nowgong (about twelve miles off) to Captain Sconce, stating that his force was not sufficient to permit of his making any arrests; but that he had noted down the leaders in the movement, and that at the same time he anticipated no disturbance. On the receipt of the above information Lieut. Singer suggested the propriety of his proceeding otherwise than as an unlawful assemblage. Capt. Sconce seems to have thought this at the time unnecessary, but he subsequently consented, and on the morning of the 18th, Lieutenant Singer, accompanied by the gaol Darogah, rode out to Phoolagooree. On his arrival he found the people had dispersed; but about 11 o'clock, as on the previous day, they began to re-assemble, and by two or three P.M. some 2,000 or 3,000 had collected. this time Lieutenant Singer decided on entering the crowd, although repeatedly urged not to do so by the police darogah, as the people were very much excited, as much by drugs and liquor as by any feelings of hostility. Lieutenant Singer, however, persisted, and accompanied by the gaol and police darogahs, Mohurrir, and the police force, he forced his way among the people. At first they gave way, and on his calling on them to throw down their clubs, with which they were nearly all armed, those nearest to him did so, but at the same time others made a rush on Leintenant Singer and his party, and he was at once felled by a blow upon the head. The police force were driven back, Leiutenant Singer not having allowed them to load, and all were more or less wounded. The station of Nowgong was threatened, and the European inhabitants had retired from their houses to the Treasury, which Captain Sconce had entrenched. On first hearing of the disaster at Phoolagooree, Captain Sconce started for that place with all the force he could collect, twenty-five men, but on his way hearing the Treasury was to be attacked that night and the station fired, moreover his imformants, four sepoys of the police, all wounded, having witnessed the murder of Lieutenant Singer subsequent to his being knocked down, as he could render him no assistance, he decided on an immediate retrograde movement for the protection of Nowgong.—Englishman.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL.—The amalgamation of the offices and functions of the Adjutant-general of the army, and Adjutant-general of the Queen's troops in Bengal, will take place on the 1st of January, when Colonel W. Mayhew retires on his pension, with the additional bonus just offered by the new retirement scheme for the senior line officers; and Colonel Haythorn absorbs the office and the title, becoming Adjutant-general of the entire military force throughout the Bengal presidency, European and native.

EXTENSION OF THE E. I. RAILWAY.—On the 31st October the East Indian Railway was opened to Bhaugulpore, two hundred and sixty-five miles from Calcutta. It is now possible to breakfast in Calcutta and dine in the very heart of the Sonthal country on the same day. During the Sonthal rebellion, and before, the journey to Bhaugulpore occupied nearly a fortnight.

MURDER AND SUICIDE.—The Oudh Gazette records a horrible case of murder and suicide. John Shaw and Henry Soper, both gunners in the 2nd Battery, 11th Brigade of the Royal Artillery, Lucknow, having been for some time great friends, suddenly quarrelled. Shaw, after coming off picquet on the 26th October, took two carbines to the bath house, loaded them with ball, and went to Soper's quarters. There he found his victim asleep; he fired one carbine into Soper's stomach, and with the other shot himself on the left side. Soper was a lad only eighteen years of age.

Monument to Sir Henry Lawrence.—At last there is a prospect of Englishmen in India doing honour to the memory of Sir Henry Lawrence. The sum of Rs. 15,547 has now been raised for the erection of a memorial over his remains at Lucknow. The very handsome cross design by Mr. Scott, the London architect, sent out to Lady Canning too late for the Cawnpore Memorial, has been selected. It will be twenty or twenty-five feet high, and stand upon a tumulus of similar height raised upon the ruins of the Church in the Residency grave-yard. The cost is estimated at Rs. 12,000.

at the same time he anticipated no disturbance. On the receipt of the above information Lieut. Singer suggested the propriety of his proceeding to the scene of what could not be looked upon day was hardly necessary:—New year's day, 1;

Ash Wednesday, 1; Good Friday, 1; Queen's Birth-day, 1; Christmas day, and six days after —25 to 31st December, 7; Last Saturday of every month, provided there are no arrears of work, 12. Calcutta and Bengal now stand alone in their devotion to the idolatrous holiday at a season when enjoyment is impossible, and the public have themselves, not Government, to blame.

Exports (Calcutta, Nov. 8).—Indigo.—October sowings are going on more favourably than last year in Bengal. Nothing new has transpired as to the close of the season in the North-West. No musters of the crops have yet come down, and nothing has been done in the market. The news, now overdue, of the opening of the October sale will probably lead to business. Singar.—A large business has been transacted in all kinds, both for shipment and local purposes, at a considerable advance on previous rates. Salipetre.—A moderate amount of business has been done since the holidays for both England and America. Rice.—A considerable improvement has taken place in the demand for this stoole, and large purchases have been made for shipment to various ports in all descriptions, chiefly low rice at Rs. 1-5 to 1-8 per maund. Supplies of Ballam and Table have fallen off, but Moonthee is in full stock. Prices are steady, with a tendency upwards. Silk Piece Goods.—Some business has taken place since the holidays at about previous rates, but the demand seems to have abated for the time, and prices are looking down. Jute.—The market is bare of stock, supplies from the interior having been latterly much curtailed, but the demand continues steady as ever, and prices have consequently advanced 2 to 3 annas per maund. Skellac and Lac Dye.—Quotations for Lac Dye are reduced, and must, in fact, be looked upon as nommal. Holders stand out for previous rates, and no sales are effected. Shelhac remains firm, and about 360 chests D. C. have been purchased at Rs. 49. Oil Seeds.—In consequence of supplies not being equal to demand, prices for Linseed are steadily looking up, and in some instances an advance of 2 and 3 annas have been paid. Hules.—Cow Hules, demand very heavy, stock diminished, and the prices little hagher. Buffaloes, moderate sales have been transacted at reduced prices.

—Mynte Shritigas.—Some business has been done at 4 to 8 annas above last month's qu

THE MADRAS PIER is at last partially completed, and will be opened to the public immediately. After the first month a toll is to be levied on all who use the pier, as the Government consider it private property. The Madras Times says it is proposed to lay down pipes along the pier to convey water to the shipping. The end of the pier is now beyond the surf, but on the arrival of more material it will be farther extended. Boats, we presume, will still be necessary to convey passengers from the ships to the pier, where safe ladders will be provided, and a tub and whip attached to one of the cranes for the accommodation of ladies. Thus ends the monopoly of the Massoolah

HYDERABAD, Oct. 19.—The British Government will soon construct an hospital adjoining the Hyderabad Medical School, which is now amply patronised by his Highness the Nizam. The construction of the railway from Shorapore to Hyderabad has been postponed, perhaps from financial difficulties. Our Resident has requested the Durbar that the Toll at Pyton, or one of the other places where it is taken on the direct road to Jaulnah, should be removed, so as to prevent the necessity of carrying cotton to Kapowzoam in order to save the payment of tolls three times instead of twice, and that the direct route to Jaulnah vid Pyton should be put on exactly the same terms regarding tolls as that through Nowgong. The practice lately introduced in regard to trade extension of the transport of cotton from the neighbouring Nizam's districts, viz., by a system of papers taken out at particular Custom-houses, where the Legislative duty is to be paid once for all.

NEW CHURCH AT POORUNDHUR .- On Monday, October 28th, his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief laid the first stone of the church now about to be erected at Poorundhur. The site, which is a very beautiful one, is near the great gate of the Town Fort, and not far from the spot between Musulipatam and Hyderabad is to be where Lord Frederick FitzClarence died in 1854. adopted to remove the obstacles in the way of an The civil and military residents assembled at 5 P.M., shortly after which hour the Commanderin-Chief arrived, accompanied by Dr. Hadaway, Inspector-general, Major Flood, A.D.C., and the Rev. Mr. Gell. An appropriate psalm having been sung by the choir, a prayer was offered up by the chaplain, after which Sir William Mansfield spoke as follows:—"It gives me great pleasure to find that accident has brought me to this hill, just at the time when it suits the plans of my reverend friend here to lay the first stone of the Church at Poorundhur. It is by the liberality of Government, and the efforts of the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop, and the Rev. Mr. Gell, that this church, the erection of which was suggested nearly seven years ago, is now about to be built. But though erected chiefly at the expense of Government, it is, I believe, at the instance of the widow of the late Lord Frederick FitzClarence, who died within a few vards of this spot, exactly seven years ago, and is to be considered as a memorial of one of my most distinguished predecessors in the command of this army. There was no man who loved British soldiers more, or who strove more sincerely to further their interests, and promote their efficiency; and if it were possible for him, where he now is, to look down upon us here, and see us engaged in commencing on this spot, and in memory of him, the erection of a Christian church for the worship of God, it would afford him, we may well conceive, cause for the sincerest gratification and praise. It only remains for me to perform my part in this interesting ceremony." His Excellency then laid the stone with the usual ceremonies; and after the blessing had been pronounced by the chaplain the assembly separated.

The Sassoon Reformatory in Bombay, the only Ragged School in India, for which Dr. Buist did so much, has been in an uncertain pecuniary position lately. The withdrawal of a certain amount of Government work has reduced the assets of the institution so much that an application has been made to Government for aid. A despatch has been received in which this is conceded. The cost of the maintenance of the inmates committed by the Magistrate is to be defrayed by the Government. A portion of the fines levied in the several police-courts will be appropriated to this purpose. Where parents are capable of contributing to the support of their children they will be called upon to do so.

Death of the Rame of Kolapore. — The Death of the Ranee of Kolapore. — The Deccan Herald chronicles the death of a State prisoner in Poona. The Dowager Ranee of Kolapore having been implicated in the Warree insurrection of 1844-5, was removed to Poona and kept under surveillance. Being of anadvanced age, her return to Kolapore was allowed, but she died before she could be removed. Since the departure for England of the Ranee Chunda, we have now no lady political prisoner.

A VOTIVE OFFERING.—The Bombay Gazette says that a monster train, consisting of seventy-seven carriages, was run from Surat to Baroda, the day before the fair held on the Dussera festival. When it passed over the Taptee and Nurbudda iron bridges, the passengers offered to the rivers cocoanuts in such large quantities, that the waters for the time seemed quite covered with them. It is said that this shower of cocoanus was offered that the rivers, over which such monster trains were to pass, might not open "their wide mouths and swallow up the human freight."

CHINA.

Hong Kong, Nov. 1.—The London mail of September 10th arrived here on the 24th ultimo.

The state of affairs in China and Japan during the past fortnight has not been of a very pleasing nature. From the latter country indeed we have very little news of any kind, and everything like active diplomacy seems to have been effectually quenched by that attack upon the embassy in which Mr. Oliphant was wounded. Yokuhama seems to be, at present, the headquarters of our Minister, and the various confederated Ambassadors from Europe are understood to be waiting instructions from their respective Governments, who in their turn will most probably act in concert, and treat the question of Japanese relations as one of common interest. The U.S. Minister may perhaps consider that his country has not sufficient leisure, in the present emergency, to bestow attention upon foreign affairs, but, in any case, his position will never be worse than that of his colleagues. We cannot but hope that the various Governments at home will give their most serious attention to the few points of real difficulty that this matter presents.

All was well with the legations at Pekin, by the last accounts that were received. In a letter to the Chamber of Commerce at Shanghai, Mr. Bruce speaks of a time when he shall have acquired influence with the Chinese Government, and he promises to use that influence in favour of British trade. He has already obtained the withdrawal of many new trading regulations, which were imposed, contrary alike to the spirit and letter of the last treaty, as well as the rectification of some native regulations that were acting most injuriously to foreign trade, although their existence was no breach of any clause in the recent treaty; and, altogether, it is beginning to appear that our having a minister at Pekin is a boon that cannot be too highly estimated.

The following items of Pekin news, we quote from the Shanghai Shipping List of Oct. 24:—

"Our dates from Pekin are to the 12th inst. Said to be frightful beyond description. Their Many of the ladies and courtiers who followed the late Emperor to Zehol have already returned to Pekin, where the authorities are making preparations for the reception of the youthful Kesseang. The roads are being repaired, and large quantities of provisions are being despatched to the halting places along the Zehol route, at which mat houses have been erected for the accommodation of the Imperial cortege. The Emperor will make his public entry about the last of the present month; and on the 3rd or 4th of Nov. the remains of the late Heen-fung be brought to the capital.

"While at Zehol, the Council of Regency is strongly supported by the numerous adherents of its three more powerful members; its policy, did it dare to act, would be essentially anti-foreign, and its position as a ruling body is really less under control than that of an Emperor. The return to Pekin will cause a great change: there their supporters will be in the minority, the Governmental policy will be guided by the counsels of Prince Kung, and their action will be under a wholesome control. The Prince accepts the situation; seeing that foreign interconrse must be tolerated, he is convinced that it is worthy of more careful attention and of more liberal treatment than it has received heretofore. It is the policy of the Council to damage the Prince in the public estimation, by stigmatising him as truckling to foreigners; his views are not likely to be altered by their opposition, and the high estimation in which the people hold him is protected to a great extent by the popular ill-feeling that exists towards most of the Council. The only fear of the Prince's friends is, that some indiscretion on the part of foreigners visiting Pekin may give rise to reports which, magnifying as they travelled, would have the effect of delaying indefinitely the Emperor's return.

"There is no excitement amongst the people, and the business of every-day life goes on as before. The doings of the rebels excite no alarm, while the re-taking of Ngan-king and the 'fine weather' are talked of as betokening a happy reign for Ke-scang.

"Shing-paou, having returned to Pekin after a successful compaign against the rebels along the south-west borders of Shantung, has been again despatched to co-operate with San-ko-lin-sin along the east coast of that province."

"From Chefoo, one of the three northern ports, we have letters up to October 15th. Our correspondent arrived at that port on the morning of the 7th ultimo, when he found all the available forces landed and holding the place against rebels, the inhabitants being all in a most excited state. On the 8th, the French Admiral, who had arrived in his despatch-boat, the Feiloong, on the previous day, landed and took charge just in time to save the place, not from rebels, but from junk men who had landed to protect the hongs, but eventually took to looting, and would certainly have destroyed the place but for a small force of sailors, who cleared them out in an hour, killing eight and wounding as many more. Next day the rebel army appeared in force on the summit of the hills to the westward, and their advanced guard proceeded to set fire to some villages about two miles off. The gunboats Insolent and Drake were lying off Chefoo at this time, and one of them fired three shells into the rebels with such precision as to induce the entire host to decamp, leaving eight killed by the explosion of the shells. During the next three days, our correspondent says, the scene was truly heartrending; thousands of men, women, and children rushing in a frantic manner to the beach to embark on board the numerous junks lying in the bay, and not fit to hold one-half of those who sought shelter. The Admiral then despatched the Feiloong to Taku for forces, and she returned on the 12th with one hundred and fifty infantry, and towing a small gun-boat. On the 14th the whole force at the Admiral's disposal, about five hundred men, went out some ten miles westward, but only saw the destruction that had been made. The rebels had gone eastward, giving up everything to fire and sword. The scene of their recent visit is said to be frightful beyond description. Their object is extermination, but they indulge in the most atrocious cruelty wherever they are victors. The most unhappy part of this story remains to be told. It appears that two American misdirection of ceedings, gone away in the the rebels, either to urge clemency, as some suppose, or to see after the safety of a gentleman, brother of one of the missionaries, who was expected to arrive about that time from Tien-tsin, whence he was travelling overland. He did arrive safely, but only to find that his brother and his brother's friend had been cruelly put to death by the rebels. The bodies were brought in on the 16th, and they bore undoubted marks of torture. The unfortunate men were Messrs. Parker and Holmes, and the unhappy widow of one of them was at Chee-foo when the tragedy occurred. When it was reported that the two missionaries had been slain, a volunteer force of seven civilians of the Prussian Envoy's suite, with five officers and twenty men of the Prussian war frigate, proposed to go and re-cover the bodies; but the French Admiral forbade it as a breach of neutrality. Afterwards, when the gentlemen from Tien-tsin arrived and reported the road clear, the Admiral went along that same road in search of the rebels-at least so the report reaches us: he must have gone simply to witness the devastation they had made.

Shanghai is at present in a state of alarm on account of the daily increasing proximity of the insurgents to that city. That they would not willingly attack the foreigner may be true, but the necessity for food, not to say the craving for plunder, will perhaps prove too strong for them in the end.

The City of Canton was given up on the 21st ultimo, and the Chinese flag hoisted to the top of the flagstaff on the hill, amid a salvo ot artillery; the British ensign on the same day was raised at the Consulate. There has been some very sad occurrences at a place called Pok-lo in connection with the native Christians there—a native preacher having been put to death, refusing to recant the doctrines of Christianity.

The Governor of Macao has gone to Japan, with a view of negotiating a treaty with that country.

In local matters there is not much to place on record. Vessels have recently been coming into our harbour in every stage of disrepair from the effects of two terrific typhoons which occurred off Formosa, where at least two vessels-the Agnes and Pacific-are said to be totally wrecked ; the dates of those typhoons are the 14th and 18th of October; during that of the 18th, the barometer fell from 29.90 to 27.50 in two hours.

Fane's Horse arrived here yesterday from Tientsin in the Vulcan, en route for India.

The band of the 99th Regiment and that of the 5th B.N.L.I. are now playing regularly on the parade-ground, one on Tuesday and the other on Friday afternoon. Our police force has been slightly augmented by a few men from the last named regiment.

We had thought to have informed our home readers that Mr. Harry Parkes would go to England by the present mail, but it appears that, at the last moment, he has been ordered up to Shanghae. It is a pity to throw all the labour of Chinese diplomacy on Mr. Parkes, not to speak of its being highly impolitic to risk a serious injury to that gentleman's health by thus working him to death. Those who know such matters are aware that Chinese negotiations, once begun, often extend to nearly a couple of years; and we can only hope that Mr. Parkes may not be caught in the toils of fresh negotiations. When he does manage to get to England, however, we feel sure he will meet with a hearty welcome.

Mr. John Dent, head of the firm of Dent and Co., takes his departure for England, after a residence of twenty years in China. - Overland China

THE DELHI FAMINE RELIEF COMMITTEE have closed their labours. The receipts from local contributions were Rs. 48,184-3-4; and the whole Rs. 2,81,726-10-7. RETIREMENT OF COL. LEMESSURIER. No. 994.—The foll. paras. of a military letter from the Right hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 266, of Sept. 14, are published for general information of Sept. 14, are published for general information and guidance:—

1. I have received from Col. LeMessurier, of the Bombay army, and forward herewith copy of a letter addressed by him to the Adjutant gen. of the Army of that Presidency, in which that officer accepts "conditionally" the terms of retirement lately offered to regimental field officers of the Indian army.

2. It appears that Col. LeMessurier obtained leave from the Bombay Govt. in April, 1859, to proceed to England, on m.c., and that he elected to take that leave under the new furlough rules. He was induced to make this choice (although according to the old rules he had served his time for a colone's pension, whereas, according to the new, he had served short of that time by fifty days) because he believed that, as a brigadier on the staff, he would be entitled to the privilege granted to staff officers of retaining his appointment during 15 months' absence on sick leave.

3. He now requests that he may be considered as having served the full time for colonel's pension, and that he may be allowed to retire on the annuity to which he is entitled under the new scheme, adding that unless this be granted, he will of course elect to that unless this be granted, he will of course elect to wait until, in the course of events, he becomes entitled to full off-reckonings.

4. In publishing to the field officers of the army the offer of certain annuities, in addition to the pension to which they might be already entitled, I was actuated by a desire to facilitate the retirement of those among the regimental field officers who might feel that the late changes were calculated to deprive them of some of the advantages that the service had them of some of the advantages that the service had hitherto held out to officers in their position.

5. With this object in view, and considering that the whole proceeding is exceptional and extra-regulational, I am not disposed to insist upon a rigid adherence to the established rules in the case of regions. mental field officers who may be entitled to full pay retiring pension under either the old or the new fur-lough regulations.

6. I should wish, therefore, that Col. LeMessurier be permitted to retire on the pension of a colonel.

3rd Instance.—For having again visited the sergeants' mess of the provisional cavalry regt., at Barrackpore, on Aug. 7, and accompanied Sergeant James Spencer, H.M.'s 101st regt., from thence to his (the sergeant's) quarters, and remained in the quarters of the said sergeant until the following day.

Finding.—Guilton.

Finding.—Guilty.
Sentence.—To be dismissed the service. F. W. Burroughs, Lieut. col., President. (Signed)

Barrackpore, Oct. 7, 1001.

Approved and confirmed.

(Signed) HUGH Rose, Gen.,

C. in C. in India. Barrackpore, Oct. 7, 1861.

Calcutta, Oct. 17, 1861.

The sentence of dismissal will have effect from the date of promulgation of this order at the head quarters of H.M.'s 6th foot.

Tour of the Lieut. governor of the N.W. Provinces.

Oct. 12.—The Hon. the Lieut governor of the N.W. Provinces will proceed on his tour on the 15th proximo, and will visit the following stations on or about the dates indicated:

Cawnpore ... ... 15th Nov., 1861. ... 22nd " ••• Oraja ... 28th ... 10th Dec., 1861. Jhansie ••• ••• Calpee ... ... 20th , , ,

Officers in every department are informed that while the head of the Government is absent from Allahabad they should still address their letters to that station, except those of an emergent nature.

Any case not admitting of delay may be despatched to the head quarters of the Government, but it should be accompanied by copies of all papers necessary to enable the Lieut, governor to come to a decision on the point at once.

Musketry Practice.

Adj. Gen.'s Office, Simla, Oct. 16.—In directing the publication of the result of the musketry instruction of H.M.'s troops in the Bengal presy., during the annual course of 1860-61, the C. in C. regrets to observe that, although there is an improvement in the firing of several regiments, there is a falling off in many others, and that the general results are not what they ought to be.

2. In muskerry practice, as well as in every other matter relating to regiments, efficiency depends on the commanding officer. However talented and zealous the musketry instructor may be, his efforts to ensure correct shooting will be fruitless, unless the commanding officer personally interests himself in the most important duty, to enforce a strict adherence to the regulations which have been proved to ensure perfection. to ensure perfection.

3. The aiming and position drills once allowed to be carelessly performed, the annual practice of the regiment must at once deteriorate in projection to

4. H.E. requests that commanding officers will carefully bear in mind these observations, remembering that the responsibility of bad rifle practice rests with them.

5. Whilst the C. in C. thinks it right, for the sake prepared and punctually submitted to the account department. His Honour, therefore, directs, that practice, to publish it, on the other hand it is necessafter the report of the civil paymaster shall have been engrossed, all applications for privilege leave equally known the shortcomings of others.

6. H.E. is glad to see that the following corps have

1st Battalion 20th Foot, from 27:19 to 34:10 34th ,, 42nd ,, 30·25 28·76 48th 80.86 85.35 ,, 93rd 26.81

7. On the other hand, the undermentioned have fallen off: 1st Battalion 6th Foot, from 38:08 to 35:86
27th , 36:55 34:25
3rd Batt. Rifle Brigade 81:28 25:45

8. Private Myers, 3rd batt. rifle brigade, is the best shot in Bengal for 1860-61, and has won the prize of H.E. the C. in C., having made thirteen points in the first class at target practice.—By order of H.E. the C. in C. W. MAYHEW, Lieut. col., Adjutant general of the Army.

Delay in Furnishing Accounts, N.W.P.

Financial Dept., Nynee Tal, Oct. 14.-In an extract from their proceedings in the Financial dept., No. 1,184, dated Sept 23, the Govt. of India have expressed much disappointment at the delay which has occurred in the submission of the monthly abstract of receipts and disbursements for all India, prescribed in accordance with suggestions offered by the Budget and Audit Committee.

and Audit Committee.

2. This delay reflects more or less upon all officers in charge of treasuries, without whose separate abstracts for such month it is impossible for the deputy auditor and accountant general to prepare the consolidated monthly abstracts and the quarterly returns which he is required to render to the Govt. of India.

turns which he is required to render to the Govt. of India.

3. The Lieut. gov. observes with great regret that up to Sept. 9 the abstract returns from the N.W. Provs. for the month of May even had not been received by the auditor gen. of India.

4. Circular issued by the auditor general of India under instructions received from H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council will be shortly communicated by the deputy auditor and accountant general to all officers in the N.W. Provs. rendering accounts to his office; and the purpose of the Lieut. gov. in this notification is to require the most prompt and constant attention to the instructions and requisitions which the circular in question will be found to contain.

5. The date fixed for the despatch of the abstract of receipts and disbursements by each officer render-of receipts and disbursements by each officer rendering accounts to the deputy auditor general is the 2nd of the mouth following that to which it relates; and it is only by the strictest punctuality on the part of the treasury officers that the deputy auditor and accountant general will be enabled to comply with the orders of the auditor general of India, who requires that the consolidated monthly abstracts shall be despatched, without fail, on the 25th of each month by the deputy auditor and accountant general, "with a note," as directed by the Gov. gen. in Council, "of any of the subordinate returns which ought to have been, but have not been embodied in them." of receipts and disbursements by each officer render-

6. The Lieut, gov. is not content that the Financial Administration of the Government of India should be hindered, or that this Government should be brought into disrepute, by want of care or punctuality on the part of officers in charge of treasuries in these provinces. The Governor gen. in Council observes that "there is no single fact essential to making out such an account (as this monthly abstract) which is not irrevocably fixed; and which ought not to be recorded under its proper head on the evening of the day on which the account closes." And H.E. turther remarks that the return required "is a single half sheet of foolscap in a printed form, which ought to be filled by mere copying from accounts finally closed on the last day of every month. No calculation whatever, beyond a sum in addition, No calculation whatever, beyond a sum in addition, ought even to be required, and nothing but neglect or gross carclessness could lead to an incorrect result."

7. It is the belief of the Licut. gov. that whatever may have been the delay which has occurred hitherto, or its causes, the officers in charge of trea-suries in the North-Western Provinces, now better suries in the North-Western Provinces, now better informed of the great importance which is attached by the Viceroy and Gov. gen. in Council to the punctual rendering of the abstract accounts of re-ceipts and disbursements, will spare no exertion to fulfil his Excellency's expectations, and to have the return in question ready for despatch to the deputy auditor and accountant gen. within a day or two from the close of the month the transactions of which are recorded.

8. The Lieutenant-governor would rather trust to the zealous exertions of officers in charge of treasuries, and to their sense of the duty which they owe to the Jovernment they serve, than resort to coefcive measures; but it must be understood that inat-tention and neglect will not pass unnoticed or un-punished. The deputy auditor and accountant-general has been desired to publish in the Govern-ment Gazette the statement which he is required by the 16th paragraph of the auditor-general's circular to render, making known the names of all defaulting officers, and also to submit a copy to this Government for information, and for such notice as may be Repeated default on the part of thought proper. thought proper. Repeated default on the part of any officer will be regarded by the Lieutenant-governor as constituting a bar to his promotion, and whenever a want of care, or of punctuality, not fully explained and shown to be excusable, may be explained and snown to be excussive, may be brought to his notice, his Honour will be compelled, however reluctantly, to have recourse either to the measures of coercion, or to the penalties indicated in the auditor-general's circular above referred to. He hopes that he may be spared the pain of using any such severity.

By order of the Hon. the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces, Provinces,

GEORGE COUPER,
Sec. to Govt., N.W. Provinces.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

SATURDAY, December 14, 1861.

LORD CLIVE'S FUND.

GRATEFUL for the many benefits he had received from the first great English general in India, the Nawab Meer Mahomed Jaffier Khan at his death bequeathed to Lord Clive the sum of five lakhs of rupees, which were duly paid to that nobleman on his arrival in Calcutta in the following year. By a recent order, however, of the Court of Directors it was forbidden to their servants to receive presents, or legacies, of any kind from the natives. Unable, therefore, to appropriate this money to his own uses, Lord Clive, with the consent of the Directors, applied it to the formation of a Fund "for the benefit, relief, and maintenance of European officers and soldiers of the Company's service who, from wounds, length of service, or disease contracted during their service. should be incapable of serving any longer, or who should become invalids or superannuated in the Service; and of their widows; and also to provide for the widows of such of them as should die in the service." A little later the Nawab Syuf ood Dowlah contributed the princely sum of three lakhs to this Fund, the capital of which, by the addition of accumulated interest, amounted in 1770 to very nearly £125,000. The Company were constituted perpetual trustees of this endowment, of which they were ever most munificent patrons. It was further provided that if ever the Company ceased to employ either military or naval forces in the East Indies, they should be held answerable to Lord Clive's executors, administrators, and assigns for the sum of £50,000, together with the interest on the £30,000 bestowed by Syuf ood Dowlahsubject, of course, to the payment of all current pensions. Now, the contingency dimly foreseen by those who drew this Deed of Trust has actually arrived, and a claim has accordingly been put forward by the representative of Lord Clive's heirs and successors for the restitution of the original capital, with the interest of the additional three lakhs. claim, however, is certainly premature, and after a careful examination has been very properly dismissed by the Master of the Rolls. There is not the shadow of a doubt that on taking over the Government of India the Crown at the same time accepted all the liabilities, contracts, engagements, and fiduciary trusts appertaining to the Company. So long as there is an Indian Service-that is, so long as there are any survivors of the old Indian Service-there can be no change whatever affecting the pesition of this or any other Fund. But the question arises, will not the claim now unsuccessfully made be good in equity and sound in law on the death of the last survivor of the military and naval forces one Imperial army, every member of which | prevailed. offers himself for general service. Even the officers of the native armies can exchange to and from the line, and will no longer be exclusively employed eastward of the Cape. How, then, is this Fund to be applied? It clearly cannot embrace the entire naval and military forces of Great Britain, and there is no particular branch for special employment in the East Indies. Surely, then, the Fund must lapse to Lord Clive's heirs, administrators, and assigns, when the last of the Company's naval and military servants has been gathered to his forefathers. Many years will pass away before that hour arrives, and in the interval Dr. Cumming has promised us an universal cataclysm.

INDIAN FAMINES.

Some curious information on the subject of previous famines may be gleaned from Colonel Baird Smith's Report on that of 1860-61. While favouring the popular impression that droughts recur at tolerably regular intervals, that diligent inquirer adduces examples which seem to militate against the view they are intended to support. Thus between the scarcity of 1733 and that of 1744 eleven years intervened, whereas only eight elapsed before the next period of suffering. A glance at the different dates will show how great is the variance of intervals. The following years have all been marked with greater or less failure of the crops:-1733, 1744, 1752, 1770, 1783, 1790, 1803, 1813, 1819, 1826, 1833, 1837, and 1861-the shortest interval being four, the longest twenty-four years. Some of these instances, however, were rather seasons of scarcity than of famine, the worst being those of 1770, 1783, 1803, 1819, 1837, and 1861. The variation is here certainly much less than in the former catalogue, the shortest respite being thirteen, the longest twenty-four years; but even this is quite enough to dispose of the doctrine of recurring cycles. The worst of the whole series appears to have been 1770, in which, according to native tradition, the famine was caused, not by drought, but by the excess of the rain-fall. In that year the prices of food amounted almost to a prohibition of purchase. Instead of 28 seers (about 56 lbs.) of the best rice for a rupee, no more than three could be obtained for that sum. In like manner the coarser kinds rose in value from 40 to 31, inferior grains from 45 to 41, dal (pulse) from 30 to 4, and wheat from 26 to 41 seers per rupee, while ghee, or clarified butter, a very important element in the food of the natives, was exactly quadrupled in price. The mortality in Bengal was almost incredible, being variously estimated at from one in five to one in three of the entire population. The famine of 1783, if less intensely severe, was extended over a larger area, embracing not only Bengal and Orissa, but the Upper Provinces also as far as Lahore. It does not appear, however, that less than eleven or twelve seers of grain were procurable for a rupee. In 1803 the North-Western Provinces alone suffered, but the ravages of war were superadded to the horrors of famine. The spring crops were so completely destroyed by hailstorms that the Government was compelled to make large remissions of revenue and to offer bounties for the importation of Rice from

So wretched were the internal communications in those days, that while extraordinary exertions were made to send up supplies from Bengal to a point five or six hundred miles distant, in the immediately adjacent provinces of Rohilcund grain was far more ab undant and cheaper than in the former districts; but nothing appears to have been done to turn that rich granary to account. In 1819 the failure of the spring crops is attributed to a sharp frost, which in one morning withered every green thing. But though prices rose e normously in consequence of this rare phen omenon, the affliction was not nearly so sore as in 1837-38, when probably not fewer than 800,000 human beings perished from starvation. At Agra a hundred dead bodies were d aily buried by the police, and at Cawnpore a General Order was issued, directing the Commissariat Officer in charge of the Sudder Bazaar to take measures for causing the numerous corpses accumulating on the banks to float on below the station. The population affected by this terrible scourge was estimated at eight to nine millions, but the greatest mortality prevailed over an area peopled by about five millions. Many small proprietors were reduced to utter beggary, and even swelled the lists of mortality; and in the Agra Division 77,000 persons were daily employed on extraordinary works at the expense of the Government. The Anglo-Indian community subscribed upwards of £40,000 for the relief of the destitute, while the Government not only contributed with profuse liberality for the same purpose, but also remitted £600,000 of revenue. But, notwithstanding the utmost exertions on the part both of private individuals and public officials, the ordinary bonds of society were everywhere loosened. "Beginning," says Colonel Smith, "in Robilkund, the population gathered into bands for plunder, and, driven desperate by starvation, they everywhere attacked the grain stores in the larger villages and towns, and carried off their contents. Spreading towns, and carried off their contents. Spreading rapidly, the disorganisation soon reached the districts of the Lower Doab, and deplorable confusion Allahabad. Troops had to be moved out on some occasions, and during the whole course of the famine a largely augmented police force, both of horse and foot, had to be kept up to maintain the peace, a duty which, however, was very difficult to perform against large bodies of men whose natural instinct for fight or plunder was quickened by the sense of their own sufferings and the sight of those of their wives and children. Of such disorganisation as this there were no signs during the famine of 1860-61; and though this may in part have been due to the influence of military operations too recent to have lost their moral effect, yet I believe it was much more due to the far healthier condition of native society now than then." And yet the price of cereals was far more reasonable in 1837-38 than in 1860-61. At Allahabad it was 17½ seers per rupee, at Cawnpore, 131, at Allyghur 18, at Futtehghur, 113, at Agra 111 to 131, at Muttra, 12, and at Kurnal 12 to 14. In the worst localities the average price was about 12; seers per rupee; whereas in the late famine it was up to 71, and only fell to between 10 and 11 after the vast importations in the early part of 1861. The mortality, however, in the present year fell far short of the horrible experiences of 1860-61 was considerably higher than in rate system of assessment, the value of land 1837-38, the actual sufferings of the people were not nearly so great. As the difference in the value of money is certainly not sufficient to explain this anomaly, some other cause must be looked for; nor is it hard to be found. On the cession of these provinces to the British Government, a promise was given, subject to the sanction of the Court of Directors, that a permanent settlement of the land revenue should very shortly be established, but that sanction was fortunately withheld, and the assessment somewhat unjustly enhanced. It was fortunate that the settlement was not at that time effected, for in the general ignorance of native tenures the worst faults of Lord Cornwallis's system would inevitably have been repeated. But while congratulating the ryots of the North-West Provinces on their escape from a settlement which would have doomed them to endless poverty and bondage-however profitable it might have proved to the zemindars converted into landed proprietors from being farmers of the revenue and rent collectors-we cannot commend the bad faith of the Government or the arrogant stupidity of its officers in their subsequent fiscal relations with the people. "The assessments," says Colonel Baird Smith, "were excessive, unequal, and unintelligent. Fixity of demand was virtually unknown, and with the exception of a small part of Benares no settlements exceeded five years in duration, while a few were annual, and many triennial." It is patent to all that under such a system agriculturists were practically discouraged from attempting to improve the land, or to introduce any new mode of cultivation or variety of produce. The Civil Courts, too, were at that time utterly worthless, owing to the incompetence of the British officials and the corruption of the Amlah.

"No record of rights existed; no knowledge of prevailing tenures was available for their guidance; no standards of reference possessing any authority that commanded respect could be made use of. They could only make confusion worse confounded: and not only were the errors of the Revenue Department too often confirmed and repeated in the Courts, but decrees were constantly passed so irreconcilable with truth and justice, that it was absolutely impossible to execute them. So frightful at length became the confusion induced by these causes in the state of contusion induced by these causes in the state of landed property, that remedies, whose very violence is a measure of the height to which the evil to be abated had risen, were of necessity adopted. A Judicial Dictatorship was established in 1821, and all public and private transfers of land made within the first seven or eight years atter the Cession were subject to its decision. The expedient had but limited success, though the action of the Commission was vigorous enough. It illustrates their course in one of the districts which subsequently suffered most from the familie to mention that in Campuore they from the famine to mention that in Cawnpore they annulled 185 sales of land for arrears of public revenue out of 405 of which they took cognizance, or about 45 per cent. of the entire number."

Mr. Holt Mackenzie's Act, could it have been carried out in accordance with the intentions of its author, would have redressed many of the grievances of which the ryots complained, but in practice it completely broke down, and proved to be altogether unequal to the exigencies of the case. However, in 1833 a new settlement was effected, which civilians of the Thomason School were in the habit of anplauding as one of the highest evidences of human wisdom, but the defects of which were in vain pointed out by the European planters and outsiders until the experience of the late mutinies confirmed their judgment, and put the official authorities to open shame. At the same time, it must be freely admitted that, even titude of the people, whose happiness he will has greatly risen in value, and with it the prosperity of the people has been proportionately advanced. Its good points were, of course, only partially understood; nor had there been time to derive much positive benefit from its working, when the terrible famine of 1837-38 fell like a darkness over these fine provinces, and spread misery, ruin, and despair among all classes. Since that woful epoch there have been many abundant seasons, and agricultural property has accumulated to an extent previously unknown:

"To the great and unusual pressure of the public burdens, to the hopeless confusion or ambiguities of title, to the frequent and arbitrary interferences then prevailing, have succeeded assessments rarely heavy, generally moderate, and in many instances extremely light; titles minutely recorded and easily extremely light; titles minutely recorded and easily understood, long cases, and the guarantee of the enjoyment of all profits during the currency of such leases. The natural results of such a change in so vital a part of the social economy have grown steadily more and more apparent. Land has obtained an increasing marketable value. Its value as a security has doubtless been largely made use of in mitigating the pressure of the famine Beneath the surface there is continual change of proprietorship surface there is continual change of proprietorship in progress. Sales of land for acrears, as of public revenue, have almost disappeared from the public records, while sales by voluntary action in satisfac-tion of debts have vastly increased. These mutations almost uniformly indicate the healthy gravita-tion of capital to the land; and though some may mourn over the gradual but certain displacement of an ancient proprietary, with all its traditional me-mories, the revolution will advance it as surely as, in the struggle of life, industry, thrift, intelligence, and wealth must displace indolence, extravagance intellectual stagnation, and poverty. The general tendency of local influence is to check this progress but the effort is idle, and may be mischievous. The action itself is, in so far as the stability of society is concerned, matter for congratulation other than matter for regret; and it is determined by natural matter for regret; and it is determined by natural causes which can no more be interfered with arbitrarily without damage than can the natural ways regulating trade in any other forms. Whether we did it or not, however, the gradual growth of moneyed classes, and the progressive tendency of such classes to seek investments in land, are sure to bring the soil and the capital of the country more and more wisely into an union, to be fruitful ultimately in the best beneficial results to all."

In 1837 the land revenue of the North-Western Provinces was, in round numbers, about three-and-a-half millions sterling, indicating produce to the value of four-and-a-half millions-for, alas! the Government demand was at the rate of 66 per cent. - whereas at the present date the latter is estimated at seventeen-and-a-half millions, or five times the amount of the public demand at the former date, showing an increase of thirteen millions in the wealth of the landlords. It is acknowledged, however, on all hands that the assessment should not exceed 50 per cent. if the small proprietor is ever to rise above the condition of a mere labourer living from hand to mouth. This abatement would of itself greatly change for the better the aspect of the country and the condition of the peasantry; but if the advantage of a permanent settlement were superadded, it is impossible to form a too sanguine estimate of the future welfare of all classes of the native population. If a tolerably long settlement sufficed to mitigate the ravages of the late famine, a perpetual settlement with improved internal communication might be expected to render such calamity for the future comparatively harmless. If it be true that Lord Canning has resolved upon signalising the close of his administration by a proclamation to this effect, he will assuredly prove the greatest benefactor India has ever enjoyed, and will merit the eternal graunder this imperfect but comparatively mode- have so largely promoted and secured.

LORD CLIVE'S FUND. ROLLS' COURT, CHANCERY LANE, DEC. 6. (Before the MASTER of the ROLLS.) MARSH V. THE SECRETARY OF STATE IN COUNCIL FOR INDIA.

This-bill was filed by the personal representative of the late Lord Clive, praying a declaration as to trust of certain moneys under the following circumstances :- By a deed dated the 6th April. 1770, and made between the East India Company of the one part, and Lord Clive of the other part, after reciting that Lord Clive, being zealous for the prosperity of the Company, the security of their territories and territorial revenue in India, and their trade and commerce, which greatly depended on the bravery and conduct of the Company's troops, and considering that the establishment of a provision for such of the officers and private men employed in the Company's service as should be disabled by age, war, or disease contracted during their service would tend to induce fit persons to enter into the said service and encourage the bravery of the soldiery employed therein, had proposed to the Directors of the Company to appropriate the interest of five lakhs of rupees for the support of a certain number of officers, non-commissioned officers, and private men in the service of the Company, who from wounds, length of service, or diseases contracted during their service, were unable or unfit to serve any longer, and whose fortunes might be too scanty to afford the officers a decent, and the privates a comfortable, subsistence in their native country, and also to make provision for the widows of such officers and private men as should have been entitled to the said bounty, and reciting that Syuf-ood-Dowla, the then Nabob of Bengal, had contributed three lakhs of rupees to the same purpose, it was declared that the Company should be perpetual trustees of the eight lakhs of rupees for the benefit of the officers and privates in the Company's service and their widows, but it was provided that in case at any time after the year 1784 the Company should cease to employ a military force in their actual pay and service in the East Indies, and also ships for carrying on their trade and commerce, then and in such case the Company would pay to Lord Clive, his executors, administrators, and assigns, for his and their own use, the sum of five lakhs of rupees, but subject, nevertheless, to the payment of all such pensions and annuities as should at such time be chargeable upon the said trust funds. In the year 1834 the East India Company ceased to exist as a trading corporation, and from that time they ceased to employ any ships for the purpose of trade and commerce. In the year 1858 all the real and personal property, and all the rights, privileges, powers, and authorities, whether military or civil, formerly vested in the East India Company were, by Act of Parliament, transferred to, and vested in, the Crown. The plaintiff alleged that by reason of such Act of Parliament the Company had, within the terms of the deed, ceased to employ in their actual pay and service a military force in the East Indies, and that, consequently, as the representative of Lord Clive, he was entitled to the payment of the five lakhs of rupees, subject to the existing annuities and pensions charged thereon.

The case was argued on the 18th and 19th of November last, when his Honour reserved judgment.

Sir H. Cairns and Mr. Hobhouse appeared for the plaintiff; and the Solicitor-general, Mr. Forsyth, Mr. Follett, Mr. Melvill, and Mr. Wickens for the defendant.

The MASTER of the ROLLS said the recital in the deed was of great importance, as showing the object and purport of the deed. That object appeared to be to afford to Lord Clive the fullest security that the funds would be duly applied; and the general frame of the deed seemed to imply that possibly the Company might still exist without having in their employ any military force. The question appeared to him to turn principally upon the construction of the Statute transferring the rights, duties, and liabilities of the Company to the Crown, for he was quite of opinion that the event had happened contemplated by the deed-namely, the Company ceasing to employ in their | actual service any military force, and to have any ships for the purposes of commerce. If there were nothing else in the case, it would be the right of the plaintiff to sue the Company at law for payment of the money, but the Act of Parlia ment intervened, and, in fact, regulated the whole matter. By the Act all the real and personal property of the Company was vested in her Majesty, and the first question which arose was, whether these five lakhs of rupees formed part of the property of the East India Company. His Honour was of opinion that no distinction could be drawn between one species of property and another, and he was at a loss to understand to whom, according to the plaintiff's calculations, the three lakes of rupees belonged. By the terms of the Act the Company were expressly discharged from all duties of a fiduciary character, and if, therefore, it was held that these moneys did not pass to the Crown from the Company, the Company would be entitled to hold them discharged from the trust. According to the plain construc-tion of the deed, these five lakhs of rupees were trust moneys in the hands of the Company, and, according to the scope and clear meaning of the whole Act, these trust moneys, in common with all other trust funds, passed to her Majesty, to be applied in the same manner as they had previously been applied by the Company. In coming to this conclusion, he was glad to know that the effect would be to keep these funds applicable to the purposes for which they were originally intended, the only difference being that they would be administered by the hands of the Crown, instead of by the Company. The bill must, therefore, be dismissed.

BOMBAY, BARODA, AND CENTRAL INDIA RAILWAY.

The report of the directors states, that up to the date of the last advices from the managing agent, the continuous mileage actually under traffic was 1321 miles, from Doolia to Bulsar. The bridging of the rapid and difficult Nerbudda river had been most successfully accomplished, and the bridge was opened for traffic in the last week in May. This, and the other great bridge over the Taptee river, had withstood, without any damage whatever, the violence of the great monsoon, which had proved so destructive in many parts of India, and none of this company's works had suffered materially from its effects. The favourable nature of the gradients, and the efficiency of the rolling stock and other appliances of the road had been well tested by a train of seventytwo carriages, estimated to weigh 720 tons, and drawn by a single engine, having carried 4,000 persons from Bulsar to Baroda, 1224 miles, at a speed of twenty miles per hour. A table in the report showed the rates in which the number of passengers and tonnage of goods increased with the mileage opened. For the week ending 10th February last, eighty-one miles open, 28,994 passengers were conveyed, and 1,304 tons of goods, being at the rate of 357.95 passengers per mile, and 16:10 tons of goods. For the week ending 23rd of June, 109 miles open, 52,303 passengers were conveyed, and 2,491 tons of goods, being at the rate of 479.84 passengers per mile, and 22.85 tons of goods; and for the week ending Oct. 20, 132 miles open, 87,466 passengers were conveyed, and 4,803 tons of goods, being at the rate of 662.62 passengers per mile, and 36.38 tons of goods. There were now thirty-three first-class bridges completed upon the 132 miles of open line, comprising 215 spans of sixty feet, for which both piers and superstructure were furnished from England. The remaining forty-nine bridges to complete the entire line, comprising 250 spans of sixty feet, were now in process of erection. The aggregate length of first-class bridge viaduct, when completed, will make about six miles. The capital account showed that £2,857,067 had been received, and £2,438,969 expended, leaving a balance of £51,141 with the Secretary of State balance of £51,141 with the Secretary of State for India, and £366,956 at bankers and in India. The interest account from the commencement showed that £282,077 had been received, and C. A. Davies, Mr. E. de Crepeliue, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas.

£279,371 paid to the shareholders, leaving a balance of £2,705. The revenue account for the half year ending 30th of June last, showed that £15,570 had been received, and £9,513 expended, leaving a profit on the working of £6,057.

URGENT APPEAL

THE DIRECTORS of the STRANGERS'
HOME FOR ASIATICS having been permitted to attain, under most pressing pecuniary difficulties, the principal moral and social objects for which the Institution was established, in ameliorating the condition and alleviating the temporal and spiritual destitution of hundreds of helpless Asiatic and African Strangers, find themselves at the close of another year without sufficient Funds to meet the current expenses of the Institution.

The work has invariably been carried on with the strictest economy, and the Directors are thankful for the support they have hitherto received, but they do not consider themselves justified to borrow money to meet the current expenses of the Home, which amounts (including £250 interest on debt) to about £1,100 annually.

They therefore once more appeal to their friends, supporters, and the Public for Subscriptions or Donations, and would ask them, SHALL THE DOORS OF THE HOME BE CLOSED through the insufficiency of pecuniary aid, or because, under temporary circumstances, the number of immates in the Home are insufficient to render the Institution self-supporting?—Shall the metropolis of Christian England again subject itself to the reproach, that Oriental strangers visiting her shores, find a reception worse than that in a heathen land—no friend, no Christian as mpathy—nothing to prove we value the immense blessing the Gospel of the Lord Christ has given to us?—Shall the streets of the metropolis once more be mundated with Eastern mendicants?—Shall the jails, workhouses, and hospitals be again unnecessarily occupied by Asiatics?—Shall the labours of the last four years be thrown away, and the work suspended?—Shall Christian sympathy, assistance, and advice no longer be shown or given to helpless strangers?—Rather is it not imperative on the Directors to continue their appeal to the public for funds to carry on a work which has been such a blessing to hundreds, and acknowledged by the plilanthropist and Christian to be both needful, useful, and advantag

Donations and Subscriptions will be thankfully received by Messrs. Barclay, Bevan, Tritton, and Co., 54, Lombard-street; Messrs. Coutts and Co., 59, Strand; Messrs. ### MAPS OF INDIA & CHINA.

MAP of INDIA; showing the British Territories subdivided into Collectorates, and the position and boundary of each Native State; chiefly compiled from Trigonometrical Surveys, executed by order of the Honourable Court of Directors of the East India Company. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 6 in. high; 5 ft. 8 in. wide. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2: 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished. £3. 8s.

The object kept in view in compiling this map has been to render it available to the greatest possible extent for popular use. For this purpose the names of all statious, civil and military, are inserted, as well as those of all towns and places of note likely to be looked for. To make clear the subdivisions of the whole of the country, both British and native, the limits of the various districts and collectorates, with their names, are distinctly indicated. The railways and telegraphs are laid down, and the trunk roads conspicuously coloured. The newly-acquired district in Burmah is included. To avoid, however, the confusion consequent upon over-crowding, and make the map clear and easy for reference, the names of many small villages, and places of no present importance, have been omitted, and thus a very wide measure of comprehensiveness has been avoided.

A. CENNERAL, MAD of INDIAA, compiled

A GENERAL MAP of INDIA; compiled chiefly from Surveys executed by order of the Honourable East India Company, with the railways and telegraphs. On six sheets—Size, 5 ft. 3 in. wide; 5 ft. 4 in. high. £2; or, on cloth, in a case, £2. 12s. 6d.; or, with rollers and varnished, £3. 3s.

MAP of the ROUTES in INDIA; with Tables of Distances between the principal Towns and Military Stations. On one sheet—Size 2 ft. 3 in. wide; 2 ft. 9 in. high. 9s.; or, on cloth, in a case, 12s.

In this map are given the whole of the military and civil stations, together with the principal towns, the villages being omitted, so as to make the stations more prominent. The colouring defines the bundaries of the three Presidencies and shows also the railways and telegraphs.

MAP of INDIA and CHINA, BURMAH, SIAM, the MALAY PENINSULA, and the EMPIRE of ANAM. On two sheets—Size, 4 ft. 3 in. wide; 3 ft. 4 in. high. 16s.; or, on cloth, in a case, £1. 5s.

DRICHARD'S AROMATIC STEEL PILLS

PRICHARD'S AROMATIC STEEL PILLS for weak and relaxed constitutions, are especially recommended to persons residing in India and other hot climates. Their immediate action is to disperse that unpleasant feeling of relaxation and langour, by constringing and invigorating the muscular and nervous system, and strengthening the whole frame. By supplying the waste to which all weak constitutions are liable, they arrest that premature decay of nature so common in all hot climates. In boxes, 1s. 14d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s.

Prepared by W. Prichard, Apothecary 65, Charing-cross, London, and may be had of all Medicine Vendors.

His Royal Highness the General Commanding-in-Chief has been pleased to sanction the publication of "A Manual of Military Law," by Colonel Pipon, Assistant Adjutant-General to the Forces, which he considers will be a most useful addition to the books required by regulation to be in the possession of the Officers of the Army. It contains much instructive matter.

PREFACE.

The Mutiny Act and Articles of War having undergone considerable amendment in the present Session of Parliament, it has appeared to the authors a tting opportunity to lay before the military profession a concise treatise on the laws under which they serve.

In so doing they have not confined their attention to Courts-martial, but have endeavoured to provide the soldier of every rank and every service with the means of ascertaining his privileges as well as his duties and liabilities.

The Acts relating to the Militia have all been enumerated, but their bulk renders it impossible to give them at length in a work like the present. The Government having pledged themselves to consolidate the Militia laws next Session, perhaps there may then be some hope of presenting them to the reader in a comprehensive form. The Militia Bill of the present session, as it introduces some new and important provisions, is given at length in the Appendix.

A full abstract of the Laws affecting Volunteers and Yeomanry Corps occupies a separate chapter, and the Act whereby they are enabled to acquire lands for practice grounds (which at the time these words are written is yet before Parliament), will likewise be added.

A shorter and more popular notice of these Acts might have been more agreeable to the majority of readers, but in the hope of making this book useful as a book of reference, not only to Volunteers, but to magistrates and other civil dignitaries, it has been deemed more advantageous to ensure accuracy by quoting the words of the enactments, than by curtailment to risk the omission of important matter. Any reader disinclined to peruse the Acts at length, may find any subject on which he desires to inform himself by reference to the Index

The question of Tolls on the Metropolitan Bridges having lately excited some controversy, a notice of the exemption clauses in the several Acts will be found in the Appendix, where also the late General Order relative to retired pay to Adjutants of Volunteers has been subjoined.

The authors feel that they owe some apology for publishing a law book in the present novel form; but after much consideration and many friendly suggestions, they have preferred to compress matter which would well have filled a more bulky volume, into this handy and inexpensive shape, in order to bring it within the reach of every one.

Before concluding this preface, the authors are bound to record their obligations to that very useful and elaborate work, "Hough's Military Precedents," without the assistance of which their labour would have been much extended. They have also to acknowledge the assistance of "Simmons on Courts-martial;" "D'Aguilar on Courts-martial;" and H. B. Thompson's "Military Forces of Great Britain."

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

"INDIA," writes the summarist of the Bombay Gazette, in allusion to the death of Lady Canning, " India has been called to mourning and has put on the outward emblems of it. We believe that the sorrow which is universally manifested on account of the death of Lady Canning is genuiue and deep." In our last Summary we informed our readers of that melaucholy event, little imagining at the time that within a few short hours our London contemporaries would be filled with lamentations over a national calamity. The unexpected desase of H.R.H. the Prince Consort has affected every inhabitant of these realms as if he had sustained a private and domestic affliction. Since the death of the Princess Charlotte, in 1817, no such poignant and universal sorrow has overwhelmed this nation. The personal love with which our gracious Sovereign has inspired her subjects caused every heart to sympathise with her Majesty under her terrible bereavement. The first expression of grief was for the widowed mother suddenly deprived of the faithful partner of her joys, the father of her children, her truest friend and wisest counsellor. To this natural and unselfish movement of sympathy succeeded a bitter sense of injustice rendered to the departed Prince, so cruelly misunderstood and distrusted while he lived, but to whom in death the nation recognises its long accumulating debt of gratitude.

a sagacious statesman, an eulightened patron of arts, industry, and science, a judicious philanthropist, an earnest and sincere Christian. has passed from among us in the very prime of manhood, in the full enjoyment of intellectual powers, and in the exercise of every virtue. These few and feeble words to the memory of one so unostentatiously good and so truly great can hardly be out of place, even in a journal devoted in some degree to local and class interests, for nothing British was fureign to the understanding or the heart of the late Prince Consort.

It is confidently stated by the Friend of India that the Secretary of State has finally decided upon transferring the seat of Government from Calcutta to the Hills. Simla is spoken of as the site of the new capital; but, considering the severity of the winter at that sanitarium, it might be suggested that Darjeeling would in many respects be preferable. It appears to be quite certain that Allahabad will supersede Agra as the seat of the Provincial Government, and it is said that twentyone lakhs of rupees will be appropriated to the erection of the necessary offices.

Lord Canning was expected to leave the Presidency very shortly for Rangoon, and would not return for about three mouths. A stockjobbing rumour was circulated in the City last Saturday, to the effect that an extra steumer had arrived with the intelligence of an insurrection of the Sikhs. A moment's reflection might have satisfied the most credulous that no steamer could possibly outstrip the telegraphic communication between Alexandria and Marseilles but no story is too wild or marvellous for the Stock Exchange. It is true, however, that an extra steamer was chartered by Lord Canning, and despatched in haste to Suez, but the news with which it was freighted related to his lordship's melancholy bereavement, and not to any event of a public or political nature.

His Highness the Nizam having overcome his ill-timed scruples was invested with the insignia of the "Star of India" on the 25th of last month. A similar honour has likewise been conferred on the Maharajah of Cashmere, at Jummo.

In the course of the twelve months between the 1st October, 1860, and the 30th September, 1861, it appears that 916,578 bales of cotton have been shipped from India for this country. It is a hopeful sign that the Maharajah of Rewah has taken steps to encourage the growth of cotton within his territory; and in the Madras Presidency it is proposed to remit the assessment for five years on land employed in experiments in cotton cultivation. The remis-A loving husband, a fond but prudent father, cion, however, will be made in favour only of a sagacious statesman, an eulightened patron a few intelligent Natives, and even then in no one iustance to a greater extent than for thirty acres.

From Mr. James Low's annual statement we learn that in the present year the shipments of gold to the East amounted to £781,043, and of silver to £6,586,747. Since 1850 the exports of gold represent the value of £8,108,179, and of silver the enormous sum of £81,748,579. In addition to this £2,436,694 of gold, and £16,382,348 of silver were sent from the Mediterranean ports.

All possible means were immediately taken, with the assistance of H. M. S. Ariel, to get her affoat, which was accomplished in about two hours. Finding she had carried away her rudder, and had sprung a very bad leak, which the engines and pumps were unable to keep down, the starboard engine being disabled, and the water eventually putting out the fires, Commander Worsley deemed it advisable to haul her upon the beach, where she was lying up to the date of the last advice received. H. M. S. Ariel was in company, and the Zerobia will pro-

AMALGAMATION.

EXPLANATION OF DOUBTFUL POINTS IN THE AMALGAMATION ORDER OF 10TH APRIL.

No. 1047 of 1861.—His Excellency the Governor in Council directs the publication of the subjoined Questions on subjects of general interest, and the Answers given by Government, in continuation of those published in Government General Order of the 11th October, 1861 :-

Question 124. When an Officer of the Staff Corps is placed on the out-of-India rate of pay or on the half-pay List, is he permitted to reside out of India; and if so, will the time so passed count for pension under paragraph 65, viz., two years for one, or year for year?

Answer. [Paragraph 98.] Officers on half-pay or on out-of-India rate of pay can reside out of India; but no half-pay service reckons towards pension. Officers out of employ and available for employment will not be put on out-of-India

Q. 125. Is residence in India compulsory on an Officer who is unemployed and on half-pay under paragraph 98?

A. Residence in India is not compulsory on an Officer put on half-pay. Such Officer can reside where he likes, notifying his place of residence to Government.

Q. 126. With reference to General Orders No. 332, paragraphs 46 to 48, and No. 807, of 1861, paragraphs 16 to 21, will Colonels (Regimentally or by Brevet) of the Indian Regiments of Artillery and Engineers continue as heretofore to rise to vacancies in the grades of General Officers according to their position in the Gradation List of Officers of the three Presidencies?

A. Yes.

Q. 127. Will the name of a Regimental Lieutenant-Colonel, accepting the retiring annuity, be retained in the Gradation List of Officers of the three Presidencies, as well as in the list of Regimental Lieutenant-Colonels; and if so, how will the promotion to the grade of General Officer be regulated on his name coming to the top of the list of Colonels and a vacancy taking place in the grade of General Officers?

A. No; an Officer so retiring no longer belongs to the effective branch of the Service, though his name is retained in italics in the particular list to which he belonged, to regulate the promotion of those who stood below him in that List. The retired Officer will obtain a step of Honorary Rank, and will have no claim to further Line promotion.

Q. 128. With reference to the decision* of the Secretary of State for India, that the new Furlough Regulations shall not have retrospective effect in the case of Officers brought upon them by admission to the Staff Corps, an Officer inquires whether a similar ruling will be made in the case of Officers who accepted the said Regulations previous to their admission to the Staff Corps?

A. The Rule laid down by the Secretary of State applies only to Officers who, up to the date of joining the Staff Corps, had not availed themselves of the advantages of the new Furlough Rules,-not having enjoyed the advantages of the Rules they are exempted from the disadvantages.

Q. 129. With reference to her Majesty's Royal Warrant, dated 16th January, 1861, instituting the Staff Corps, Clause 2, paragraph 2, and to the Right Hon. the Secretary of State's Despatch, No. 315, dated 9th August, 1861, paragraph 1, published in Government General Order No. 824, dated 17th September, 1861, in which the effect of leave of absence (either on Sick Certificate or private affairs) on promotion in the Staff Corps is defined-viz., "that leave of absence will reckon as part of the period of the General Service required for promotion," provided the full term of

Staff duty has been performed—an Officer states that the answer given by Government to Question 114, published in Government General Order No. 913, dated 11th October, 1861, is apparently at variance with the above Despatch; and it appears that "no leave except privilege leave is to reckon towards promotion, except in the case of Lieutenant-Colonels?"

A. The answer is not necessarily at variance with the Despatch. It was intended by the Answer to Question 114 that no leave except privilege leave is allowed to reckon in the period of Staff Service required towards promotion, except in the case of Lieutenant-Colonels.

THE CAPUA OF INDIA.

As the political metropolis of British India, Calcutta, is doomed, that all-powerful and irresponsible autocrat, the Secretary of State for India, has declared it to be his will that the Governor-general and Council shall reside in the Hills. Calcutta is thus degraded to be the capital of Bengal, whose Lieutenant-governor will occupy the Government House built by Wellesley, while the local Council sit in the seats erst filled by the Imperial Legislature. The Building Committee appointed to draw up plans for a magnificent and capacious pile of public offices, which was to occupy the site of Writers' Buildings or of the Treasury and Spence's Hotel, have no sooner completed their labours than they are told their plans are useless, for the public offices are to be removed to the Hills. Meanwhile, Writers' Buildings is to be purchased, not to make way for a new Downing-street, but to accommodate the offices until they are removed. The spare ground behind will be built upon, and when the Government of India is transfered the whole will still be available for the provincial Government of Bengal. The date of the removal is not fixed, and even the site of the new capital is unsettled. Simla will probably be the chosen spot. Poona has been thought of, as being geographically nearer London, and close to the focus in Bombay, in which all the railway lines of India may be said to converge; but in a sanitary point of view the capital of Sivajee is not superior to Calcutta. It may be years before the removal is effected, and political changes at home may yet avert the impending fate. Only this much is certain at present, that Sir Charles Wood has ordered the transfer, and Lord Canning has shelved the plans of the Building Committee for this reason. If we remember the Governor-general's expressions, in his Rajmahal speech, of sympathy with the officials doomed to toil year after year in the plains, and his declaration of the envy he felt towards Sir Robert Montgomery, who enjoys such facilities for governing from the Hills; and if we reflect on the monstrous proposition to convert the Imperial Legislature into a flying Council, which may be summoned to meet anywhere all over India, we may believe that Lord Canning is not averse to the change.

The reason assigned for so serious a revolution is the health of those English statesmen who may be expected more and more largely in the course of time to take a share in the government of India. Has not Sir Charles Wood himself looked with a longing eye at the honours and power attached to the viceroyalty of the East, and been sadly forced to put them from him by the thought of the climate of Bengal? Did not two noble dukes also sacrifice their ambition to their love of life? Did not Mr. Wilson lay down his life in Calcutta, and has not his successor been forced to flee from its deadly influences? Has not Sir Henry Ward fallen a victim to Madras cholera, and is it not well-known that Sir W. Denison begged hard to be allowed to remove permanently to the Neelgherries? Is it not the case that fear of the climate leads financier after financier and barrister after barrister to refuse the solid honours of the Indian Council and the doubtful dignity of an Indian Puisne Judge? If India has, by a so-called process of imperial administration, if her services have been stripped of monopoly and opened to every Englishman, if the clamour of the settlers for English laws, English lawyers, English Governors, and English modes of government is to be listened to. then does it not follow that all these boons can be conferred only from the most English-like elimate India affords? The truth is, the intellectual classes of England find all the Indian prizes offered to their grasp, and yet the fear of a tropical climate keeps them back. Expectant officeholders are no better off than they were before, unless India can be governed from the Hills.

Nothing, we seriously believe, will so imperil the very existence of our power in the East, as this proposed change. The Hills will prove India's Capua. There the tide of our military success, and our still more glorious political and social triumphs will stop, and begin to recede till we are driven out as Hannibal was from Italy. Grant that railways and telegraphs will connect the new capital with the plains-for the change will not be attempted till the railway system and its main feeders are complete; grant that with safety the Viceroy, his Councils and Secretariats may be left to take their ease in the Hills,-what will be the effect on all the subordinate Govern-ments and officials? The fashion thus set, a few vears will see the plains deserted. English officers and troops will be separated from the people and look down at them from hill sanitaria, igno rant of those secret currents of feeling which, clustering round a greased cartridge, upset our empire, and careless of those rumours which should give warning of the coming storm. Has our experience of 1857 not been bitter enough? But for the absence of General Anson in the Hills, Delhi might have fallen in a week from the entrance of the Meerut mutineers into the city, rebellion would have been paralysed, from the absence of a centre round which to strengthen itself, and Oude would never have rebelled. Had Sir R. Mont-gomery or Brigadier Corbett been in the Hills as Sir J. Lawrence was, instead of in Lahore, on that dread 11th of May, the skilful disarming scheme could never have been carried out, and the Poorbeas would have extinguished the English name in the Punjab. And not merely in a crisis or in time of war, but for the purposes of ordinary administration, must English Governors and officials live in the midst of the natives. The very presence of high officials, the knowledge that a Governor is here, a Lieutenantgovernor there, a General here, a Commissioner there, the existence of all that constitutes the sirkar before their eyes, keeps the natives faithful. It is thus our fear is upon them and our prestige upheld, thus that we appeal to their imagination. No system of government can ever prosper, either in the East or West, unless its head is on the spot. In India especially is this the case, for there the result of government from the Hills is even at present that interminable correspondence of which the Post-office so bitterly complains, and those multitudes of circulars which are at once unintelligible and contradictory. The secret of the success of every successful ruler in India, from Clive to Wellesley, Lord W. Bentinck and Lord Dalhousie, of such men as the Lawrences and Sir George Clerk, is their personal influence and activity among both natives and Europeans. The astonishing power of the last as a Political Agent was due to his habit of constant supervision with his own eyes, a habit he is now exercising with such admirable results in Bombay. The Sikhs used to say of him-" there is no purdak from the Umballa-

But we deny the truth of the reasons assigned by Sir C. Wood for this change. Mr. Wilson, his medical attendant assures us, would have died anywhere of the disease from which he had been suffering for years. Sir H. Ward fell a victim not to the climate but to cholers, which might have seized him in England, after ruling for years in a far more tropical climate which knows no cold. Do the West India Colonial Governors stipulate for a sanitarium before they accept their appointments? Look down the long list of Engamalgamation, been absorbed into the system of lish peers who worked hard as Governors-

MR. LANGDON, Secretary to the Great Indian Peninsular Railway, proceeded to Galle by the China steamer on the 16th November. We regret to learn that his departure is occasioned by illhealth, and, under medical advice, he will proceed from thence to Australia or to England. The company will lose a hard working and efficient servent.

RETIREMENT OF OFFICERS .- The following officers of the Bombay Army have sent in their papers to retire from the service with annuity, as authorised in the Government General Order of the 31st October:—Colonel J. pects for cotton, have become less cautious, and freel enter into operations, and business consequently has been done to a larger extent than was done the previous fortnight. Speculation is also very active, it being now thought safer to transact at the present rates than it was work thought safer to transact at the present rates than it was two months ago at the then ruling rates. Stocks are fast accumulating. Wool. An active demand continues to exist for this staple, and prices have gained a further advance. Holders are very firm, owing to the stocks being scanty. Oilseeds.—A brisk demand prevails for Linseed, and a considerable rise has taken place in the prices; holders are very firm. Rapeseed has risen a little in value, and the stocks being small, the transactions are moderate. Sesame seed is scarce, and held for very high prices. Coffee.—Mocha is to be had in very small quantities only at Rs. 15 to 15½; Malabar still out of stock. pects for cotton, have become less cautious, and freel

THE STRAITS.

SARAWAK.—Sir James Brooke, K.C.B., Rajah of Sarawak, left Singapore for England in the mail steamer on the 22nd October, and, we are glad to say, in apparently better health than on his arrival in the Indian Archipelago a few months ago. During his brief visit to Borneo Sir James has accomplised a great deal of work, very conducive to the future prosperity and stability of the State of Sarawak. He has restored the cordial relations between the Government that place and the Sultan of Brunai, which for some years past had appeared to be suspended. By his arrangements with the Sultan and his subsequent proceedings at Muka, he has brought a large extent of the coast under the complete control of Sarawak, and has thus greatly enlarged the resources of the latter, for not only is the new territory valuable on account of its abundant supplies of sage and other vegetable productions, but its mineral treasures are also considerable, and if found in the vicinity of the rivers will be easily workable. Already several seams of apparently available coal are reported to have been found at Bintult and other places along the coast, and considerable beds of antimony and other minerals are known to exist at various spots on this newlyacquired territory. But however valuable to Sarawak the result of Sir James Brookers recent proceedings may promise to prove, the immediate as well as the prospective effect is, and will be, no less beneficial to the inhabitants of the coast now submitted to the rule of Sarawak. They have already been delivered from the oppressive and harassing rule of the Brunai Pangerans and other Malays who for many years have preyed upon the settled inhabitants, depriving them under various pretences of much of their substance. The piracy which has so long vexed this coast will be put an end to, for the Dyaks will no longer find the way open forthem to the sea, and they will be deprived of the countenance and support they received from many of the dissolute and unprincipled Malays along the coast. And finally, not only will the populations be able to cultivate their grounds in peace and with the certainty of being able to reap what they have sown, but they will have a ready mart open to them at which they will be able to dispose of their raw produce to advantage, and receive in return those articles of foreign manufacture which they have been accustomed to buy, in much more favourable terms than they have been used to.

The future of Sarawak has every appearance of being a prosperous one, and will, we have no doubt, be the best testimony of the great value of Sir James Brooke's proceedings from first to last to the cause of civilisation.

By the last accounts from Sarawak we learn that Captain Brooke had been visiting Bintulu and the other places recently placed under the jurisdiction of Sarawak, and that everywhere the inhabitants were rejoicing at the change of Government, and preparing to visit Muka, Sarawak, &c., for trading purposes. The only person likely to give trouble was the veteran pirate Rentaub, who, perched on the top of a mountain strongly fortified, has hitherto set at defiance all attempts to bring him to submission. Means, however, are being adopted which will probably overcome his resistance, and by his fall the complete control of the dependent territory belonging to Sarawak will be assured .- Singapore

General of India, and how many have succumbed to the climate? Only Lord Cornwallis, and he came to India to hold office a second time contrary to medical advice. Lord Dalhousie held office for seven years, in spite of the reiterated protests of his physician, and he paid the penalty; but few have ever worked like him. All experience shows that with occasional tours through India, a Viceroy or Member of Council may be as healthy in India as in England, and return after a five or six years' spell of hard work to his native land to renew his youth. What the subordinate officials want, the mass of whom must always be in the plains, is increased facilities, in furlough rules and low fares, for a visit to England, and some means of recreation and holidaymaking in India. Every year will add to such facilities.

Calcutta, or the delta of Bengal, with its teeming millions, its vast wealth, and its military command of Northern India, is the natural capital of Southern Asia. Cotton may add to the wealth of Bombay, but Calcutta is the centre of a mine of undeveloped resources of which cotton is only one element. Bengal and Burmah have a soil. mineral treasures and vast wastes which involve a future far grander than cotton alone can give to Bombay. Calcutta has historical associations, as well as commercial and military advantages, which no other city in the East possesses. As well transfer the Court and Cabinet to Southampton, Liverpool or Glasgow, as remove the Viceroy to Poons or the Hills. If Simla is to be the seat of Government, we see no reason why it should not be transplanted altogether to Westminster, and the office of Viceroy, with the Council and Secretariats, be for ever abolished. It will be safer, cheaper, and wiser to rule India from London than from the Himalayas. - Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE LATE GENERAL SIR WILLIAM RICHARDS. It is with extreme regret that we have to announce the death at Nynee Tal, on the morning of the 1st of November, from chronic bronchitis, of General Sir William Richards, K.C.B., in the eighty third year of his age. The late general was the senior officer of the Bengal army, there being none higher in rank, or of longer servitude, than him belonging to the late Company's service in the country. The "Army List" gives the subjoined memo of his service:—"General Sir William Richards, K.C.B. (26th N.I.), was present with the volunteer battalion at the siege of Seringapatam, and throughout the operations in Mysore, 1799, medal; also against the Rajah of Palahewar; returned to Bengal and was employed with his regiment at the taking of the Fort of Budaon about 1802; at Jaitpore, 20th of July, 1804, served throughout the operations in Bundelkund, in command of the native brigade, or Nawab Mahamed Jewun Khan. In 1807 was present at the storming of Kenonah, and taking of Gunnowur. Nepal war 1814, 1815, 1816, medal; present at the assault of Kaluejir; commanded the force at Peacock Hill, and the affair of the Punjore Valley, medal; marched with his regiment from Moradabad to Bareilly in twentyfour hours, and quelled the insurrection here in 1816. In March, 1821, commanded a force in the Lurka Cole country. From 1821 till 1824 com manded the fortress of Asseerghur, and commanded the first brigade of General Morison's force in Arracan, 1825, and was present throughout the operations in that country, C.B."-Oudh Gazette.

NORTH-WEST PROVINCES.—It is stated that in the event of Mr. Edmonstone resigning his appointment, as Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces, his successor will be Mr. Harrington.

LIEUT.-COL. (MAJOR-GENERAL) SIR PATRICK GRANT, K.C.B., has been promoted to the rank of Colonel, in succession to General (Colonel) Sir W. Richards, K.C.B., deceased.

SIR SYDNEY COTTON has been suddenly attacked with a severe illness, and has been advised to proceed to Europe immediately.

THE EXPEDITION TO CENTRAL ASIA is now hopeless, so far as assistance from the Government is concerned. When the refusal of the Honourable Mr. Bruce to apply to the Pekin authorities for a passport for Captain Smyth's party was received, the Bengal Asiatic Society resolved to ask Lord Canning to extend the protection of Government to Captain Smyth in a visit to Lassa and the exploration of Suddya and Assam. Actuated by what we cannot but consider too sensitive a regard for the prestige of the British name, Lord Canning has declared that he will not countenance or sanction any expedition into countries where he could not avenge the death of British officers. It now remains for Captain Smyth to undertake the mission in a private capacity. are sure a companion either in the Military Service like Captain Grant, or in the Civil Service like Mr. Dunlop, might be found to join him. Friend of India.

Public Works.—The Governor-general has sanctioned 21 lacs of rupees to be expended in three years for public works. Seven lacs of this sum being sanctioned for the season 1861-62, have been placed at the immediate disposal of the Executive Engineer, Captain Peile; 3 lacs for constructing the wharfage between the Jumna Railway Bridge and the Fort; and 4 lacs for the erection of Government offices. The latter sanction settles the question of Allahabad versus Agra, as the capital of the North West, in favour of the former, and we hope those who have been hitherto hesitating in building houses for themselves or on speculation will no longer waver or speculate, but set to work with zeal and energy, and let the appearance of our capital be more comely and inviting than it is at present.

THE DALHOUSIE INSTITUTE .niversary of the Dalhousie Institute was held on the 11th of November. The position of affairs regarding the scheme for the erection of a new building is that the Governor-general has allowed the period within which the necessary amount of money must be raised to be extended to the end of this year. As the prize plans were not fully approved of, a design was prepared by Captain Price, the civil architect, which has been adopted by the Governor general, so far as the building is itself concerned, but the selection of the site is reserved for future decision. The public funds of the institution amount to Rs. 1,04,973. There is a balance in hand on account of the Calcutta Institute of Rs. 153,7,2, and on account of the Dalhousie Institute of Rs. 25,694. The Hon. Mr. Laing was elected president for the ensuing year. The vice-presidents are Co-lonel Baird Smith and Rajah Pertab Chunder Sing. Sir Robert Napier was called upon to take chair in the absence of Sir Bartle Frere. Mr. Whitten proposes to establish a class for the practice of vocal music on the Hullah system.

H.M.'s 107TH REGIMENT has marched from Agra for Lucknow. We have much pleasure in subjoining the substance of a brigade order issued by Brigadier C. Troup, C. B., to this regiment upon its departure from Agra, where they have, off and on, been so long cantoned: "The Brigadier Commanding cannot allow the corps to quit Agra without placing on record his high appreciation of the soldier like manner in which they have at all times conducted themselves whilst they have been under his command: their behaviour has always been such as to merit his entire approbation. The ready and soldier-like manner in which the late 3rd European Regiment volunteered almost in a body for her Majesty's 107th Regiment of the line, and the uniform good conduct which prevailed amongst the men during unusually trying times of sickness, are matters which have already been reported by the brigadier to his Excellency the Commander in-Chief, and he feels assured that her Majesty's 107th Regiment will always, by their soldier-like and praiseworthy conduct, earn the esteem and confidence of their superiors. The Brigadier Commanding begs to assure Colonel Darval, the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men of her Majesty's 107th Regiment, of his sincere good wishes for their health, happiness, and prosperity wherever they may go."- Delhi Gazette.

LETTER FROM THE INDIGO DISTRICTS .readers, will peruse with considerable interest the following letter on the Small Cause Courts and the state of Nuddea, written by one whose position and familiarity with the people and the language give his statements weight. He entered Nuddea with decided prejudices against the settlers and in favour of the peasantry. His experiences justify the view we have all along entertained of the indigo and rent difficulties, and of the conduct of the ryots:—
"Nuddea, Nov. 8.—I quite agree with you in thinking that the success of the Small Cause Courts depends mainly on their having good Judges. The procedure of the Mofussil Small Cause Courts, though not precisely like those of the Presidency towns, is in my opinion very good, and there is no reason why they should not work quite as well as the English County Courts, if presided over by really efficient Judges. Barrister and Attorney Judges who know the language are the best kind of men to have. I have not been able, from personal observation, to form an opinion of the Sudder Ameen Judges; but it does not seem to me that a man who has all his life been accustomed to the dilatory and complicated proceedings of the old Mofussil Courts is likely to make a Small Cause Court work efficiently. to the adaptability of the Courts to the indigo districts, I think they are just the very things wanted to put matters right again. If the ryot breaks his contract, or takes advances without any intention to sow, or seizes the planter's land, the planter has his remedy at once and can get full compensation for such wrongs. The ryot also has his remedy if the planter takes the law into his own hands, rightly or wrongly. I think there is no doubt about indigo being unprofitable to the ryot in nine cases out of ten. That appears to me to be the root of the evil. Unless the planters follow Mr. Hill's example and give better prices for the plant, I doubt whether there will be any more indigo sown in this district after the terms of the existing contracts have expired. I have not formed a decided opinion yet about the rent question, and shall wait till I have had more experience before I say anything on that subject. My impression is that indigo is at the root of that also; but I may be wrong. The Small Cause Courts are becoming more popular now, and are doing some good. The judges have had a good many cases between planters and ryots, chiefly for breaches of contract. The ryots have committees' in some of the villages, for the prevention of indigo cultivation. Some of the members of these committees have had to pay a considerable amount of damages to the planters, and I hope they will not be so troublesome again. You may fancy what a state of matters there has been here, when these 'Committees' have been in the habit of fining and imprisoning ryots who had voluntarily entered into indigo contracts. The people here are as regardless of truth as the Calcutta Bengalees, and quite as knowing. It would be a good thing to commit a few of them for perjury occasionally, and this may be easily done when the Penal Code comes into operation. At present the Small Cause Court Judges have not the power to send a man up for perjury, and some of the natives are beginning to find that out. The time of some of the Judges will now be very fully occupied, as they have the work of a collector under Act X. added to their other duties. Messrs. Watson and Co., and others, have, I believe, an immense number of suits for rent, ejectment, enhancement, &c. to put in."-Friend of India.

Lahore, Nov. 1.—The other day the displeasure of his Excellency the Governor-general was telegraphed to the Nawab of Bhawulpore with regard to his unbecoming conduct towards the family of his late minister. The Nawab, on receipt of this, immediately set at large the family of the deceased minister, as well as one Abdool, a British subject, who was also confined there. Great disorder at present prevails at Bhawulpore; its inhabitants commit murders and remain unpunished by the Nawab. The matter has attracted the attention of the authorities here, and an inquiry has been instituted.

HER MAJESTY'S 75TH REGIMENT, now garrisoning Fort William, and which it was expected would return to England this cold season, will not go home, but remain another year in India, as at present arranged, though possibly there is still a chance of its getting away. It was at one time intended to be relieved by a regiment from the late China force of occupation, we believe H. M.'s 44th Foot: but as the 83rd regiment, on the Bombay side, is to be relieved from that source. and return to England immediately, we fear that H. M.'s 75th must look to some other quarter for a substitute corps, to enable it to get out of India before next hot season. Regiments do not generally get more than one year in garrison at Fort William; and we should think it is quite enough, and that a second would tell upon the health of the officers and men. A garrison life, in India, with its numerous restrictions and privations, as regards exercise, liberty of range, and pure air, is very trying to a British regiment, and should not, except in cases of emergency, be prolonged beyond a year.-Englishman.

Mr. Gibb, Secretary to the Civil Finance Commission, is to be appointed Deputy Commissioner of Paper Currency in charge of the Bengal circle of issue on a salary of 2,000 Rupees per mensem.

EXTINCTION OF THE BENGAL CAVALEY.—This day, November 6th, or a very little later, terminates the existence of the late Company's Bengal Cavalry regiments, by the dispersion of the 4th and 5th Bengal European Cavalry, to join the three new Hussar Regiments of H.M.'s line, being formed on the 1st, 2nd, and 3rd Bengal European Cavalry, at Cawnpore, Muttra, and Peshawur. By this final arrangement the officers of four of the late Company's Bengal Native Cavalry regiments, or two of the European Cavalry corps which succeeded them, are totally thrown out of employ in their own branch of the service; and cannot even get "general service," if desirous of it.

BENGAL ARTILLERY.—The following table will be found interesting to our military readers, as it shows casualties by deaths, retirements, resignation, &c., in the Bengal artillery regiments since the year 1800, a period of sixty years:—

	Total num- ber in 60 years.		ital casu ies in 60 years.	1	Percentage of casualties.
Colonels	474		24		. 5.063
Field Officers	1.071	•••	95		0.074
Captains	8,221	•••	145		4.501
Subalterns	7.207		219		8.080

The casualties by deaths only were as follows:—Colonels, 24, equal to 5.063, at a percentage; field efficers, 37, ditto 3.455, ditto; captains, 35, ditto; 2.639, ditto; subalterns, 170, ditto 2.359, ditto.—Bombay Gazette.

SUTTEE .- A correspondent of the Oudh Gazette describes a case of suttee which occurred at the village of Basa in the Hurdui district. The woman who sacrificed herself was a Koormee by cast, and about fifty years of age. Her husband had been dead about ten years. When she expressed her desire to perform suttee none of the people dissuaded her from it. The pile was prepared in front of her house during the day, and in the afternoon, about five o'clock, when she had bathed and dressed, she was brought out of her house. "At this time some 500 people were collected; here some Brahmins of Basa and a neighbouring village called Manjgaon tried to prevent it, but were overpowered by numbers. They warned them that they would surely come to grief, but they were all evidently bent on having the suttee performed at any price." The woman ascended the pile and a large pan of ghee was brought her by a Koormee. With this she anointed her arms and legs and poured what remained over the pile. Then distributing the "actral" to the people around, and blessing and praying for their welfare, she gave the word, and a Koormee woman set fire to the pile. No force was used. The district Superintendent has arrested thirty-five of the persons implicated, including the woman who lighted the pile.

THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL,-At the meeting of the Legislative Council on the 16th November the Vice-President read the following message from the Governor-general:-" Message No. 280. The Governor-general has the honour to forward to the Legislative Council the accompanying copy of a proclamation by the Governor-general in Council publishing the Act 24 and 25 Vic. Cap. 67 (called the Indian Council's Act 1861), with an extract of a despatch in the Legislative Department from the Secretary of State No. 14, dated the 9th of August, 1861. By order of the Right Hon. the Governor-general, W. GREY, cretary to the Government of India. Fort William, Nov. 16, 1861."—He further moved that the Clerk of the Council be requested to read the Proclamation and the extract from the despatch of the Secretary of State referred to in the above message. The motion was carried, and the papers in question were read as follows Proclamation, Home Department, Fort William November 16.-It is declared by the 54th Section of the Act 24 and 25 Vic., c. 67, entitled 'An Act to make better provision for the constitution of the council of the Governor-general of India, and for the local government of the several presidencies and provinces of India, and for the temporary government of India in the event of a vacancy in the office of Governor-general, that the said Act shall commence and come into operation as soon as the same shall have been published by the Governor-general in Council by proclamation. His Excellency the Governor-general in Council does hereby publish and proclaim the said Act for general information." Extract paras. 1 and 2 of a despatch from the Secretary of State in the Legislative Department No. 14, dated Aug. 9, 1861. "I herewith transmit a copy of the Act recently passed by Parliament to make better provision for the constitution of the Council of the Governorgeneral of Iudia, and other purposes, and in so doing, I take the opportunity of acknowledging the receipt of the letters. [Governor-general's letter, No. 2A, dated 15th January, 1861. Governor-general's letter, No. 3A, dated 26th Jan., 1861. Letter from Government of India, Public Department, No. 10, dated 31st January, 1861.] And at the same time of expressing my obligations for the valuable assistance I have derived from the several communications which I have received from your lordship in Council, bearing on the important subjects for which provision is made by the Act. 2. In forwarding to your lordship in Council the Act which brings to a close the labours of the present Legislative Council of India, it is due to that body that I should place upon record the high sense I entertain of the important services it has rendered, in the marked improvement which it has effected in the legislation of India. Since the year 1853, when the Council received its present constitution, it has had to deal with some of the most important questions which could have been submitted to the consideration of any legislative body. The projects of law laid before it have been carefully considered and ably discussed, and the result of its labours has been to place on the Statute Book of India a series of sound and judicious measures, which eminently established its claim to the gratitude of the country, and the thanks of her Majesty's Government. (True Extract.) W. Grey, Secy. to the Govt. of India."
Mr. Harrington moved the suspension of the Standing Orders, to enable him to move the first and second readings of, and to carry through its remaining stages, a Bill to amend the schedule to the Code of Criminal Procedure. The motion being carried, the Bill was passed through all its stages without amendment, and Mr. Beadon was requested to take it to the Governor-general for his assent. Mr. Beadon moved that the Council adjourn till the 1st of January, 1862. Adjourned accordingly. MAHARAJAH OF REWAH .- A native Prince has

MARARAM OF REWAH.—A native Prince has taken the initiative in giving decided and substantial encouragement to the cultivation of cotton. The Maharajah of Rewah has abolished the duty on cotton within his territory, and has furthermore issued a proclamation for the purpose of promoting the growth of cotton by his subjects, SUICIDE OF COL. SMITH.—We are sorry to hear that Colonel Thomas Smith, of H. M.'s 90th, stationed at Allahabad, whilst labouring under temporary insanity, committed suicide by blowing his brains out with a revolver on the morning of the 5th of November. The deceased was a most distinguished officer, and for his services in the Crimean war received his brevets of Major and Lieutenant Colonel, a C. B. ship, Medal and Clasp, was made a Knight of the Legion of Honour, and had likewise the Sardinian Medal and 5th Class of the Medjidie.—Poona Observer.

SPITL-A writer in the Hills describes the direct road to Spiti, on the borders of Thibet, over the Manirung Pass, 19,000 feet above the sea and the highest in the Himalayas. It is inaccessible for nine months in the year. Excepting Captains Gerard and Hutton, Mr. Wilson, the well-known Himalayan sportsman, and Messrs. E. Shelverton and J. Peyton, two trigonometrical surveyors, no European travellers are familiar with this pass. From the valley of the Sutlei in Kunawur to Spiti the only roads besides this are over the Babay Pass between the Sutlej and Spiti, near the sources of the Peen River, a very wild tract with glaciers, and by the main road from Simla to Ladak, which leaves the Sutlej a little north of Chini, a village where there are very extensive vineyards, producing the finest grapes in the Himalayas, and where a house was built for Lord Dalhousie a year before he left India.

AN INDIAN KNIGHT.—The Oudh Gazette's correspondent describes the dress of the Secunder Begum of Bhopal at the Investiture:—"She wore a green kinkhob tunic, tight kinkhob pants, and a heavy cloth of gold round her shoulders and head, with a large gold brooch pinning it at the neck, and another at the waste, leaving the countenance quite open. She had no other ornaments about her person, save a pair of massive gold anklets on her feet, and was the only one of the Knights elect who wore gloves."

NIPAL SINGH, the notorious rebel, who has been abroad eluding pursuit, has at last been apprehended, according to the North-West Gazette, and sent into Jounpore, where he will suffer for his guilt. "This unbung rascal, during the rebellion, took possession of a planter's house in the district, and looted the neighbourhood round, killing and murdering indiscriminately, and walking off with a gun belonging to the Jounpore Rajah."

E. I. RAILWAY.—The railway is now open for public traffic to Shekoabad. The first passenger train left Shekoabad for Allahabad at 6.30 this The line between Shekoabad and morning. Etawah is in very good order, but the station accommodation is very incomplete at all the places along the road—that at the little one of Shekoabad being the only one with any pretensions to decent comfort, and it is too small for use as a terminus. The line to the westward of Shekoabad is crowded with workpeople of all sorts, and there appears every intention to carry on the works in a vigorous manner. Forozabad is expected to be reached inanother six weeks, when doubtless such an advantage as opening to that place would be to the railway and the public will not be lost sight of. It is not expected that the rail can be opened to Agra before next March, but the convenience of opening up to each station as the line is finished should be insisted upon. The electric telegraph is at work from Shekoabad to all the stations below as far as Allahabad.—Delhi Gazette.

BRIGADIER R. T. SANDEMAN, commanding Rawul Pindee, is about to accept the benus and retire from the service.

MAJOR W. S. FERRIS, First Examiner in the Pay Department, has determined upon accepting the bonus offered in the retiring scheme recently published for the field officers, and leaving the service. The Government will lose a good and hard-working officer; and those having business to transact with the department will feel the absence of a most obliging official.

MR. GILBERT SCOTT, late of the Great Trigonometrical Survey, says our Agra contemporary, is about to be forwarded to Calcutta under escort from Simla, to undergo his trial at the Supreme Court for forgery.

THE ASSAM TEA COMPANY will close manufacture in a few days with 60,000 lbs. of tea in crease over last season's product. The quality is said to be about twenty per see . better than that of former years.

MAJOR BAGOT AND THE "HURKARU."—The Lahore Chronicle publishes at the request of Messrs. Abbott and Carruthers, solicitors for Major Bagot, copy of the letter addressed by them to the Hurkaru, denying the truth of the statement which appeared in the latter paper to the effect that Major Bagot was to be brought to a Court Martial on a charge of selling Government stores for his own benefit, and calling on the editor of the Hurkaru to give up his author, under a threat of legal proceedings being taken in case of a refusal. Our Lahore contemporary, however, makes no mention of himself being the source whence the Hurkaru derived his information, though if the latter paper's statement that such was really the case be true, he surely cannot be ignorant of it.

COST OF A LITTLE WAR.—The Mahsood Wuzzeeree expedition has cost Government seventy thousand rupees. The Wuzzeerees, who some time since slaughtered a party of grass-cutters in Dehra Ismael Khan, have been punished, and peace and tranquillity restored to the Derojat division.

THE GANGES CANAL COMPANY have carried Rs. 15,000 of their profits for the half year ending June to dividend account. When the result of the operations of the present half-year is known, a dividend will be made. The stoppage of navigation on the canal for six weeks has affected the income of the company.

PAY CIRCLES.—The Gazette announces the re ductions in the Pay Circles of the Bengal Presidency, rendered necessary by the amalgamation of the armies. The appointment of Paymaster, Queen's Troops and the Pay Officers of Cawnpore, Gwalior and Umballa, are abolished. The six Paymasters now authorised will be thus located: Calcutta, Allahabad, Lucknow, Meerut, Meean Meer, Rawul Pindee.

THE 42MD HIGHLANDERS have been ordered to merch at once by easy stages from Agra to Dugshai, and without being relieved.

THE ELEPHANT BATTERY at Meerut has been ordered to Peshawur complete, instead of the company going by bullock train; a new one will be formed at Meerut, which would have been difficult elsewhere.

SIR JAMES OUTRAM .- The Rev. Dr. Duff will deliver a course of three lectures on Sir James Outram at the Dalhousie Institute, Calcutta.

H.M.'s 104TH REGIMENT OF FOOT, now at Roorkee, will proceed to Meran Meer, instead of to Meerut, as directed in the General Relief, and the Rifle Brigade from Subathoo will come to Meerut, in the room of H.M.'s 35th Regiment, on the eve of their departure for Agra.

ACCIDENT TO CAPT. SWETENHAM, R.E. from Fyzabad relates a severe accident that Capt. Swetenham, of the Royal Engineers, has met with. He was out pig sticking, when an enormous boar charged him, and through the animal Capt. S.'s horse was upset, and in the fall the rider's leg was broken. We are glad to hear, however, that he is getting on well.

MAJOR MAYNE. -- Another of the fine old Indian irregular cavalry officers is dead. Major Henry Otway Mayne, of the 6th Madras cavalry, and of Mayne's horse, died on Saturday, November 2nd, after a brilliant and useful career. Major Mayne obtained his cornetcy on the 11th of March, 1838, and first saw service with his troop in 1840, on the river Wardah. He served in the Punjab campaign of 1849, as an extra aide-de-camp to Lord Gough, being present at the affairs of Ramnugger and Soodolopore, and the battles of Chillianwallah and Guzerat. He accompanied Sir Walter Gilbert as aide-de-camp in the pursuit of the Sikhs across the Jhelum; and for these services he was twice thanked by the Commander-in-Chief in his despatches to Lord Dalhousie. His next active employment was in charge of the intelligence department in the western Malwa campaign, where he took part in the affair of Dhar, on the 22nd of October, and the subsequent operations and capture of that fortress, the skirmish before Mundesor, the general action of the 23rd November, and the taking of Gurara. On the mutiny of the Bhopal Contingent, he was ordered to proceed to Sehore, to disarm, and conduct the trials of the mutineers. In April, 1858. with only eighty sowars and eight hundred of Scindiah's troops, he forced back six thousand Kotah rebels with four guns, and prevented their advancing on Jhansi. He was now ordered to raise a corps of horse, with which regiment, known as Mayne's Horse, he served with Sir John Michel's force against Tantia Topee, in the general action of Scindwaha and the pursuit of Korai. He also served as a political officer with Sir Robert Napier's column, and with his regiment, in pursuit of Rao Sahib, Tantia Topee, and Feroze Shah, from December 1858 to September 1859. The hardships and exposure he had undergone in these arduous services brought on fever, and after suffering for some time he started for England. It was, however, too late, and while en route to Calcutta the final blow came, and he died in the Government House at Allahabad. We have no further space to dwell on Major Mayne's merits as an officer, or to allude to his private life; but none can feel more sincere regret than ourselves at the death of one of those who stood so firmly in the van in the hour of India's danger and difficulty. The gallant old army of India has had its day, and is rapidly passing away; but it can point proudly to many a gallant record of the services of those who have gone, among whom the list of Major Mayne's services entitles to no obscure place.—Englishman.

THE BEEBEE OF CANNANORE.—The Bombay

Times of India mentions the death of the Beebee of Cannanore, the head of the Moplah family, 85 years of age. "To this female sovereign, whose possessious were limited to the town itself and the district around it measured by a radius of about 2 miles, the Government paid a rent of 14,000 rupees a year. The place was purchased by the Beebee's ancestors from the Dutch, and the succession, according to the singular custom of the race, takes place in the female line. The Beebee's descendants, if she have any, have no claim to the sovereignty. Her successor, we believe, will be her youngest niece by one of her sisters. Most of the Laccadive Islands are, or were very recently, subject to the Beebee of Cannanore." Four of these islands belong to the Moplah family and four to the British.

COCHIN.—It is with painful feelings that we announce the death, by drowning, of Mr. James A. Gardner, who formerly held a lieutenant's commission in the 7th Royal Fusiliers, and, we believe sold out from that corps. He appears to have seen some service, having been present throughout the Crimean war, and received two medals one of which was for his gallant conduct at the battle of Inkermann. A medal was also conferred upon him by the Turkish Government. The deceased arrived in Cochin from Bombay in April last, in a small yacht of his own, of about six or eight tons; and resided here ever since, in very embarrassed circumstances. It was his intention to have gone home in the Glenalu. On the 26th of October, he accompanied a party of friends to Alwaye, a watering place about twenty miles distant, the principal attraction of the spot, the water being supposed to possess mineral preperties. On arriving there he began to bathe with the others; but finding that he was in a state that did not permit of his taking care of himself, two of his companions induced him to leave the water, and left him in the cabinboat which had conveyed them. It would appear that he did not remain long in the boat, but left it and joined two other of his companions who were at the time in deep water, challenging one of them to swim across the stream. This was scarcely said when he appeared to have gone beyond his depth and suddenly disappeared. In stantly a boat which happened to be at hand pushed off with some of the party, and every effort was made by the natives and his own companions to rescue him, but fate had already closed his earthly career. On the following day, the 27th, his body was found on a rock situated about a mile below the place where the accident occurred, and was brought in by the natives to his friends, who were still at Alwaye, and they immediately hurried to Cochin. The magistrate found it necessary to take the depositions of those with whom the deceased had gone up to Alwaye, but there was nothing to show that he came by his death otherwise than by pure accident. His remains were interred in the Protestant burial-ground on the morning of the 28th October.

HIS EXCELLENCY SIR WILLIAM DENISON returned to Madras on the evening of the 6th November, by special train, and proceeded direct to Government House under the usual salute.

NUSSEERABAD, Nov. 19 .- A terrible tragedy as enacted here this morning. Lieut. Steward, 28th Regiment, was deliberately shot whilst asleep, by his native servant. The miscreant almost immediately after shot himself. The act was most premediated. Lieut. Steward's soldier servant yesterday cleaned his master's fowling piece and revolver, which he placed in their cases. Poor Steward attended early parade this morning, and the native took advantage of his absence to load both the fowling piece and revolver-the former with two bullets. He then evidently waited till Steward was asleep, when he shot him as I have described. The only cause that can be assigned for this act is that Steward, while at Ajmere, accused the servant of having stolen 15 rupees, and mentioned the circumstance to the Bazaar master here, and threatened to prosecute him. An inquest was held, but no further light has been thrown on the matter. Steward had only rejoined the regiment a short time since, from Ajmere, where he was second in command of the Mhair Regiment. He was a most estimable young fellow, and his untimely end is much deplored by all his brother officers He had just passed the interpreter's examination in Hindustani.

THE O. I. S. N. Co.-We give prominence to the following letter, as it proves that the Indus has solved the problem of the navigation of the river of that name :- "Sir,-In haste I write to say that we got up steam in the Indus at 2 Р.м.; and as everything went smoothly, got up anchor and proceeded to sea, and did with great ease eleven miles in 32 minutes 15 seconds, timed by a nautical authority.-I am, sir, your obedient servant, A. Stewart, Resident Engineer. Correct .-A. Dunn, Superintendent, Kurrachee. 7th Nov. 1861 .- Our Paper.

CAPTAIN SMAIL, Paymaster of the 6th Inniskillen, has been put under arrest by Colonel Crawley, commanding that regiment, for disobedience of orders. It is stated that Captain Smail was desired to issue money after his office was closed, and which he refused to do. Upon reference to the Commander-in-chief, Captain Small was released by orders from his Excellency. -Poona Observer.

HIS EXCELLENCY SIR WILLIAM MANSFIELD and staff arrived at Kolapore on the 11th Nov., and it was expected would leave that station for Belgaum on the morning of the 13th.

THE MISCREANT MOGUL BEG, who cut down Mr. Fraser, the resident, and afterwards took an active part in the general massacre of Christians at Delhi, in May, 1857, has been arrested in Scinde, and is now on his way up to Delhi, there to stand his trial.

DEATH OF DR. OGILVIE.-We sincerely regret to have to announce the death from chronic dysentery, at Suez, on the 26th October, of Surgeon G. M. Ogilvie, M.A., C.B., of the Bombay Army, and Inspector-general of Prisons in the Presidency of Bombay. Dr. Ogilvie had served with the Field Force in Sind and Affghanistan in 1842-43; and afterwards went through a distinguished career on this side of India, and also in Bengal. He was of the besieged party in Lucknow in 1857, and had the honour of the Companionship of the Bath conferred upon him on going home after the recovery of Oude by our countrymen.

ENVOY FROM KOKHAN.-His Excellency Maho. med Khoja Lodon, Minister of His Highness Melekhan, the Khan of Kokhan, arrived in Bombay on the 11th November, and was received by Major Bacon, Brigade Major, Mr. Venayekrow Wassudev, the Oriental Translator to Government, and Mr. Moosa Khan. His Excellency and his son have taken up their quarters at the Turkish Consulate. A salute of fifteen guns was fired on their arrival. On the 24th, his Excellency the Envoy of Kokhan, accompanied by the Consul of the Ottoman Empire, the Oriental Translator to Government, Mr. Narrayen Dinanathjee, Mr. Moosa Khan, and others, proceeded in H.M.'s steamer Goolanar to Elephanta, to see the caves. His Excellency was extremely pleased with the sight of these ancient and magnificent caves. On the 26th the Envoy visited the Commodore's ship Ajdaha, and was received on board the vessel under salute of fifteen guns.

THE No. 7 BATT. 13TH BRIG. R.A. is to go to Europe after all. It may be recollected that this battery was under orders some months ago to proceed to Europe; subsequently that order was countermanded, and they were held in readiness to move up into the North-West Provinces; and it has now been decided on that they shall go home forthwith.

Mr. F. D. FAITHFUL has been confirmed in his appointment of Attorney for Paupers in the room Mr. G. J. Bowyer, deceased.

ELOPEMENT.—The Delhi Herald understands 'that a daughter of a field officer of her Majesty's Bombay Artillery has recently flown, on the wings of love, or by railway, in company with a gunner of that corps, to Sholapore, where the happy pair were immediately united in the 'bonds of wedlock."

MAHABLESHWUR, Nov. 16.—The weather is very pleasant just now. His Excellency the Governor leaves here this evening for Enteshewer, on a hunting excursion I believe. Captain Clerk the other day shot three large bears and a number of other smaller game. Coolies are very scarce up here this season, in fact none hardly are to be got. About fifty left the Hills the other day for the railway works, and fifty others have since followed them. Railway contractors are of opinion that this class of men work better than lowlanders, but I think it is an erroneous idea, and that they will do as little work as possible. House owners during the coming hot season anticipate making their fortunes, as several bungalows have been already taken, and there are inquiries still being made for others.

H. M.'s 44TH FOOT, under command of Colonel McMahon, left Hong Kong for Belgaum on the 14th of October. The men were said to be in high spirits at the prospect of leaving China, where they have suffered in common with all the other regiments from much sickness; its present destination is one of the best in the Bombay Presi-The 4th battery 13th brigade Royal dency. Artillery also left China on the 20th October, for Madras. Her Majesty's steam ship Urgent hourly expected in our roads.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THE SECRETARY OF STATE AND THE INDIGO PLANTERS.

WE cannot congratulate the Landholders and Commercial Association of British India on either the spirit or the matter of their letter to Sir Charles Wood. In addressing one of her Majesty's Ministers it is customary to adopt a conciliatory and respectful tone, a courtesy due, indeed, to every gentleman, but especially so to the accredited representative of the Sovereign. Nor can we say a single word in favour of this ill-timed attack upon the Governor of Bengal. However true it may be that Mr. Grant has displayed both prejudice against European settlers, and excessive partiality for native ryots, together with an impenetrable ignorance as to the real character of the mischievous agitation that has already produced such lamentable results, it was neither good taste nor good policy to issue this wild tirade of words against him at the close of his administration. It is surely not decorous in a body of intelligent and educated men to engage in a scolding match, or to rail at a wellintentioned, if ill-informed, official behind his back, and at the very moment of his retiring from office. In a very few months Mr. Grant will have taken leave of Bengal, probably for ever, and this being the case, it would have evinced a more proper and magnanimous feeling had the Landholders' Association abstained from having the last word.

Besides, Mr. Eddis, the Secretary of the Association, has not even taken the trouble to state their grounds of complaint with any sort of clearness and precision. In a confused and rambling manner, and in an abrupt and petulant tone, he cites fragments from various reports, letters, and statements, but with so little idea of arrangement and consecutive argumentation that it is very difficult to follow either his facts or his inferences. In short, it is altogether an ill-judged and ill-executed production, and is calculated rather to discredit the Association than to injure Mr. Grant. would be far wiser, and infinitely more becoming, on the part of the European residents in Bengal, to forgive and forget the past-from the consciousness of there having been many faults on both sides-and henceforth to devote themselves to the conduct of their business on sound business principles, the welfare of their tenantry, and the conciliation of those placed in authority over them.

THE INDIAN MILCH COW.

TRUE prophets were they who predicted that the amount of the European force maintained in India under the direct government of the Crown would be regulated by Ministerial considerations rather than by any particular regard to the real exigencies of that dependency. It order transmitted from either Presidency, and was consistently urged by all who judged of the future by the past, that whenever a European war created a demand for troops India would be ruthlessly denuded; and, on the other hand, that whenever a necessity for economy arose at home India would be made to defray the expenditure of a large reserve force. The latter prediction has already been fulfilled. The first fruits of Mr. Gladstone's financial" policy exhibiting themselves in the form of an impoverished exchequer, it was found impossible to maintain the army at the numerical and military efficiency demanded by public opinion without increasing the Income-tax, or inventing some new impost. But either of these courses would have unseated a Ministry that is only kept in power by the prudent and patriotic forbearance of a Conservative Opposition. Fortunately there was India to be turned to account, notwithstanding her own difficulties and embarrasaments, Of course, troops cannot be maintained gratuitously in that country more than in any other, but it is so easy to cover a deficiency in the Indian Budget by means of a Loan bearing a high rate of interest. True, the press will thunder against the extravagance of that Government and the ignorance of arithmetic displayed by its officials, but what matters to the Cabinet how roughly a distant Governor and his subordinates may be treated. Their withers will remain unwrung, and the sweets of power will continue within their reach. It is the wretched Indian taxpayer who will suffer for this, and not the lusty artisan or well-to-do tradesman of Old England, whose remonstrances carry with them a power not to be despised even by hereditary legislators. But at least let us be honest in this matter. Let us learn to call a spade a spade, and India a milch cow. It is not expedient to reduce the army, nor is it convenient to keep on foot so large a force as Parliament has voted. Let it be conceded, then, that India shall pay for eight or nine thousand troops, independently of artillery, more than she requires for her own purposes, and more than her revenue will suffice for. Let it also be understood that vast supplies of military stores shall be despatched to the East, not because they are there required, but because their export will diminish their pressure at home. Let it further be taken for granted that indents shall not be executed until they have become useless, because at last necessarily filled up on the spot by a vast waste of public money. Moreover, let it be agreed that the Home shall not be called upon to pay any attention to the requirements of the Local Government, except when perfectly convenient. Let all this be done, but at least let us forbear from the hypocrisy of finding fault with Indian extravagance, and from the still more flagrant pretence of caring about the native taxpayer. It is truly pitiable to read Colonel Balfour's financial statement on military expenditure, and to observe his despairing and Luccoontic struggle against the life-expelling grasp of the Home Government. They insist upon a reduction of expenditure, and at the same time increase the army. They protest against the shipment of supplies unless expressly called for by the local authorities, and with the same breath order the shipment of things not wanted to the value of £400,000. They promise to execute "with neatness and despatch" every then delay to do so until inferior articles are falleys in which they strove to hide their compulsorily purchased upon the spot for the price of the very best. And then they inveigh against excessive expenditure, and prescribe the most stringent economy, and when India has escaped from their grasp they will offer to hang a Governor-General.

"IN MISERICORDIAM."

However joyous and welcome old Father Christmas may appear, with his genial cheer and family gatherings, to those who dwell among their own people, in a very different light is he regarded by the stranger and the outcast. For them no cannel coal crackles, no vule log blazes on the ample hearth. No dainty fare stimulates their appetite, no sparkling wine enlivens their spirits. Not even a friendly hand is stretched out to them, or kindly voice raised in hearty congratulation. It is wretchedness enough to be alone at such a time, but how much must the misery of that loneliness be increased when accompanied by biting want and the sense of utter helplessness. If the rich would give a new zest to their own pleasures and happiness, let them impart liberally of their abundance to those who lack everything that makes life desirable. And, indeed, at this season of the year there are few who would turn a deaf ear to deserving supplicants, if only they were assured that their alms would be turned to a good account. It is the fear of doing mischief, of encouraging idleness, and promoting vice, that deters many a kindhearted person from attempting to alleviate the sufferings of the poor. Let any well authenticated case of destitution be published in the daily papers, and straightway every purse is opened and the stream of charity flows broad and deep. But it is often difficult for private individuals to discover where the greatest poverty exists, or to distinguish between imposture and real affliction. Besides, it is little that any one can do of himself. By means of concerted action alone can relief be administered to a large and truly beneficial extent. Now, there is a building in Limehouse that has been instrumental in producing an amount of moral and physical good that is scarcely to be credited, but which can easily be proved. The foundation-stone was laid by that illustrious Prince whose loss a nation deplores, but the memory of whose virtues will ever be enshrined in the gratitude of thousands with whose sorrows he sympathised, and from whose prayers for aid he never turned away. "It is our duty," he said, "to assist and protect, as far as lies in our power, from the dangers and temptations to which their helplessness and ignorance expose them, the natives of remote regions who are brought to our shores, assisting in our commerce and contributing by their labour to the riches of this country." Holding these views, so worthy of a Christian Prince, his Royal Highness thought it no condescension to lay the foundation-stone of "The Strangers' Home" for Asiatics and Africans, and the rude islanders of the Southern Pacific Ocean. The "Home" was opened in June, 1857, and the first result was to clear the streets of the metropolis of the miserable objects that shocked our humanity and disgraced our civilisation. In the course of the three previous years upwards of 100 Asiatics died in the Port of London, many of them periahing of cold and hunger in the filthy squalid wretchedness. Within that same brief period no fewer than 40 inquests were held, while upwards of 1,000 sick Lascars were received into the Dreadnought Hospital alone. Other unfortunate creatures were plundered of their savings, after being decoyed into abominable dens, where they were plied with opium till their mind and their money were alike gone, and then turned out into the streets to beg and die. But since the opening of the " Home," now five years ago, not 20 deaths have occurred in the Port of London, and only one inquest has been held-and that on a notorious opium-smoker—while some 300 beggars have been shipped off at good wages to their own country, and nearly half that number from workhouses and prisons. During the present year alone 206 Asiatics, Africans, and South Sea Islanders have been lodged and boarded for various periods, while 83 beds have been paid for, at the rate of 3d. a night, by casual Asiatic lodgers. Then, 192 Lascars have been provided with employment, and placed on board outward-bound ships at fair wages, and 33 beggars removed from the streets and supplied with work, or forwarded to their distant homes; and, in addition to these, 29 have been shipped off from workhouses and prisons and enabled to earn from 20 to 30 shillings per mensem, besides being suitably found and kept. Another good feature of this admirable institution is the security it affords to these poor helple sa foreigners for whatever property they may chance to own. In 1857 only £346 were deposited for safe custody in the superintendent's hands; but so thoroughly is this advantage now appreciated, that the amount of deposits since the 1st of last January exceeds £1,045. Altogether, about £1,868 have thus been saved to the grateful and astonished inmates, besides nearly £1,500 worth of watches and trinkets. Nor have their religious wants been overlooked. The Scripture Reader, a proficient in Hindostani and other Oriental languages, has, within the same period of time, visited 67 ships, spoken to 3,363 Lascars on board or on shore, and read the Scriptures on 1,258 occasions. He has, also, paid 224 visits to sick people, 33 to meu in jail, and 22 to those in workhouses. It is also worthy of note that 417 portions of Scripture have been translated into 26 different language-, and sold or given away in large numbers. moment the inmates of the "Home" are, fortunately, very few, or there might be some difficulty in providing them with an asylum atthis inclement season. Its funds are wellnigh exhausted, for although a charge is made for board and lodging, the "Home" is far from self-supporting. The annual expenses, indeed, amount to nearly £1,100, a large portion of which is defrayed by subscriptions and donations. Here, then, is a noble opportunity for the exercise of genuine philanthropy. There is no danger of the misapplication of alms, or we have done. Put not off to the morrow what can be done to-day. The value of a boon is doubled by promptitude. Life or death may depend upon the difference of an hour in the receipt of alms. Shall the Strangers' Home be closed for want of what every one of us can spare, and never be the poorer? Will our Christmas dinner be relished the less from the consciousness of having cheerfully contributed to the relief of the stranger that is within our gates?

URGENT APPEAL.

THE DIRECTORS of the STRANGERS'
HOME FOR ASIATICS having been permitted to attain, under most pressing pecuniary difficulties, the principal moral and social objects for which the Institution was established, in ameliorating the condition and alleviating the temporal and spiritual destitution of hundreds of helpless Asiatic and African Strangers, find themselves at the close of another year without sufficient Funds to meet the current expenses of the Institution.

The work has invariably been carried on with the strictest economy, and the Directors are thankful for the support they have hitherto received, but they do not consider themselves justified to borrow money to meet the current expenses of the Home, which amounts (including £250 interest on debt) to about £1,100 annually.

They therefore once more appeal to their friends, supporters, and the Public for Subscriptions or Donations, and would ask them, SHALL THE DOORS OF THE HOME BE CLOSED through the insufficiency of pecuniary aid, or because, under and the Public for Subscriptions or Donations, and would ask them, SHALL THE DOORS OF THE HOME BE CLOSED through the insufficiency of pecuniary aid, or because, under temporary circumstances, the number of immates in the Home are insufficient to render the Institution self-supporting?—Shall the metropolis of Christian England again subject itself to the reproach, that Oriental strangers visiting her shores, find a reception worse than that in a heathen land—no friend, no Christian sympathy—nothing to prove we value the immense blessing the Gospel of the Lord Christ has given to us?—Shall the streets of the metropolis once more be inundated with Eastern mendicants?—Shall the jails, workhouses, and hospitals be again unnecessarily occupied by Asiatics?—Shall the labours of the last four years be thrown away, and the work suspended?—Shall Christian sympathy, assistance, and advice no longer be shown or given to helpless strangers?—Rather is it not imperative on the Directors to continue their appeal to the public for funds to carry on a work which has been such a blessing to hundreds, and acknowledged by the philanthropist and Christian to be both needful, useful, and advantageous in all its objects?

The Directors cannot believe that the public will permit their labours to be suspended, or the Home closed, and casting all their difficulties on Him from whom they have received such tokens of favour, would go on in faith, earnestly pleading with all into whose hands this paper may fall that each one will provide his share of the means wanting for carrying on the work.

R. M. Hughes, Lieut-Col., Honorary Secretary.

Donations and Subscriptions will be thankfully received by Messrs. Barclay, Bevan, Tritton, and Co., 54, Lombardstreet; Messrs. Coutts and Co., 59, Strand; Messrs. ### Application of Dr. Beatson Regarding LEAVE.

No. 1,030.—With reference to G.O., No. 10a, dated Dec. 26, 1860, the following paras. of a mily. letter from the Right Hon. the Sec. of State for India, No. 386, dated 30th Sept., 1861, are published for general information :

Para. 1. I have received and considered in Council the 11th para. of your mily. letter, No. 81, of May 22, submitting the application of Surg. Beatson, M.D., that certain leave of abs. may be allowed to count towards the period qualifying for prom., and certain other leave as service for pension.

2. Dr. Beatson took leave to Europe in March, 1856, and elected to go under the old furlough rules, with a view of securing a three years residence in Europe, which he thought might be rendered necessary by a protracted treatment of his case.

3. The leave is, under the operation of the rule, laid down in my despatch No. 397, of Oct. 31, 1865, deducted from the service qualifying for promotion to the rank of surgeon-major.

4. Upon a reconsideration of the subject, I observe that the rule thus laid down bears unequally upon the officers according as they may be under the old or new furlough rules, and I have resolved, therefore or new luriough rules, and I have resolved, therefore, that medical officers, under whatever furlough rules they may be placed, shall be allowed to count towards promotion to the rank of surgeon-major two years of their furlough in Europe (in addition to all leave in India).

5. The rule is to take retrospective effect from the date of receipt in India of my despatch No. 397, of

Oct. 31, 1860.

6. Dr. Beatson's request to be allowed to count as o. Dr. Bestson's request to be allowed to count as service for pension his leave to Simla, taken in 1846 and 1847, cannot be complied with.

Abolition of Fees on Appointments. Financial Department, India Office, London, Sept. 24, 1861.

Financial, No. 146.

To H.E. the Right hon. the Gov. gen. of India in Council.

My Lord,—Having recently had under consideration the subject of the fees which have hitherto been levied on appointments to offices in India, I have decided on abolishing the fees in question, except in cases where outfit is granted. These latter I propose to retain at present as matter for further arrangement.

2. I have consequently directed that no further levy of such fees shall take place in England, and I have to direct you, in conformity with the same Rule, to discontinue the charging of fees on appointments made from this country of persons in India, to which no outfit allowance is attached.

M. R. EPHRAIM MOSELY'S IMPROVEMENT in the CONSTRUCTION of ARTIFICIAL TEETH, GUMS, and PALATES, on an INDIA-RUBBER
BASE, are secured by Letters Patent, dated December, 1882, whereby the continual outlay of new teeth is avoided, alterations from the absorption of the gums, or any other cause, being easily remedied, and the first outlay no greater than for ordinary kinds. The extraordinary results of this application may be briefly noted as under:—It consists of one continuous piece of Prepared India-rubber. The Artificial Teeth present an uniformly even surface to the action of the tongue, preventing lodgment of food and all secretions, so much complained of in the present system. No gold or any other metal being required, all springs, wires, and fastenings are wholly unnecessary; sharp edges are avoided, a greatly-increased freedom of suction is supplied, a natural elasticity hitherto wholly unattainable, and a fit perfected with the most unerring accuracy, are secured; while, from the softness and flexibility of the agents employed, the greatest support is given to the adjoining teeth when loose or rendered tender by the absorption of the gums. The acids of the mouth exert no agency on the prepared india-rubber; and, as it is a nonconductor, fluids of any temperature may be retained in the mouth, all unpleasantness of smell and taste being at the same time provided against by the peculiar nature of its preparation.

SUMMARY AND REVIEW.

THE news brought by the Calcutta Mail of the 22nd November is only three days later than that received by the last mail from Bombay. The proclamation of the new Council, which is the most important fact mentioned in the Indian journals, was given in our issue of the 21st; further reference to it is therefore unnecessary.

The funeral of Lady Canning took place on the 19th Nov., and was conducted in a strictly private manner. The coffin containing her remains was conveyed from Government House on a gun carriage, drawn by six horses, belonging to the Royal Artillery now stationed at Barrackpore. The carriage was followed by Lord Canning's staff in two mourning coaches, preceded by fifty of the Governor-general's body guards. Lord Canning left Calcutta for Barrackpore the evening previous. The procession arrived at Barrackpore a little before four A.M. of Tuesday. The coffin remained under the portico of the Barrackpore House till half-past five, when it was taken to its restingplace, borne by eight men of H.M.'s 6th Europeans. Lord Canning and his staff were the only gentlemen who attended the funeral. Lieutenant R.T. Hare, Assistant-Commissioner DRIA.—Mr. and Miss Davis.

Tandy, the chaplain of the station.

The financial position of India is rapidly recovering its equilibrium. Already has the Indian Government forwarded an instalment of thirteen lakhs in part payment of the million sterling advanced by Sir Charles Wood little more than six months ago. The loan in question was divided in unequal portions between the three Presidencies, each of which will probably be called upon to refund its own particular share. As a local journal remarks, It argues well for the finances of the country that the Government should be able, at so comparatively early a date, to commence the adjustment of this loan."

Three officers of the Indian Army have fallen under the displeasure of the Commanderin-chief and Governor-general for "expressing what is virtually a disapproval of a measure of her Majesty's Secretary of State for India." One who had been gazetted to the Staff Corps has had his name erased, and the applications of the other two for admission into that corps have been refused. The punishment certainly seems unduly severe for the nature of the offence. Very great dissatisfaction was felt throughout the Indian armies in consequence of Sir Charles Wood's decision that "officers joining the Staff Corps shall not be entitled to setire under the regulation of 1796 in respect of any promotion obtained by such officers in the Staff Corps." The order of 1796 referred to stated that officers who had served twentytwo years in India might retire on the pension of their regimental rank, whatever that might be. The Royal Warrant dated 16th January, 1861, regulating the amalgamation of the armies, states that "officers of her Majesty's Indian forces joining the Staff Corps will be entitled to pensions under the regulations of the Indian Service." But Sir Charles Wood has recently decided that officers of the Staff Corps are not to retire under the Regulations of 1796—that is, they are not to be allowed to retire on the pension of their actual rank after twenty-two years of Indian service. It appears that on the 11th, 12th, and 14th of October last, Captain P. Maxwell, Deputy-Commissioner in the Punjab, Lieutenant J. W. Orchard, Deputy-Superintendent of Police, and

The service was performed by the Rev. Mr. | in the Punjab, "in concert with each other," composed and forwarded to the Deputy Adjutant General of the Army three letters, "in which, under cover of expressions of respect and subordination, these officers have ventured to use terms manifesting their disapprobation of the recent decision of her Majesty's Govern-The Governor-General in Council entirely concurs in the opinion which the Commander-in-chief has expressed, "that these officers might have perfectly well made any complaint of the decision in question, without at the same time expressing what is virtually a disapprobation of a measure of her Majesty's Secretary of State for India."

> The civilians are also ill at ease. complain of the injurious effect upon their funds produced by the appointment of uncovenanted servants to posts formerly the exclusive property of their own Service. A large meeting was therefore held in the Town-hall of Calcutta on the 21st November, when a committee was nominated in the hope of devising some remedy for this grievance.

> The Army and Navy Gazette, we observe, accepts the rumour of forthcoming disturbances among the Sikhs. There is not, so far as we can learn, the slightest ground for any such apprehensions at present. The report clearly originated in a recent foray by our turbulent neighbours, the Wuzeerees.

> From China we learn that the youthful Emperor was daily expected in Pekin, if, indeed, he had not already arrived. Prince Kung's influence is fortunately in the ascendant, so that the foreign relations of the empire promise to be pacific. The interior, however, is still cruelly devastated by the rebels, and trade in consequence seriously restricted.

COUNTESS CANNING.

At two o'clock on the morning of Monday, the 18th, Lady Canning died, after a week's illness. Few out of Calcutta knew that she was unwell, so sudden has been her removal. Enjoying the skill of Dr. Goodeve, as well as that of the Governor General's physician, on the previous Saturday she seemed to rally, only, however, to sink rapidly into the sleep of death within forty-eight hours. After delighting in the bracing air of Darjeeling, she returned through the deadly Terai which skirts the base of the Hills, and there caught that fever which is always so prevalent at the close of the rainy season, but was this year especially dangerous from the heavy fall and the extensive inundations. Notwithstanding, those who witnessed her arrival in Calcutta were struck by her healthy vigour and apparently heightened complexion. The seeds of disease, however, were in her system, and in ten days from her arrival she was no more.

The citizens of Calcutta were eager in their desire to accompany her remains to the grave, but the funeral cortége was strictly confined to the Governor-general and his staff. Early on Tuesday morning the body was conveyed to Barrackpore, and at day-break was interred in the private garden in front of Government House. The chaplain of the station read the service, and the coffin was carried to its resting place by a party of H.M.'s 6th Royals. Through out the morning the park was closed to the public. All that is mortal of Lady Canning lies in the spot she loved so well. The Chris-tian families at the Presidency, official and nonofficial, have by common consent agreed to testify their respect for her memory and their sympathy with her husband, by wearing mourning for three weeks from the date of her death. The calamity may be more keenly felt in Calcutta than elsewhere, but it is one common to the Empire. We doubt not the same token of respect will be paid by all classes of Englishmen over India

In the darkest gloom of the mutiny Lady Canning was popular, if such a cold expression can be used of a lady whose virtues were of a different class from those which excite the applause of crowds. She has lived to see her husband's reputation, which she ever watched with an eager earnestness, rise equal to the opportunities that he has enjoyed, though she has not been spared to share in those honours which await him in England. Cut off at the early age of forty-four, after spending six years of an active life in the East, and after journeying so many thousand miles without a day's illness. she has not lived to be welcomed by her Ma jesty, who, but two years younger than herself, admitted her to a closer friendship than generally exists between Sovereign and subject. ther presiding with a rarely equalled dignity and grace in the circles which surrounded the viceroy, or acting as the active patroness of institutions to educate the young, tend the sick clothe the naked, and feed the hungry; whether dispensing her own private charities with a liberal hand or proving her interest in art and science by her warm encouragement and personal labours. it may be said that never has the wife of a Governor-general so worthily filled that place, or so won for herself and now, alas! for her memory, a respectful affection in every breast. On her no higher eulogium can be passed than this, that she has been to India all that the Sovereign whom she was privileged to call friend is to England.

In India rest the bones of one Governor-gene ral, Lord Cornwallis, whose tomb is at Ghazeepore, and now of the wife of a Governor-general, in the Barrackpore garden. In the old cemetery of Cossimbazaar, near Moorshedabad, is the grave of the wife of Warren Hastings, buried there while he was yet a mere "writer." The Marchioness of Dalhousie left India too late, for, though she partially recovered during a voyage round the Cape, she died within a day of home. No mere reasoning on the subject will prevent England from ascribing the death which all now class from insisting on the removal of the capital to the Hills. If under Providence the death of Lady Canning is due to any spot, it is to the Hills which are girt round with so dense a mass of malarious vegetation. The desire among the public to perpetuate the memory of the deceased is general. From the ladies of India such a tribute to her who was the first lady in the land would most gracefully come, as giving a permanent or an enlarged sphere of usefulness to one of those philanthropic institutions for which she did so much.—Friend of India.

WHAT THE CIVIL SERVICE SHOULD ASK FOR.

The crusade has begun. There is, as yet, silence in Bombay; but from Peshawur to Cape Comorin the covenanted Civil Service have awoke to the ruin that impends over their funds, and the injury done to themselves, since Sir Charles Wood's Bill became law. In Madras, Allahabad, Lucknow, and Lahore the civilians have met, they have drawn up memorials of grievances, have elaborated petitions of right, and have claimed compensation for injuries. To-day the heads of the Bengal Service will meet in Calcutta to consider the statements of their brethren in these stations, and finally to agree upon a plan of action. It is doubtless true that the Funds of the three Services differ in some respects; but the crusade is more likely to be successful if the eight or nine hundred gentlemen who are equally affected, irrespective of the presidency to which they are attached, unite in a common determination, and fight a single battle. In these circumstances it is important that the Services should clearly understand what they want, and what they are most likely to get.

The State has entered into a solemn covenant, not with a body of men, but with each individual. That covenant involved a certain right to pension on terms which were most favourable to the State. Government said in effect to every civilian-" We promise you a pension of £500 a-year after twentyfive years' service, and you must subscribe as much as will make other £500, so that you will enjoy £1,000 a year on retiring. For this purpose you must pay 4 per cent from your salary, and, should that not be sufficient to raise our £500 to £1,000, you must pay the difference or retire with our £500 plus the accumulation from the 4 per cent. All the profit to be derived from lapses by death, however, shall be ours." The result of this has been that almost every man, on taking his annuity, has had to pay up at least £250 to complete the £1,000. Even Sir John Lawrence had to give £200. On the other hand, the profit from lapses has been sufficient to meet £210 of the State £500. Thus the pension really given to the Civil Servant hitherto by Government has been only £290, instead of the mythical £500 or even £1,000 which has deluded the educated youth of England. The profit by lapses and the 4 per cent. contributions have raised this sum to £750 on an average, and civilians have been forced, on resigning the Service, to be content with that sum, or pay down what represents £250 more to enjoy the promised thousand pounds a vear.

The Civil Service is, then, legally in this position, that their covenant has been broken and each one is free to go. When drawing their attention to the injury they had suffered, we showed its probable extent by the number of appointments thrown open to outsiders, that of Colonel Durand alone making a difference to the Annuity Fund of Rs. 2,116, and to the Civil Fund of Rs. 1,587 yearly. But no actuary could calculate the loss from appointments that may be thrown open, and we would, therefore, urge the Service not to base their claim on such calculations, nor to use them otherwise than as illustrations. Nor should they, although the covenant has been broken, ask that any civil servant be allowed to leave India with a small bonus proportioned to his length of service. Government have no wish to get rid of the present service, nor has one per cent. of them a desire to go, that public 500,167 souls, of which number 92,120 are Hin-lament to the plains of India, and the governing | money should be so spent and trained experience wasted. But they should ask, and may obtain the following.

- 1. The continuance of the Civil Fund for widows and children.
- 2. The gradual destruction of the Annuity Fund, by returning to each member under fifteen years' service the amount of his subscriptions.
- 3. The extension to the Covenanted of the principle of the Uncovenanted Service Pension rule in so far that, at the end of twenty-five years, the civilian may retire on the average of his salary for the past five years, provided it do not exceed £750 and be not less than £500. But as compensation to the men under fifteen or twenty years' service, who have suffered wrong, that the maximum limit be in their case £850 and minimum £600.

This last request is based on the just principle that a man's pension should be regulated by his position in the Service. As it is possible and just that under the new Act which abolishes the rights of seniority, an idle or incompetent official may remain a joint magistrate on £600 a-year all his days, it is not fair that he should have the same pension as his contemporary who rises by merit to be lieutenant governor. By the destruction of the Annuity Fund compulsory payments, always odious and hitherto on a bad system, are abolished. The certainty of at least £500 a-year in addition to what they may save, will be an attraction to a higher class of civilians than are likely to be tempted to India since the opening of the Service. It is true that the State, which has hitherto given in actual cash only £290 of its promised £500, will on this scheme have to give the full £500 if not more. But it will still have the same advantage from lapses as at present, for dead men need no pensions. And a certain attraction of this kind is needed to allure the higher class of the educated vouth of England, who now fully understand how the present competitive men have been, though not intentionally, misled by the mere mirage of a thousand pounds pension. The men above fifteen or twenty years' service will not be practically affected by the opening of the Service. Those under that would, on this plan, receive all their past subscriptions back, and instead of only £290 from the State would have the prospect of from £600 to £850 on retiring.—Friend of India.

REPORT OF THE GUZERAT DISTRICTS.

We have received from the Punjab Government a Report on the Revised Settlement of the Guzerat Districts in the Rawul Pindee Division, effected by Captain H. Mackenzie. The Report opens with a review of the Governments previous to the British rule, touches on the antiquities of the district-comparing its limits under the new regime with those under the old—and then launches into a description of the predominating topographical features of the district, which are described as consisting, with one prominent exception, of plains of greater or less fertility; this exception being a range of low hills which take their rise on the Bhimber Nullah, close to the Jummoo boundary on the North East, and then taking a South-Westerly direction, and running for thirty miles at no great distance from, and parallel with, the River Jhelum, terminating at Rissool. The highest part of these hills is 1,400 feet above the sea, and 500 to 600 feet above the plain. Their breadth varies from two to eight miles, and the strata is described as of the same class of fossiliferous rock as the Sewalik range, and as being prolific in fossils, some of which have been identified as the remains of elephants. The entire range is eminently sterile and unproductive. The drainage of the District presents peculiar features, the various streams formed by the rains not flowing into the rivers which bound it on the North East and South, but running parallel with their course and thus affording a means of irrigation of no inconsiderable value.

doos, and 408,047 Mussulmans. Of this again there are agriculturists, Hindoos 46,372, and Mussulmans 337,260, or a little over 75 per cent. of the entire population, and the area being about 1,900 square miles, this will give a little over 198 agriculturists to the square mile. One reason for the preponderance of Mussulmans over Hindoos in the district of Guzerat appears to be the prevalence of proselytism of the Hindoos to the Mahomedan faith; the chief attraction apparently being the superior position occupied by the people of that religious profession. The character borne by the people in many respects resembles that of old Scottish Borderers, in whom the first of virtues—as in these people—was to afford protection to the thief and even murderer, and to excel in cattle lifting. They are described as a manly race, and of somewhat superior intelligence to the population eastward of the Doab. They are neither litigious nor very quarrelsome: and among themselves are generally faithful and true to their engagements, but the proselytes of three hundred years have never entirely forsaken their original faith, and, notwithstanding that marriages are solemnised according to the Koran, Brahmins are not unfrequently employed as matrimonial agents.

We next come to the internal administration of the district, and learn that it is divided into three tehsils, viz., Guzerat, Kharian, and Phalia, and in each of them are established four thannahs. The three tehsils are again subdivided into forty-four zails; twenty-one in Guzerat, twelve in Kharian, and eleven in Phalia. The number of villages in each tehsil are 350 in Guzerat, 490 in Kharian, and 264 in Phalia. The district has been administered by three officers, a deputy commissioner, an assistant, and an extra assistant commissioner.

The revenue of the district at its annexation in 1849 amounted to Rs. 4,70,157-1-10, and in 1859 had reached Rs. 5,40,336-6-3, or Rs. 70,179-4-5 in excess, giving an increase of 15 per cent. per annum over the ten years.

It appears from the report that more than one attempt has been made at a revision of the original assessment, but until the present, no advantageous result had ensued. The rate now adopted is Rs. 1-2-2 per acre of cultivated land, the produce of which is valued at Rs. 8-6-6 per annum. The Rubbee harvest yields 60, and the Khurreef 40, per cent. of the agricultural produce of the district, and the assessment may be calculated at two-fifteenths of the gross grain yield. The productions most in favour appear to be wheat under which cultivation there are no less than 2,27,586 acres, barley 28,110 acres, buckwheat 1,46,319 acres, and cotton 24,119 acres. total area in acres under cultivation is 4,88,400, of which 2,92,869 are Rubbee and 1,95,537 Khurreef.

The statistics of crime show that the proportion to the population, which in 1850 was 18 to 883 souls, was, in 1858, 1 to only 451 souls. This is unsatisfactory, and must remain so, notwithstanding that heinous crimes are said never to have been rife in the district. Theft appears to be the most prevalent offence. In 1850 the amount of property stolen amounted to Rs. 16,096, and in 1858 to Rs. 19,378, an increase of 20 per cent. on the eight years; but in 1857 the property stolen amounted to Rs. 30,215, and in the year previous to Rs. 24,655; so that the year 1858 shows a decided improvement on the two previous years. Moreover, in 1856 the proportion of crime to population was 1 to 360. The Report contains no return of expenditure of the district, and we are, therefore, unable to form any idea of its actual progression or its fiscal value. -Englishman.

RUNGPORE.—Hostilities lately broke out between the Mynagoree and Booteah Soobahs. The former defeated the Booteah, who, having lost several of his men, retreated to the interior of Bootan. This, however, has not in the least disturbed the peace of Rungpore.

MEDICAL SERVICE.—According to the Englishman, Surgeon Hardy, of H.M.'s Medical Service, who went home from the Bengal Presidency in the commencement of the year, on promotion, will come out as personal surgeon to Lord Elgin, the coming Governor-general of India. If this information be correct, it is the first time that a Queen's medical officer has held the appointment of Surgeon to the Governor-general, that easy and well-paid post having always hitherto been occupied by a Company's surgeon. This right and privilege, if we may so call it, has now apparently gone down the stream of dissolution with the few other exclusive advantages possessed by the Company's medical officers.

DISTURBANCE AT NOWGONG .- From Major Henry Hopkinson, commissioner and Governor-general's agent. Assam, to the Secretary to the Government of Bengal, dated Tezpore, Oct. 30, 1861. Sir,-In continuation of my correspondence on the subject of the late disturbance at Nowgong, I have the satisfaction to report that I continue to receive accounts assuring me that the district is settling down into its accustomed quiet. 2. Captain Chambers came in from Phoolgooree last night, having been relieved by Lieutenant Wheler. Captain Chambers left the Deputy Commissioner, Lieutenant Sconce, encamped at Phoolgooree, his police in full uncontested action, and busily engaged in making arrests. Several of the ringleaders had been apprehended, and there was every hope that the man, a Doom of the name of Baoodan, who first struck Lieut. Singer down, would shortly be captured. Indeed, my anticipation of having to keep troops out during the cold weather will not, I trust, now be realised, and even since my arrival at Nowgong they have not been called upon to act, except in a protective capacity, or as a guard or escort, which the deputy commissioner could call in if he required their services, which he has not done. 3. The people belonging to the villages in the vicinity of Phoolgooree, who fled there when the outbreak first occurred, have returned and resumed their ordinary occupations; and what is the best proof of restored confidence and tranquillity, the native merchants at Nowgong have now directed the goods to be sent forward, the despatch of which they had countermanded on receiving news of the rising. 4. It appears quite certain that the cause of the outbreak was an unfounded apprehension as to the nature of the tax to be levied on pan-gardens, and also in some degree a misunderstanding of the license-tax, and but for the opportune presence of a steamer in the river, the consequences might have been very serious.-I have, &c., (Signed) H. Hopkinson, Commander and Governor-general's agent, N. E. Frontier, Assam. COTTON CULTIVATION .- The Gazette Supplement contains a number of papers on the supply of cotton. The Maharajah of Ramgurh is willing to grant leases of land on his estates in Burhee for the cultivation of cotton, tea or coffee. Jungle land will be granted free of all rent for seven years on leases for twenty years, renewable at the expiration of that period. After the seventh year the land to be liable to assessment at the Pergunnah rates, which would be on an average ten annus per acre. If the land was in-tended for cotton cultivation the rent free term would be three years. If villages and cultivated lands were included within the area applied for they would be assigned to the lessee on very fair terms. He might be induced to concede that at the expiration of the rent free period the cultivation only should be assessed. He will not consent. however, to any alienation of his title in the land In the Loharduggah district, which includes Chota Nagpore, any quantity of virgin land might be obtained at the rate of eight annas a beegah all round. In the Palamow sub-division there are 150,000 acres of waste land at the disposal of Government, of which more than one-third are cultura ble. Altogether there are 5,000 square miles of culturable waste, suitable for cotton, in Maunbhoom, Hazareebaugh, Palamow and Chota Nagpore. In the Patna division there is no hope of distribute a supply of the long-stapled seed among the collectors and to circulate a manual of the cultivation among the natives. Mr. Bingham, of Chynepore, offers to prepare such a work.

A MILITARY HOSPITAL SHIP .- At last a use, and a very creditable one to whoever invented it, has been found for the steamer Bentinck, purchased by the Government from the P. and O. Company at the commencement of the China war, and, since its termination unsaleable, although in the market at a very easy price. This fine roomy ship is to become, as it were, the " Dreadnought" of the Hoogly, as she is to be taken down to the mouth of the river and the Sandheads, and moored thereabouts as a hospital ship, for the reception of sick officers who may be recommended a change of air from the plains of Bengal to the renovating atmosphere of the ocean. The ship is to shift her berth according to the season of the year, and the fine or foul weather monsoon, but will always be in a salubrious position, and within the full influence of the sea breeze.

INVESTITURE OF THE MAHARAJAH OF CASH-MERE.—A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette describes the investiture of the Maharajah of Cashmere with the Order of the Star of India. The ceremony took place at Jummoo on the 1st Nov. Mr. Davies, the Secretary to the Punjab Government, and Mr. Forsyth, Commissioner of Lahore, accompanied by a detachment of troops, set out for Jummoo the day before. Shortly before arriving there some of the officers mounted the elephants provided by the Maharajah. A little further on they were met by the Maharajah's eldest son, a boy of eleven years of age, and in the city the Maharajah himself met them. The Durbar took place in the afternoon, in the hall of audience. The insignia were brought in and Mr. Davies delivered an address to the Maharajah in Oordoo. He and Mr. Forsyth then fastened the decorations on to the Maharajah's breast, while the whole assembly stood up and the guns thundered a salute. The Maharajah then made a short speech in Hindoostanee. A number of other presents were then set before him. Then followed a nautch, dinner, and fireworks. The next day a shooting party was organized, when a number of pigs, "very like bazaar ones," were OPPRESSION IN CASHMERE.-A correspondent of the Delhi Gazette makes further statements about the shawl-weavers of Cashmere, revealing a remarkable amount of oppression. The workmen earn about two annas a day by working from morning to night in wretched, unhealthy shops. All profits go to the master and the authorities. The victims receive advances, and are constantly kept in debt by their employers. Their only change is from one master to another. When a man wants a holiday he must pay two annas for it, besides losing his wage. Some try to escape from the country. "On the 12th of July last it was currently reported in Sreenuggur that three hundred of these men, driven to desperation, They failed in their attried to leave the place. tempt, and were brought back. Guards are placed at the different stations along the road to stop any one without a pass." He continues-"I have no hesitation in saying that could the people leave the country a very small portion of them Women are not allowed to leave would remain." the country. The export of Pushm and thread is prohibited. This is partly the cause of the adulteration of the shawls at Umritsur. writer is very bitter against the Cashmere administration, and not without reason. Can the Punjab authorities do nothing to atone for our most discreditable conduct in selling this valley to an irresponsible tyrant?

THE BENGAL BONDED WAREHOUSE COMPANY have declared a dividend of Rs. 26 per share, free of Income-tax, being equivalent to eleven per cent. per annum. No decision has yet been arrived at regarding the project of the Floating Pier Company to lease the river frontage of the bonded warehouse.

pore. In the Patna division there is no hope of any immediate increase, to any considerable extent, in the supply of cotton. It is proposed to vernments are using every effort to arrest him.

THE LOCAL EUROPEAN FORCE.—General Orders by Sir Hugh Rose, the Commander-in-Chief in India, have been published, disposing of the European soldiers of the late Company's army who have elected to remain "local" in place of volunteering for the general service of the Queen. The cavalry and infantry soldiers are directed to do duty with Queen's corps; the artillerymen have been formed into three batteries, one horse and two foot. These orders merely apply to the Bengal Presidency; in Madras and Bombay no steps have as yet, so far as we are aware, been taken in the matter.

RAJPOOTANA.—From Rajpootana we hear that all is quiet, save that every now and then some disaffected Marwar Thakoors, who have been ejected from their jagheers by the Maharajah of Jodhpore, make raids on the crown villages, and when hotly pursued by the troops fly for refuge into the Bikaneer, Jeypore or Maywar territories, where they find refuge until ready for another raid. Lately they have been at this and have fled to Bikaneer. As long as they do not touch our daks, line of roads, &c., the paramount power does not interfere.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL AND RIS LEGISLA-TIVE COUNCIL.—It is not yet finally settled, but it is most probable that the Governor-general will leave for the Godavery and Pegu in a few days. The water of that river is fast falling, so that he will not be able to ascend so high as was at first intended. All the members of the Legislative Council, which received its formal extinction by the proclamation of Saturday, have been asked to resume their labours in the new Council, with the exception, of course, of the judges. All have consented to accept office. It reflects as much honour on the Government of India as on Mr. Erskine, the member for Bombay, and that gentleman has stipulated he shall be at liberty to think, vote, and generally act for himself as a legislator, without wearing the badge of Government. By this spirit, different far from a factious or ignorant opposition, may all the mem-bers not of the Executive Council be actuated! Are we to accept the consent of the Government of India to this, as a pledge that Lord Canning will liberally work the new Constitution which is so essentially his own creation?

COTTON .-- ()n the 15th October the Board of Revenue informed the Government that the Egyptian cotton seed supplied by Mr. Shubrick had been tried in Cuddapah, Bellary, Kurnool, Coimbatore, and that the result was a failure. In Ganjam, however, the collector is of opinion that the produce could be raised all over the district, with or without special care, though a far greater yield may be expected from plants that are carefully watered; but that from superstitious motives, which he thinks remunerative prices offered on the spot would overcome, the people are at present averse to engaging in its cultivation. Two samples forwarded by the collector were pronounced by the Chamber of Commerce to be probably worth, although discoloured, from sixpence halfpenny to sevenpence and fivepence per pound in London. The order of Government on the Board's letter, dated the 4th inst., is as follows: -" 1. The Governor in Council regrets to learn that the result of this trial has been unfavourable. Such partial experiments, however, with small quanties of seed, prove little. The Egyptian variety is known to have succeeded at Chingleput in the districts mentioned by the board is probably owing to the seed having been injured in transit, to the selection of unsuitable soils, or improper culture. The want of success on this occasion should not therefore prevent further efforts. 2. The Governor in Council observes that the cotton forwarded by the collector of Ganjam, though discoloured, is declared by the Chamber of Commerce to be worth from 54d. to 7d. per lb. in London. It will be desirable to know what price the grower might expect for it here."-Athenæum.

THE WYNAAD SURVEY .- The Madras authorities have declined to spend £40,000 on a complete survey of the coffee district of Wynaad, but will survey the Government lands private estates when payment is offered for the service and the cultivated areas from time to time for purposes of taxation. The fee simple or a permanent settlement should get rid of this monstrous necessity of measuring cultivated land periodically for purposes of taxation.

THE LATE SIR HENRY WARD .- "It appears, says the Colombo Observer, "that the late Sir H. Ward preferred a claim for 'equipment allowance.' To outfit allowance he would, we believe, have been entitled had he been appointed from England; but as he had only to go from Ceylon to Madras (at least we take that to be the ground) the allowance was refused. Sir Charles Wood, in communicating this decision, however, went on to say: 'In consideration, however, of the melancholy loss sustained by the family of Sir H. Ward by his death, so immediately after his assumption of the office of Governor of Madras, I am prepared to make to Lady Ward a special grant of £2,000."

THE BISHOP OF MADRAS .- Dr. Gell arrived at Madras on the 25th November. His lordship's formal installation took place in the Cathedral on the 27th.

THE PALAR ANICUT. - The Government of Madras are indignant at the delay in carrying out the works in connection with the Palar Anicut. The estimate is between eight and nine lakhs, of which six have been expended. The return has only been 21 per cent. hitherto. A further outlay of three lakhs would raise the return to 22 per cent. The immediate completion of the works has accordingly been resolved on. As regards the works in the Madras district, the Government "do not see why they should be limited to Rs. 10,000, and they will not tolerate further inaction."

BOMBAY.

POLICE REFORM IN BOMBAY.

Hopelessly we sit here in Bengal, in the very focus of reform and at the fountain head of poli tical ideas, and watch the progress of the new system of constabulary as it spreads over Madras, Pegu, the North-Western Provinces, Oude, the Punjab, and finally Bombay,-everywhere except in unfortunate Bengal. Powerful in this case only for evil, the Lieutenant-governor sees discontent still simmering in Nuddea, darogahs still torturing in Hooghly, a village riot bursting out into a serious insurrection in Assam, but yet he refuses to carry into effect the orders of the Supreme Government to reform his police, and only appoints a useless Committee to waste the time until he leaves Bengal worse than he found Bengal is the only province which now shares with Prussia the pleasures of an oppressive, stupid police, active only as the instruments of evil. Those familiar with the Macdonald case and the Stieber process, those who have "done' the Rhine and penetrated beneath the surface of German life in Berlin, have a faint idea of what the Prussian police are. Created by Napoleon for a conquered country, they are the instrument of French autocracy wielded by German despotism. Unable to detect or prevent crime they are only a means of political oppression. Dr. Avé-Lallemant, a recent writer, tells us they are doomed by the public opinion of Germany. With characteristic wis-dom he points to the best remedy in a "scientific or moral elevation of the policeman and the introduction of an intelligent police on the basis and recognition of Christian-German popular life (Volkswesens), and Christian-German science." To accomplish these ends he would appoint a professor to lecture on police-law, would effect "a reconciliation between the police and the citizen community," and finally would increase the policeman's pay. Ludicrous as the first two suggestions are, the German theorist's professor is quite as wise a remedy as Mr. Grant's committee, while the latter has never yet recommended anything so practical as an increase of pay. For earnest police reform in Bengal, for which all the country is groaning, we must wait till April.

How refreshing it is to turn from the weary obstruction of Bengal to the active energy of Sir George Clerk in Bombay. From his visit there, Colonel Bruce, our Indian Professor of police-law, has recently returned. We learn from Sir George Clerk's Minute how little he found to do, for the reform was already in active operation. It is to Sir George Clerk and to Bombay that India owes the first attempts at police reform, the root of which consists in the very simple but seldom recognised principles, that there should be no native organised force, besides a purely military army, and a purely civil police, and that the police should be independent of the judicial authorities while subject to the orders of the civil power. First enunciated in 1848, of the civil power. these principles were carried into effect in 1852, and it is only because they were not closely followed on Sir George Clerk's departure that reform has become necessary during his second tenure of office. Yet, imperfectly as the system has been carried out, his Minute shows how successful it has been. Comparing the statistics of crime in 1848 with those of 1860, we find that, while population has increased, there has been a decrease in every offence with the exception of the crimes which attend a "revival of commercial pursuits," such as forgery, coining, perjury, and simple robbery. The value of stolen property, which was Rs. 835,891, has fallen 50 per cent., and the amount recovered, which was Rs. 96,004, has risen 17 per cent. In like ratio the number of prisoners in the jails has decreased.

We are enabled to publish figures showing the state of the Bombay police as it stood on 1st May, 1860, that the full financial extent of the reform Sir George Clerk is carrying out may be

		No.	Cost Ks.

Total	•••	41,251	45,81,220

This enormous sum does not include the cost of arms, pensions, and gratuities for the force, and is meant for a territory extending, with native States, over an area of 186,951 square miles, with a population of 16,748,704 and a revenue of £8,745,182. This last amount includes the income of the native states and political agencies such as Cutch, Baroda, Cambay, Kattiewar, Mahecanta, Rewacanta, Surat, Belgaum, and Aden. If we cut off all these the boná fide police charges are:—

Criminal police	•••	·	•••	Rs.	28,4 8,53 2

Ø-4-1				D-	20 60 698

This sum will be reduced by Sir George Clerk from forty to twenty-five lakhs of rupees, a charge somewhat less than the usual calculation founded upon area and population would give. The only circumstance that may imperil this extensive financial reform in our most extravagant presidency will be Sir George Clerk's early departure. What has been already done may be gathered from the fact, that during his personal visit to Sind the Governor effected a reduction of two and a-half lakhs in the annual expenditure.

Eager as we are for financial reduction as the source of all other reform, political and educational, we would not overlook the fact that there is a tendency to underpay both the sepoys and police. "Few and efficient" should be our policy in the case of both, but hitherto this has been forgotten. In Bombay policemen are paid now as they were in 1855-6 from Rs. 4-8 to Rs. 6 8 a month. Their native officers are paid no better, receiving from Rs. 20 to 35 a month, with a few exceptions at Rs. 50. Since then prices have risen, as all householders know, who have been forced to add some 50 per cent. to the wages of their servants. The following table is of interest in itself as well as for our purpose, showing how much a rupee will purchase in Bombay:-

	18	55-	56.		18	1860-61.			Increased
	Seers	5.	Tolal	15.	Seers.		Tolahs.		per Cent

Salt	54		32	•••	35		30		53.8
Tobacco									60.3

This may be taken as a type of the whole of India. Can we wonder that the police cheat, oppress and torture? If we are to have contented mercenaries, and an honest and efficient police, we must pay them justly and supervise them strictly.—

Friend of India.

MISCELLANEOUS.

SIR JAMSETJEE JEEJEEBHOY.—A bronze statue of the late Sir Jamsetjee Jeejeebhoy, by Baron Marochetti, is to be placed in the compound of the Bombay Hospital which bears his name. The statue was ordered by the late Baronet during his stay in England.

POONAH DISPENSARY.—Khan Bahadoor Pestonjee Serabjee has contributed Rs. 15,000 for the erection of a dispensary in Poonah, to be called by his name. The donor received his title for his services as mail contractor between Poona and Nagpore during the mutiny. We trust the time is coming when education will be the favourite object to which native gentlemen will devote a portion of their wealth.

INTRODUCTION OF GAS.—The Bombay Justices of the Peace have resolved to light the city with gas by means of a loan of a lac of rupees to be raised on the security of the municipal revenue. This plan is approved of by Government in preference to the one which proposed the appropriation of a portion of the drainage funds to the work of gas-lighting. It is expected that the city will be lighted up in one year from the date on which the loan is sanctioned. The work will be carried out by the municipal commissioners.

REDEMPTION OF LAND TAX.—The Bombay Times of India says:—"The permission to redeem the land-tax by the payment of twenty years' assessment will be eagerly seized by the people in the southern collectorates of Bombay. So great is the demand for land in these districts, and so profitable its cultivation, that the ryot is able to sell his mere right of occupancy at twenty, and thirty, and even fifty years' purchase of the assessment."

MILITARY COLONISATION .- Sir George Clerk is still further carrying out that policy of military colonisation which he was one of the first in India to urge nearly twenty years ago, by settling not only discharged but supernumerary sepoys on the waste lands of Khandeish. He "conceives it would not only be highly advantageous to the interests of agriculture and commerce were Government to induce discharged and supernumerary sepoys to cultivate these lands, but by thus providing for them an honest means of subsistence in their retirement, Government would be adopting a measure which would tend to good order and peace, whilst they would be effecting not only a present financial saving in the pay of supernumeraries, but would produce a prospective increase to their land revenue."

CHINA.

Hong Kong, Nov. 15 .- The London mail of the 26th of September arrived here on the 11th instant.

In news of general interest the past fortnight has been rather barren.

From Japan there is very little intelligence. Some of our men-of-war are understood to be cruising among the Japanese islands, and they will no doubt exercise some influence as regards the safety of our countrymen in that strange land. The marine survey in which the Actaon has been for some time engaged will add materially to our knowledge of Japanese waters, and be found valuable in proportion as our commerce increases. The case of Mr. Moss will be tried in Hong Kong very shortly, and he will perhaps be allotted a proportion of the damages he demands; it is to be hoped that Mr. Alcock's counsel will let us know as much as possible about the shooting of the goose, so that the question of what foreigners may and may not do in the course of a country excursion, either here or in Japan, may be well opened up, and, at least, partially settled. As certain grave political issues may be, and certainly ought to be, raised in Mr. Alcock's defence. and spoken to by the other counsel as well as by the chief justice, the case is one in which forensic eloquence may do a good deal one way or another, and lead to the ventilation of an important and grave question, involving matters of high consideration. The alleged wrongs of Mr. Moss will thus become a useful peg on which to hang more serious matters.

Our dates from Pekin are to October 27th Mr. Bruce was then fast recovering from a bad fall out of his carriage. The new Emperor would leave the Zehol on the 26th of October, according to the latest arrangements; his father's cortege was to follow, after an interval, so that the new Emperor would receive the imperial coffin in due form. The arrival would most likely take place about the 4th of the present month. In the mean time as few foreigners as possible are invited to the capital. We believe that this is in deference to the wishes and advice of Prince Kung, who would promote foreign interests as cautiously as he can, and in such a way as to avoid giving needless offence to the Court. The Imperial progress through Pekin would not, it is understood, be improved by the crowd of foreign tourists who would make it the occasion for flocking to the capital; and, as it is just possible that some of the foreign visitors might be guilty of cockneyisms, and require Mr. Bruce to appear in their behalf when brought up in the morning at the Board of Punishments, the policy presently adopted is to give the new Emperor the first view of his own capital, and then allow Brown, Jones, and Robinson the second. Some translations of correspondence lished, and it appears from those documents that the | gate, each man having two baskets, one containsubject has engaged a great deal of attention on the part of the Chinese authorities, and that they have shown every readiness to hear the advice of the European officers, and to be guided by their counsels; this circumstance, while it speaks well for future friendly relations with those at the very head of affairs, gives to the foreign officers in Chinese employ a tremendous power over the foreign trade, and over commerce generally; it also guarantees us against those political complications which had their dim origin in trading operations. Pure as the China trade has latterly been, there are still some traders left to whom the strict supervision of the New Customs is irksome, but now that the Chambers of Commerce, here and at Shanghae, have had all their alleged grievances removed, there can scarcely be anything for further complaint except official delay, and official incivility. As even this will in due time disappear under a proper head, it will become difficult for anyone to offer objections to the system without suggesting suspicions that the mere fact of supervision is the sore that continues to rankle.

From the Northern Ports we have no intelligence additional to that communicated by last mail. Admiral Hope is said to have visited the port of Newchwang in Manchuria.

The Yang tsze river and the rebels do not afford any further room for comment; it has been said that some bad feeling is arising at the port of Hankow, but such reports are always going about and do not require serious attention. The expedition that was to have started from India with a view of making Hankow overland, will not set out, as Mr. Bruce has refused to get passports through Thibet. The reason for this is obvious; the Emperor's authority in Thibet is of a nature merely nominal; were the passports to be disregarded, we could not complain; and if we did not complain in such a case, it would form a bad precedent.

From Shanghai we do not learn, by the latest accounts, of any further alarm on account of the rebels and their proximity to that city; matters, in fact, seem to remain much as they were when we last wrote. Our contemporary, the North China Herald, is gone into new management. Mr. Compton, the late proprietor and editor, retiring to England, has disposed of that journal to Mr. Mossman, the present editor; and Mr. Pickwoad, a gentleman who adventured to Shanghai some little time ago from Australia.

The rumoured vicinity of the rebels to Ningpo has caused thousands of the inhabitants to become so much alarmed for their personal safety as to seek every means of conveyance to Shanghai; and many had already arrived at that city at the date of the last advices. The rebels are credibly reported to have completely invested Hangchow after having taken Shaou shing foo.

From the various other ports on the coast we have no news of interest, except that at Swatow a boat's crew of H.M.'s gun-boat Firm, engaged in surveying the river, had been assaulted by the vil lagers, stoned, and two of the seamen wounded.

From Canton we learn that Mr. Burlingame, the American Plenipotentiary, visited his Excel lency Laou, the Governor-general of the Two Kwang, on the 5th instant; he was acccompanied by three missionaries and two merchants, and, we understand, was very well received. The Governor-general returned their visit on board the Hankow, which he preferred to Russell & Co.'s hong, politely pleading a curiosity to inspect the new steamer. It is under stood that the United States Minister addressed a body of merchants on board the Hankow after the Governor-general of the Two Kwang had left that vessel. Mr. Burlingame has gone to Shanghai, on his way to the capital. The following interesting account of the literary examinations which are being resumed in the great hall at Canton, since the Allies gave up the city, we extract from the Friend of China:-

"Tuesday next, the 12th inst., the new literary examination hall will be opened, the ceremonies

ing pens, ink, paper, &c., the other food and clothing. The Fotoey, grain superintendent, treasurer, and an instructing officer having arrived, and being seated within the gate, the candidates are called one by one from a list prepared beforehand, their person and baskets being rigidly searched for books or papers that might be of assistance in the studies to which they are

"The search over, each candidate is given a slip on which is written, with his name, the number of the cell he is to occupy—the cell in question being some four feet long by under three feet wide. When all are entered, the outer doors are locked, and slips of paper pasted over them, police being stationed outside, and soldiers within to prevent communication.

"The students go through three courses-First, they are given passages from the books of Mencius Confucius, or other great writers, on which they are required to dilate, in some such way as a clergyman amplifies on a text from scripture.

"The next course is that of explaining some point in each of the five classics; and, third, he has again five subjects to exhibit his knowledge upon;-these being geography, astronomy, the art of government, ancient history, and modern history

"When the thesis is written, it is taken to a special officer, who thereupon marks and enters it. It is then transcribed, so that the handwriting may not be known by the examiners. These examiners are-first, the officer and his assistant specially appointed by the Emperor, with whom are associated ten district magistrates selected by the Governor of Canton-these ten being called rulers of departments.

"The papers being first looked over by the ten, the best in their opinion are taken from the mass, and sent in to the chief examiner, who, with his assistant, then decides on the superiority of this or that; the writers of the approved papers being eligible for office under Government, and designated at this examination Sui-tsai (Sowchooy in the Poon-tee). Two days and two nights are given to each student to prepare each paper, so that it takes just a week to complete the business, during which time the candidates cook their own food, and have rather a hard time of it.

"During the time of this examination people living in the neighbourhood are not allowed to go on the tops of their houses, and if they do they are liable to be shot at.

"The unwashed have a saying that the candidates for examination resemble five things. First, when they enter, they have a basket containing their food and clothing, &c. In this they resemble beggars. Second, their persons and effects are examined; in this they are like thieves that have been arrested. Thirdly, in their little dens, they have to stretch their necks to look out; in this they are like bees in their cells. Fourthly, while writing they repeat over in a low tone, which sounds like the voice of a sick crane. Fifthly, when they come out, those who are successful rejoice with a voice like thunder, clapping their hands and kicking up their heels: while the unsuccessful weep bitterly, or perhaps abuse the examiner, saying that he is blind, and not competent to pass judgment on a composition. These two classes are like crazy or mad men."

The accounts from Saigon are still far from favourable to the French; nothing decisive has taken place.

In local matters, we have to record the partial success of the first regatta in our waters for many years .- Overland China Mail.

CEYLON.

Colombo, Nov. 29 .- During the fortnight only one vessel has sailed with a cargo of coffee. Her destination was London, and she took away 9,028 ewt. Plantation, 2,358 cwt. Native; total, 11,386.

As compared with previous seasons our export between Prince Kung and the late Emperor, re- on the occasion being as follows:—At an early of Plantation shows still a considerable excess, garding the foreign customs, has lately been pub- hour the candidates will assemble around the but the falling off in Native continues. Our total of vessels in our roadstead proves that what crop we may have to export will not be detained for lack of tonnage.

The exports of cinnamon are large, but in cocoa-nut oil there is a falling off to the extent of two thirds. The accounts from the home markets continue to be encouraging.

We regret to say that respecting the crop now being gathered, we cannot give much brighter accounts as regards quantity. Almost everywhere the report is "crops very short." The quality, however, is excellent, and the steady and copious rains which have recently fallen have had the double effect of ripening the berries still on the trees, and preparing the trees themselves to mature the great crop of which we have the almost certain promise for next year.

Since our last the Legislative Council have, amongst their other labours, passed the new Police Courts Bill. It will come into force on the 1st of January, and at this moment there seems some danger that the magistrates will be left without a code of rules for their guidance. The rules now in force stand repealed by the Ordinance on the 1st of January, and a question of privilege endangers the passing of the new code prepared by the judges of the Supreme Their lordships, it seems, claim that the rules framed by them should either be passed in their integrity by the Legislative Council, or rejected in toto. The members of the Legislative Council, very properly as it seems to us, stand on their constitutional right to consider and revise all Bills brought before them. They have the express words of the Ordinance in their favour, to the effect that such Bills shall be dealt with as in the case of other Bills, and there are precedents of similar Bills having been submitted to Sub-Committees and revised. With every respect for the Judges of the Supreme Court, therefore, we trust that neither Government nor the Council will concede a claim which would result in the erection of an imperium in imperio. Government,-that is the Governor and the nonlegal members of the Executive Council, came to the last meeting of the Legislature prepared to concede what they naturally enough supposed the judges legally claimed, they being the highest expositors of existing laws. question was raised by the Queen's advocate. Constitutionally and legally the honourable and learned gentleman is on this occasion right. But the Governor complained, and we think with good reason, that his own law adviser should have taken him by surprise on such a question. It needs no clairvoyance to say that had the relations between the Governor and the Queen's advocate been of the cordial and confidential character which ought properly to exist between officials in their relative positions, such a scene as occurred at the last meeting of council would never have been witnessed. Not only was the Governor heard to express his surprise at the conduct of his own Queen's advocate, but the colonial secretary made the declaration that he was determined to perform his duty notwithstanding the threat of his learned colleague that any attempt to circumscribe the privileges of the military would prove fatal to the Tolls Bill. The threat itself, uttered before the Colonial Secretary had said one word about the military, naturally enough excited displeasure, and lavs the honourable gentleman open to some suspicion. It is now well known that the relations between the higher civil and military authorities in the colony are by no means of the cordial character which could be wished. With every desire to act liberally by the military, there is a determination to secure to the Legislature its right of voting and fixing their allowances. This appears to be resented, for the Colonial Secretary complained in Council that the Government always had the Queen's Regulations thrown in their teeth. No one can be astonished, therefore, if the Queen's Advocate's extraordinary and premature allusion to the military question created the suspicion that he came to Council prepared to act as much the advocate for the military as the advocate for the Government. proach of the soldiers played a defiant tune on gapore Free Press.

the Colonial Secretary; and we cannot suppose that the state of things indicated by the last debate in Council will long be permitted to last. We fancy Government and the judges will come to an understanding; but there is certain to be a very warm debate in Council, when the question of the military allowances comes up in connection with the Supply Bill for 1862-now in the hands of a sub-committee.

A difference of opinion between the civil and military authorities has lost to the army officers a rather desirable employment, that of Assistant Deputy Commissary General. The Deputy Commissary General is a civilian, Mr. Bernard. His Assistant is Captain Gorman, of the Ceylon Rifles. On the 1st of January, it is understood, Captain Gorman returns to his regimental duties, being succeeded, permanently, by a civilian, Mr. S. Rehe. The change, we are told, is owing to the determination expressed by the Major-General that no officer could hold employment of this nature for more than three years. The Deputy Commissary General remonstrated, pointing out that this ar rangement would deprive him of Assistants just when experience had rendered them most valuable. It is said that, as a compromise, a period of five years was suggested to the General, but that he would not give way. Thereupon Government determined that the Assistant at Colombo should be a civilian—with a salary of £450 per annum, we believe. For the present, we understand, the Assistants at out stations are to be military men.

Of general intelligence there is none to communicate, unless it be the melancholy fact that death has been more than usually busy in our small community. Death has at last closed the sufferings of Mr. Tucker, of Kaduganava, and so has passed away from amongst the planting body one of the most gentlemanly and popular of their number. Another worthy man, Mr. G. W. Park, has departed. We have also to add to our objtuary the name of the Rev. G. R. Mutukistne, Tamil Colonial Chaplain and Canon of Christ Church Cathedral. The deceased was a native of more than ordinary attainments. He was high in the confidence of Bishop Chapman.

Of the railway we have nothing to say except that the Bill to pay off two thirds of the debt has received the Governor's assent. We are now awaiting the result of the advertisements for tenders.

The weather is exceedingly rainy, but seasonably so. Fevers and colds are somewhat prevalent, but the health of the country is, on the whole, good. - Colombo Overland Observer.

THE STRAITS.

NETHERLANDS INDIA.—By the Dutch mail steamer we have Java papers to the 14th Nov., but they contain very little news. Regarding Banjermassing affairs, we learn that Demang Lehman's submission had been followed by that of a number of lesser chiefs and their followers, who have been distributed in different campongs, where they will be under surveillance of trustworthy chiefs. They have been ordered to bring in their wives and children from the jungle, and to apply themselves to work, to provide themselves with the food which the Government is now supplying to them. According to the declaration of Demang Lehman, the want of provisions, ammunition, and money was the cause of his laying down his arms. In order to convince the Government that his submission was sincere, Demang Lehman offered to visit the other rebels, with the object of inducing them to submit, and he also undertook to persuade Hidayat to surrender. His offer was accepted, and he had set out upon his mission with some five hundred followers. On the 27th of August Captain van Vloten, with two hundred men, a howitzer and mortar, advanced upon Romanin, where the enemy occupied two strong bentings on the Karrau river. Contrary to their usual tactics, the insurgents stood their ground, and on the ap-export shows well in comparison, and the number | Such evidently was the feeling on the mind of | the gamelang. Captain van Vloten resolved to surround the two bentings, which, for the distance of about one hundred and fifty paces, were environed by natural barricades. Lieutenant Schade van Westrum, with forty men, was detached against the smallest benting, and Captain Labar, with 120 men, against the larger. The mortar opened fire upon the latter, but the shells were seen to explode upon the young bamboos, so that their discharge did little damage. Lieutenant van Westrum succeeded in carrying the small benting, but the large one offered a stout resistance, the enemy keeping up a murderous fire behind their defences, and it was found impossible to carry it by storm, on account of the barricades and the quantity of ranjus (crow-feet). Captain van Vloten therefore withdrew his men until night, when he hoped they would be less exposed to the fire of the rebels. As soon as the withdrawal of the troops afforded the insurgents a good chance of escape they began to evacuate the benting by a small bridge thrown across the river. Captain van Vloten had placed the howitzer in a position commanding this bridge so, that the fugitives suffered much from its fire. The benting was then attacked and quickly carried by storm. In these operations 1st Lieutenant van der Hoek, of the artillery, was killed, and Lieutenant Domseler was wounded in the leg. The further losses of the troops were—2 killed, 8 severely wounded, and 28 slightly wounded. The enemy had at least 17 killed, while from the traces of blood on the line of their retreat they appeared to have had a number of men wounded. Lieutenant Cateau van Rosevelt had an engagement with a party of insurgents, whom he put to flight. On the 18th October the same party, having been reinforced, made a stand at Benua Lawas. Captain Thelen on this advanced against them with 45 bayonets. He found about 500 men assembled at Benua Lawas, dressed in white and yellow clothes, and well armed, who had posted themselves in and around the Misjit (Mahomedan Church). Captain Thelen endeavoured to take them by surprise, but he was received by a heavy discharge of musketry, the enemy also making a determined onset. The soldiers, especially the Europeans, made a stout resistance, but the attack was so violent and resolute that Captain Thelen was obliged to fall back about 100 paces from the Misjit, where he succeeded in keeping the insurgents at bay. Having received reinforcements from Amunthay, Capt. Thelen renewed the attack at half-past eleven on the night of the 18th, but was met by a discharge of lillas and muskets, when Lieut. Cateau van Rosevelt was wounded in the foot and a coolie killed. The enemy were, at last, however, put to flight by a couple of shots from a French mountainhowitzer. On the following day Captain Thelen advanced against the Misjit, and a few shots and shells finally drove out the enemy, who retreated in great disorder. They were supposed to have had 60 killed and about 100 wounded. At Pinili Biru a band of insurgents had established themselves in a strongly fortified, benting from whence they made plundering expeditions. On the 27th October Captain Van der Heyden proceeded against this post with two officers, 100 bayonets and a mortar. An attempt was made to storm it, but this failed. It was then surrounded, and on the 29th it fell into the hands of the troops. A number of the enemy were killed and wounded, while the loss of the Dutch troops was three soldiers killed, and Captain Hamakers and three The column of Captain van soldiers wounded. Vloten on the 28th October reached the mouth of the Mantallet river. It consisted of 230 infantry, a mortar and howitzer, and a number of auxiliary troops. It was intended to operate against Antasari. Advices had been received from Kutei to the 13th October. On the 19th Sept. the Kutei troops had set out from Muara Pahu for the upper Dusun, and it was hoped that the principal force would be able to follow from Muara Pahu on the 20th, in order, by the end of the month, to be near the sources of the Labey. This force is also intended to operate against Artasari.—Sin-

INSUBORDINATION

Insubordination.

Mily. Dept.—No. 1,048.—H.E. the C. in C. has brought to the notice of the Government of India letters dated respectively the 11th, 12th, and 14th October last, addressed to the Deputy adjt. gen. of the Army, by Capt. P. Maxwell, dep. commr. in the Punjab, Lieut. J. W. Orchard, dep. supt. of police, and Lieut. R. T. Hare, asst. commr. in the Punjab, in which, under cover of expressions of respect and subordination, these officers have ventured to use terms manifesting their disapprobation of the recent decision of H.M.'s Govt., that Officers joining the Staff Corps shall not be entitled to retire under the Regulation of 1796, in respect of any promotion obtained by such officers in the Staff Corps.

These letters were all written from Goojerat, and

These letters were all written from Goojerat, and their tenor appears to indicate that they were written by the officers named in concert with each other.

The Gov. gen. in Council entirely concurs in the opinion which the C. in C. has expressed, "that these opinion which the C. in C. has expressed, "that these officers might have perfectly well made any complaint of the decision in question, without, at the same time, expressing what is virtually a disapprobation of a measure of H.M.'s Secretary of State for India."

In order to mark with due reprehension conduct so subversive of discipline, the Gov. gen. in Council hereby cancels the admission of Lieut. Hare to the Staff Corps, and will not comply with the application of Capt. Maxwell and Lieut. Orchard for admission to that corps.

Questions and Answers.

No. 1.059.—H.E. the Gov. gen. in Council directs the publication, for general information, of the subjoined questions submitted by an officer in England connected with the changes in the Indian army, and the answers given thereto by the Rt. Hon. the Sec. of State for India:—

An officer asks how officers of the rank of lieute-nant-colonel will be affected by the Staff Corps War-rant and the Promotion Warrant of October, 1858. He appears to be under the impression that he can join the Staff Corps as a lieutenant-colonel.

Also, looking to the restriction of the grant of the rank of colonel to lieutenant colonels employed in certain positions by the Promotion Warrant, whether, as respects lieutenent colonels joining the staff corps, there is any restriction as to the nature of the service they must be employed in, whether civil or military. It is presumed that all service performed in the staff corps by lieutenant colonels, in whatever position, will count towards the qualifying period for the rank of colonel, and that substantive lieutenant colonels will become colonels after five years' ser-vice, and brevet lieutenant colonels for service in the field after eight years' service in the staff corps as such.

1. That an officer promoted to the rank of lieute-1. That an officer peromoted to the rank of figure-nant-colonel for distinguished service will be en-titled, after serving eight years in the staff corps, to be promoted to the rank of colonel, under the provi-sion of the 10th clause of the warrant of Oct. 1, 1858. 2. That promotion in the staff corps, under the Royal Warrant of Jan. 16, 1861, is entirely distinct from that under any other warrant, and takes no cog-nizance of bravet rank under that of calculations.

nizance of brevet rank under that of colonel

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

(From the Calcutta Government Gazette.)

Benares, Nov. 7.—This day at twelve o'clock the Viceroy and Governor-general received a deputation of the inhabitants of the city of Benares at the residence of the commissioner of the division.

The chief civil and military officers of the station and a guard of honour of H.M.'s 19th regiment were present.

and a guard of honour of H.M.'s 19th regiment were present.

The deputation consisted of Raja Deo Narain Sing, Baboo Fatch Narain, Baboo Huruk Chand, Rai Narain Doss, Baboo Gooroo Doss, and the chief persons of the city, to the number of one thousand.

The deputation was headed by the Maharais of

The deputation was headed by the Maharaja of Benares, who read and presented to His Excellency the following address:—
"MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,"

"MAY IT PLEASE YOUR EXCELLENCY,
"We, the Maharajas, Rais, Baboos, and others, inhabitants of this most ancient city of Benares, beg most humbly to approach your Excellency on this the last occasion on which you will visit this the last occasion on which you will visit this place, to express to you our deep and heart-felt sentiments of respect and attachment. It is not merely with the view of showing the loyalty and devotion which we deeply feel towards our Gracious Queen, of whom your Excellency is the august representative, that we now approach you, but because we feel that we have a duty to perform towards your lordship personally, even to express our feelings of reverence and affection for the just, our feelings of reverence and affection for the just, merciful, and benevolent ruler of our country at a fearful crisis in its history. Your Excellency, instead of assuming at that time the character of an avenger, which, we confess, we might have justly expected, causing blood to flow even as water in retribution of the fierce and bloody deeds of some of our countrymen, and unlike previous conquerors in the history of India, who, with fearless provocation, carried fire and slaughter through its length and breadth, remembered, in the time of victory and in the plenitude of restored power, that you were the representative of a Christian Government, and extended a merciful and unhoped for elemency to these who might have looked for extermination; while at the same time your Excellency fully vinwhile at the same time your Excellency fully vin-dicated the majesty of outraged law and upheld the honour and the dignity of the Government con-

"But our sentiments of attachment and reverence to your Excellency are enhanced and deepened by the reflection that not only you abstained from just vengeance in the hour oftriumph, but have been the means of soothing and tranquilising the anxious and fearful minds and hearts of millions of her Majesty's Indian subjects by conveying to them our most Gracious Oneon's beneficent sentiment towards most Gracious Queen's beneficent sentiment towards this country, and the assurance that her Majesty will maintain, protect, and watch over the interests and rights of her people in India even as she does those of Great Britain; and your Excellency has already given to this country full and ample proof of already given to this country it and ample proof of the reality of those gracious assurances by bestowing upon and confirming, in her Majesty's name, to the chiefs of Hindoostan, the deeply cherished right of adoption. Your Excellency has thus proved to the world that her Majesty the Queen, whose dominions extend from ocean to ocean, and on which the sun ever remains shining, seeks no territorial acquisi-tion, but desires that the chiefs and ancient houses of India, and their descendants after them, should continue to enjoy from generation to generation their hereditary honours and ancestral possessions, which to them and their people are dearer than life.

"Your Excellency has given us further deep cause for gratitude in carrying out the desire of her Most Gracious Majesty that the exercise of magisterial power, and a share in the administration of their native country, should be conferred on such individuals whose influence, position, and personal character and services to the State seemed to render them deserving of this high and invaluable privilege.

"We are thankful that your Excellency has been preserved in health and strength to achieve such great important objects, having not only extinguished rebellion and restored order and good government, rebellion and restored order and good government, but, by your mild, judicious, and generous measures, having also rooted that government deeply and permanently in the hearts and affections of the people of India, you now leave them loaded with their blessings, and carrying away their enduring gratitude; and in wishing and praying that your Excellency may reach your native land in safety and live long to enjoy the well-earned honours and rewards bestowed upon you by your sovereign, we beg to assure your Excellency that your name and the remembrance of your wise and benevolent rule will ever live in the grateful memories and affection of ourselves and of our children to distant generations. "We now, with the deepest respect and gratitude, bid you farewell."

bid you farewell."

The Governor-general, upon receiving the address, replied as follows:—

"Maharaja, Rajas, Baboos, Rais, and gentlemen of Benares.

"I am glad to have this last opportunity of visiting

Benares, and of receiving your loyal address.

"You have designated your city as most ancient.
You might have said that, in addition to its antiquity. that it is the ancient seat of Hindoo learning, and is held very sacred in your religion; and that its chief inhabitants are amongst the most influential of the Queen's subjects in Hindoostan.

"The opinions and feelings of such a community

"The opinions and feelings of such a community must always be matter of special interest and importance to the ruling power in India.

"I thank you for the good spirit in which those opinions and feelings have been expressed.

"I am glad to find that, being yourselves of another religion, you do not hesitate to recognise that mercy is the duty, pre-eminently, of a Christian Government, and that the Government of India has fulfilled that duty.

duty. "I am glad to find that you feel that you are governed with truth as well as with mercy, and I hear with pleasure your free acknowledgment that you have had ample proof that the assurances which you received from the Throne of protection to your rights and interests are a reality.

"You are right in supposing that the Crown of England seeks no further territorial acquisitions in India. Obedience to the law and fidelity to engage-

England seeks no further territorial acquisitions in India. Obedience to the law and fidelity to engagements the Government expects, and will enforce. But England's task in governing India is already large and weighty enough.

"The happiness and contentment of the one hundred and eighty millions of India's own people and their attachment to the British Crown are the first great objects in that task. These are the one broad lease upon which all individual prosperity and security must rest, and without which any man, be he my fellow-countryman or yours, who seeks by his onterprise or capital to build up his fortune in India, will be building on a quicksand.

enterprise or capital to build up his fortune in India, will be building on a quicksand.

"The contentment and attachment of which I speak can be secured only by a scrupulous abstinence from interference with religion; by a careful protection of all established rights of property, tenures, and interests; and by an impartial framing and an impartial administration of the laws.

"The task is and have said a large and weighty

"The task is, as I have said, a large and weighty one; but I see many signs that it is in course of accomplishment, and the spirit in which the city of Benares has to-day addressed the representative of the Overnis not accompt the least of these the Queen is not amongst the least of these

"Maharaja, Rajas, Baboos, Rais, and gentlemen of Benares, for your good wishes and kind expressions towards myself I thank you sincerely, and I bid you very heartily farewell."

Allowances to Officers Absent from Duty

Fort William, Oct. 22.—No. 956.—The regulations of the service which authorise Indian allowances to officers absent from their duty in India on medical certificate and on private affairs, for certain limited periods, and which have been relaxed since 1857 in the case of the senior officers for whom no employ-ment was available, will, from Jan. 1 next, be strictly

All officers, when absent in India from duty, will be entitled to Indian allowances only for the periods authorised by the regulations—viz., for two years when on leave on medical certificate, and for six months when on leave on private affairs.

Leave to General Officers.

Military Dept., Fort William, Oct. 22.—No. 952.—
The Right Hon. the Gov. Gen. of India in Council is pleased, with the concurrence of the Right Hon. the Secretary of State for India, to modify to the following extent such of the new furl. regs. as are applicable to gen. officers on the staff.

The concession of leave to Europe in the case of a general officer is to be considered the exception and as ground for obtaining such leave.

not the rule; and, as ground for obtaining such leave, it must be shown that the officer has contracted illness from the effects of climate, or of wounds re-ceived on service in India, or that the nature of the private affairs taking him from India is of a very

Leave on medical certificate will be restricted to six months, and on private affairs to four months, the penalty of exceeding such period being the vacation of the command, and in no case will a general officer be allowed more than one grant of leave out of India during his tour on the staff.

The position of brigadiers being considered analogous to that of general officers on the staif, the principle upon which the indulgence of leave is to be granted will hereafter be the same in both cases.

FRENCH INFLUENCE IN THE EAST.

The question is often asked, "How far is French influence to extend in the East?" The reply may fairly be, "As far as they can push it." And, looking at it in a French point of view, who can blame them? It is the necessity of the Emperor Napoleon to keep his people amused, if not profited, by plans for increasing their commercial influence throughout the world, and to keep his army and navy employed. There is no present work for the latter in Europe, and in Africa their occupation is all but gone; he must, therefore, make work for them somewhere else. The China war afforded an excellent opportunity for for her Indian possessions. The Persian Gulf, killed several ryots.

this; both glory and profit were obtained; and we cannot be surprised if there is a desire on the part of the French to keep Chusan, or some other snug place on the coast, in their occupation just to see that the Chinese carry out the treaty in good faith-nothing more. French commerce may grow in these seas, and it may require protection. England always protects her commerce from the bad faith of foreigners; at least there is a tradition to that effect: though recent events in Mexico certainly do not prove that it is always done. But France, we believe, never fails; and, by way of encouragement, occasionally makes a grievance, so as to get better terms from the offending nation for her traders. Their recent doings in Cochin China fully prove this. Saigon is now as much a French colony as Reunion Forts are built and building; dockyards and arsenals are in course of construction; shipbuilders and artificers of every class and occupa tion are already there or on their passage; a large force, intended for permanent occupation, is already there; and considerable reinforcements of Zouaves and marines are on their passage or have probably by this time arrived. It is to be the chief naval station of the French fleets in the Eastern seas-at least until one handier to India is found Saigon is quite near enough already, we think, for the interests of British commerce. A branch of the Messageries Imperiales (of which more anon) is to terminate at Saigon, the important commerce of France at that port requiring a special mail service. So much for what may be called the Far East.

We have, however, according to the Bombay Saturday Review, to look nearer home than the China Sea for an instance of the extension of French enterprise under imperial auspices. The Messageries Imperiales, it appears, propose establishing a branch of their service between Aden and Bombay, of course with the view of aiding French commercial enterprise. Four agents recently arrived at the latter port with that object, but found the native (Parsee) merchants indisposed to enter into the speculation, for the very good reason that it did not offer any profit; it being well known that it is the worst paying of all the P. and O. branches; the arrangements have been, therefore, for the present. suspended; (we believe only suspended), and two of the agents have proceeded to Kurrachee and the Persian Gulf, to see if the natives are more accommodating there, or the governing powers more facile. As regards the Red Sea our contemporary states what we believe is little known on this side of India - namely, that French docks are constructing on a large scale at Suez. As he remarks, this is a more formidable undertaking than the Suez Canal; though we suppose we shall be told that these docks are necessary for the success of that enterprise. The French have already considerable influence in Egypt; but with a naval depot at the head of the Red Sea, the sooner England secures the route through the Euphrates Valley the better with a naval station at Bussorah, would afford a very secure means of transit, in case of necessity—a necessity which may occur sooner than we imagine. We learn from the same authority that the agents of the Messageries have already arranged with the authorities at Aden respecting buildings and coaling ground at that place. It is also noticed as a significant fact that the steamers are commanded by officers of the Imperial navy. This is, however, not uncommon in other vessels of the Messageries, especially in the Mediterranean; though, considering that the French Government found it necessary recently to make a large addition to the number of its naval officers, there may be some object in allowing them to command merchant vessels. Our contemporary thinks there would be little difficulty found in turning these steamers into fighting vessels, and that unless we have a couple of line-of battle ships always stationed at Aden, that important port can at any time be blockaded, and that the coal now lying there, 70,000 tons, worth a quarter of a million sterling, would be a nice haul for the Frenchmen. We have not much fear as to the mischief which would be done by the steamers employed in the mail service; they could, at best, carry but a light armament, as has been proved by the P. and O. steamers; but what we should fear is, that they may be used as the small end of the wedge for the introduction of French influence in the shape of steam frigates, for which the coaling depot at Aden and Suez would be as useful as for the smaller vessels. Coal will certainly play an important part in future warfare. We are no alarmists, but this is no time for Government to be sleeping.

Leaving India it may be well to return to what we have previously noticed regarding the exertions making by France to obtain influence, or something more, in Madagascar, since the death of the late Queen. The possession of the throne, now vacant, has been disputed by two candidates, the son of the late Queen, and her nephew, who is chief of the powerful tribe of Slovas. The former is said to be favourable to French influence, and would consent to the Protectorate of France. The latter is hostile to foreign intervention, and adheres to the policy of the late Queen. The chief of the Roman Missionary Society (Jesuits) and a Mons. Routanny, who has several commercial establishments on the island, have been doing their utmost to support Prince Ragoto, the son of the Queen, in the French interest. Besides this, too, the Reunion journals call upon the Government to take measures to place the island under its protection. To this we imagine England would have no ground for objection, and can only insist upon her commerce being put upon the same footing as that of France. It will give that country a greatly increased power in those seas, and it would involve an increase of our naval force on that station. This, however, cannot be helped. If the planters of Reunion will only go to Madagascar for labourers, we should be glad to see a French Protectorate established .- Englishman.

THE WUZEEREES .- A private letter from the Punjab mentions that the Wuzeerees are sgain committing depredations in the Derajat district. They have lately plundered two villages and

COTTON FROM INDIA.

As the supply of cotton in this country steadily diminishes, while the Civil War in North America drags its slow length along, greater auxiety is felt as to the probability of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay taking the place of New Orleans, Charleston, and Savannah. When first it appeared certain that the raw material so essential to the prosperity of our manufacturing classes could not be obtained from the Confederate States for at least another year, a shout of exultation arose from the well-meaning, but not particularly wellinformed, section of the community who take, or affect to take, an enthusiastic interest in "the development of the natural resources of the British Empire in the Esst." Loud complaints, of course, were uttered touching the negligence of the local Governments in not providing sufficient means of communication between the interior and the seaboard, and various impracticable suggestions were offered with the view of averting inconvenience and loss from the Cotton Lords of Lancashire. For a time everybody pretended to know more about India and its capabilities than the Indians themselves, and far more than the English residents who had passed their lives in the East. The Manchester Association, with characteristic insolence, took the Governor-general to task for differing with them on the subject of native land tenures-a matter which His Excellency perfectly understood, and of which his impertinent correspondents were wholly ignorant. The Indian Government, however, was quite prepared to turn America's calamity to the best account. Funds were at once furnished for the construction of roads and bridges, seed was gratuitously distributed to both ryots and zemindars, and every possible encouragement afforded for the increased and improved cultivation of the highly-prized staple. Thus far, it must be admitted. the result of these laudable efforts has been a decided failure. Though indigenous to the soil, Indian cotton is short in the staple and some what coarse in fibre-to such a degree, indeed, as to augment the cost of manufacture by nearly one-fourth. It has been suggested that this defect may be gradually overcome on the principle of the selection of species. The idea is due to Mr. Thomas, the collector of Coimbatore. "From the seed pods of this crop take out those seeds to which the largest fibres are attached, establishing a minimum length of fibre, and throwing away all those seeds the cotton of which does not reach this standard; these selected seeds will be used for the next crop, and a similar process will be followed with this, the minimum length being increased every year. In this way, in Italy striving in vain to meet the require-the course of a few years it is probable that a permanent addition will be made to the length and possibly to the fineness of the fibre, and it will then be easy to spread the seed of the improved kind over the whole of the indigenous cotton fields of India." This, however, is manifestly a slow process, and, to use a homely proverb, "While the grass is growing the steed will starve." There is no question as to the capability of India for producing any quantity of cotton, if that species of cultivation can be made sufficiently remunerative. In that lies the whole gist of the matter. It is idle to offer prizes for the largest amount of produce from a given area if that produce be not also marketable. Enough cotton is already grown for native consumption and for exportation to China, so that if a large r breadth of land be devoted to this crop a new market must be opened. But it cannot be said that Liverpool presents that opening, seeing that no dependence can be placed on an adequate price being realised to cover the expenses of cultivation, transport, and shipment. According to the most approved canons of economical science, the home manufacturer is quite justified in refusing to hold direct intercourse with the cultivator. His business is with the merchant, and his again with the shipper at the Eastern port, who, on his part, purchases the article at his own risk in open market at the ruling rate of the day. This is the legitimate and usual mode of transacting business, but unhappily it will not answer in the present case. The ryot cannot do without advances and a certain minimum price for his produce, nor can he then undertake to deliver it at any great distance from his own homestead. Then, as each holding is usually of very small extent, it is impossible for a merchant to waste his time in making separate purchases of almost a retail insignificance. A middleman, therefore, steps in, and thus the cotton for which the ryot receives, perhaps, only a penny or three halfpence a pound becomes a comparatively costly article by the time it reaches Manchester. And there it is driven from the field by the vastly superior quality of its American rival, even though the latter be nominally somewhat dearer. We fear, therefore, that it would be an unwise speculation to force the cultivation of cotton in India for the purposes of the home market. By all means let every encouragement be given to the improvement of the staple, and then in the course of years, if the experiment succeed, it will inevitably find its price in the markets of Europe. The ordinary laws of supply and demand are not lightly to be trifled with, and any attempt to impart a feverish stimulus to any particular branch of commerce is sure to terminate in a miserable failure.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.

Excess of expenditure over income seems to be everywhere the order of the day. Extravagance is the fashionable bane alike of individuals and of nations. Scarce anyone thinks of living within his means, utterly regardless of the day of reckoning that must sooner or later overtake him. So is it with almost every State, whether in the old world or in the new. Russia, heavily embarrassed, Austria on the verge of bankruptcy, France shrinking from the very edge of the precipice, ments of her new position, Turkey upheld alone by pressure from without, the Federal States recklessly borrowing and running up an enormous debt-such is the picture of financial ruin that meets the eye in every direction. Only a year ago India might have been placed in the same category, and with little prospect of an early escape from similar embarrassments. Her downward course, however, has been checked in time, and there is now every reasonable hope that the worst crisis has passed, and that henceforth she will shape her outgoings by her income. Whereas in 1860-61 the deficit amounted to upwards of five millions and three-quarters. it is expected that in 1861-62 there will be a surplus of at least £239,896. Allowing a fair margin for sanguine estimates, it is probable that, in the absence of unforeseen disturbing causes, an equilibrium will at length be restored. Further reductions will take place as soon as governors of provinces and heads of departments become thoroughly impressed with the necessity for stringent economy, and learn to keep their respective demands within the narrowest limits. It is customary—as Mr. Lushington is instructed to observe—to estimate the fiscal value of each separate division according to the surplus it contributes to the public treasury after defraying all local charges. This, however, is a very loose and inaccurate mode of judging whether any particular province be a profitable possession or a mere territorial encumbrance. In the first place, in addition to local expenditure, civil and military, unless a province be in a condition to yield at least 30 per cent. of its total income as its rateable share of imperial charges, it cannot be said to maintain a true fiscal balance. This conclusion is derived from the fact that about 121 millions sterling have to be provided for out of the surplus receipts of the various provinces and departments of the State, and as the total income may be stated in round numbers at nearly 411 millions, it follows that the percentage of Home and Imperial charges, without any adequate provision of their own, amounts to about 301 millions, "or five annas in each rupee of the whole income." For instance, Mysore is a burden to the extent of Rs. 38,46,000, Rajpootana Rs. 7,25,000, Central India Rs. 1,62,04,000, Nepal Rs. 40,000, and Aden 11,79,000. To this total of Rs. 8,50,51,000, must be added Rs. 4,19,56,000 to cover the deficit in the post-office and electric telegraph departments, and in general and political receipts. In short, this sum of 121 millions represents "all the charges of the Supreme Government in India, and of the Home Government in England. pensions, interest of the public debt, and of railway capital, marine charges, and all military charges which are not localised, post-office, electric telegraph, and every other charge of an imperial character." In forming a right judgment of the value of any particular province it is obvious that other than fiscal considerations have to be taken into account. Thus Aden, a perfectly barren acquisition, if regarded alone from the treasury point of view, is of the highest importance as a military post and indispensable link in the means of communication with Europe. On the other hand, it would be equally unfair to estimate the cost of a province by the precise sum of money expended within its

"The troops which garrison and whose pay is disbursed in the North-Western Provinces and Onde defend Bengal from the Hindoostani invasions which, for centuries periodically laid waste Behar and Bendered Bengal and Bendered Bengal Research detend Bongal from the Hindoostani invasions which, for centuries periodically laid waste Behar and Bengal, and transported the plunder of those provinces to enrich the sovereigns and nobles of Delhi and Agra. The Bombay army in the Deccan, Malwa, and at Baroda, the Madras army in Nagpore, and the troops which garrison Gwalior, the country and capitals of the Mahrattas, who, a hundred years ago, but for the growth of the British power, would certainly have desolated, and probably have permanently occupied Bengal. The army in Burmah protects Bengal from a power which, within living memory, threatened the invasion of Eastern Bengal, while the Punjab force not only occupies the country of the latest and most formidable of the Indian native military powers, but watches the passes through which, for twenty centuries past, the hordes of Central Asia, Persia, and Khorasan have descended to conquer, plunder, and found kingdoms in India. There is, in fact, no great division of the Empire which does not materially contribute to that peace which permits the merchant and cultivator of Bengal to take advantage of those boundless opportunities for enriching himself presented by the opportunities for enriching himself presented by the luxuriant soil, the teeming and docile population, and the unequalled facilities of water carriage which Bengal enjoys."

It is justly remarked that India must be regarded in its integrity, each part being necessary to the welfare and prosperity of the whole, and, consequently, that the expenditure of its revenues is not a simple question of arithmetical calculation. A remote province may thus sometimes require and justify a larger outlay than is in exact proportion to its individual and intrinsic value; but in all cases it is quite clear that the utmost economy must be exercised in the application of the funds diverted from other points of the empire. For the year 1861-62 the revenue is estimated at £41,294,595, derived from the following sources :- Land-tax, including Sayer, &c., and after deducting £370,000 as remissions on account of the late famine, £18,985,522; Tributes and subsidies, £822,364; Public Works (exclusive of £230,035 from local funds), £336,796; Excise, £1 327,804; Income-tax, including half a million of arrears from the preceding year, £1,948,094; Assessed taxes, Madras, £73,503; Trade taxes, Punjab and Oude, £62,500; Customs, after allowing £200,000 for loss on diminished imports of manufactures, and £40,000 for reduction in twists and yarn, £2,484,410; Salt customs, £1,255,000; Salt, £3,980,000; Opium, estimated at Rs. 1,748 per chest, £6,107,561; Stamps, £1,216,040; Post-office, £750,000; Miscellaneous, Civil, £1,195,001; Miscellaneous, Military, £750,000. On the Per Contra side the expenditure is set down at £41,054,699: namely, claims and demands on the revenues, including charges of collection, and cost of Post-office, Mint, Electric Telegraph, Salt, and Opium, £7,964,741; Civil and Political Establishments, including £150,000 for famine contingencies, £3,096,916; Law and Justice, £1,567,647; Police, £2,234,700; Public Works, Civil, £3,098,629; Public Works, Military, £538,871; Army, including £600,760 for gratuities, bounty, pay, and other expenses of a temporary nature £12,800,000 (against £15,279,005 in 1860-61); Navy and Marine, £536,000; Interest on Debt, £3,316,080; Eastern Settlements, £95,255; Home Charges, Civil, £1,250,000; Home Charges, Military, £2,500,000; Interest on Debt, £1,255,760; Guaranteed Interest on Railway Capital, less net traffic revenue, £1,300,000, making a grand total of boundaries. In Bengal the military expenditure is comparatively small, but then "Bengal is not defended in Bengal."

£41,554,699, but of this £500,000 will be transferred to local budgets, thus leaving a probable surplus of £239,896. Should these at 23, Kildare-terrace, Westbourne-park, aged calculations be verified, we may hope to have heard the last of Indian loans at five per cent.

MAILS TO INDIA.

MAILS TO INDIA.

Mails to India and China, via Marscilles, are despatched from London as follows, viz.:—Those for Bombay packets, on the evening of the 3rd and 18th of each month; and those for Calcutta packets (including mails for Ceylon, Madras, and China), on the evenings of the 10th and 26th of each month. When any of these dates falls on a Sunday, the mails are made up on the following evening.

Letters and Newspapers can be forwarded to any part of India, via Bombay and Marscilles, and in most cases will reach their destination some days sooner than if despatched by the following calcutta mail. The Bombay mails via Sonthampton, however, are no longer available for the transmission of Letters or Newspapers to the Madras Presidency. Mails for the Mediterranean and all parts of Invita and China, except the Bombay Presidency, are despatched via Southampton on the mornings of the 4th and 20th, or, when either of these dates falls on Sunday, upon the previous evening. Mails for the Mediterranean, the Presidency of Bombay, and Upper or North-West Provinces of Bengal and China, are despatched via Southampton, on the 12th and 37th of the month, except when these dates fall on Sunday, in which case they are forwarded on the previous evening.

Punishment of Insubordination .-- Lord Canning will not allow Captain P. Maxwell, Deputy Commissioner in the Punjab, Lieutenant J. W. Orchard, Deputy Superintendent of Police, and Lieutenant R. T. Hare, Assistant Commissioner in the Punjab, to enter the Staff Corps, in order to mark with due reprehension their conduct in sending letters to the Deputy Adjutant General of the Army, in which, under cover of expressions of respect and subordination, they ventured to use terms manifesting their disapprobation of the recent decision of her Majesty's Government, that officers joining the Staff Corps shall not be entitled to retire under the regulation of 1796, in respect of any promotion obtained by such officers in the Staff Corps.

A NEW APPOINTMENT .- A Deputy Adjutant General of Cavalry is to be appointed to the Bengal Presidency. Major H. A. Sarel, of her Majesty's 17th Lancers, recently arrived from China, will be nominated to the post.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

URGENT APPEAL

THE DIRECTORS of the STRANGERS' HOME FOR ASIATICS having been permitted to attain, under most pressing pecuniary difficulties, the principal moral and social objects for which the Institution was established, in ameliorating the condition and alleviating the emporal and spiritual destitution of hundreds of helpless Asiatic and Africar Strangers, find themselves at the close of another year without sufficient Funds to meet the current expenses of the Institution.

The work has invariably been carried on with the strictest economy, and the Directors are thankful for the support they have hitherto received, but they do not consider themselves justified to borrow money to meet the current expenses of the Home, which amounts (including £250 interest on debt) to about £1,100 annually.

They there'ore once more appeal to their friends, supporters, and the Public for Subscriptions or Donat one, an i would ask them, SHALL THE BOORS OF THE HOME BE CLOSED through the insufficiency of pecuniary aid, or because, under THE DIRECTORS of the STRANGERS' and the Public for Subscriptions or Ionatons, and would ask them, SHALL THE DOORS OF THE HOME BE CLOSED through the insufficiency of pecuniary aid, or because, under temporary circumstances, the number of immates in the Home are insufficient to render the Institution self-supporting?—Shall the metropolis of Christian England again subject itself to the reproach, that Oriental strangers visiting her shores, find a reception worse than that in a heathen land—no friend, no Christian sympathy—nothing to prove we value the immense blessing the Gospel of the Lord Christ has given to us?—Shall the streets of the metropolis once more be inundated with Eastern mendicants?—Shall the jails, workhouses, and hospitals be again unnecessarily occupied by Asiatics?—Shall the labours of the last four years be thrown away, and the work suspended?—Shall Christian sympathy, assistance, and advice no longer be shown or given to helpless strangers?—Rather is it not imperative on the Directors to continue their appeal to the public for funds to carry on a work which has been such ab Is sing to hundreds, and acknowledged by the philanthropist and Christian to be both needful, useful, and advantageous in all its objects?

The Directors cannot believe that the public will permit their labours to be suspended, or the Home closed, and casting all their difficulties on Him from whom they have received such tokens of favour, would go on in faith, earnestly pleading with all into whose hands this paper may fall that each one will provide his share of the means wanting for carrying on the work.

THE ILLUSTRATED HORSE DOCTOR;

Being an accurate and detailed account of the various Diseases to which the Equine Race are subjected, together with the latest mode of treatment and the requisite prescriptions, written in plain English.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

"The production of this book has indelibly stamped the name of Edward Mayhew as the greatest benefactor the horse ever had. He and he alone, of the many veterinary writers whose works are before the public, has hit upon the quality of information, and the form to convey it, which the public have so long desired. We think it a suggestion worth the notice of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals that they should come to some terms with the publishers for a portion of the work to be reproduced, in the form of a pamphlet, to be given away to every groom, coachman, carter, and cabman, in fact all men (who have not means to buy one) whose business is among horses. It would be an act worthy of such a philanthropic body, and quite in keeping with its object—viz., to prevent cruelty. We regret that our limited space will not admit of us quoting the parts to which we allude, but there would be no difficulty in compiling such a pamphlet, for the whole work teems with the most wholesome advice to every class, from the peer to the costermonger. There is "The production of this book has indelibly stamped class, from the peer to the costermonger. There is no animal in creation more adapted nor more willing to serve man than the horse; but, we regret to say, that there is no animal whose natural history, capathat there is no animal whose natural history, capabilities, and general treatment are so little understood. The poor creature is frequently suffering from chronic disease, or temporary infirmity, while his master continues to whip him to his work, and exact his pound of flesh to the very utmost, for pleasure or for profit. But although there are thousands of brutes in human shape, who wilfully torture horses, yet there are hundreds of thousands who do so through sheer ignorance of his nature, and symptoms of disease or infirmity under which (at the so through sneer ignorance of his nature, and symptoms of disease or infirmity under which (at the time) he is often suffering. To such men as these the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' would be worth its weight in gold, as its precepts would often save a valuable horse from premature death, and serve the cause of humanity at the same time. Every form of disease and symptom is not only illustrated by a mester band so that the complete novice may at master hand, so that the complete novice may at once see (by comparing the suffering animal to the particular illustration that bears upon its case) with what disorder his horse is afflicted, while the causes and treatment are detailed with a clearness and simand treatment are detailed with a clearness and simplicity that is quite refreshing to those who have perused other veterinary books, the contents of which are generally mystified by high-flown language and technical terms, while the prescriptions, being in Latin, are quite unintelligible to the class who have most to do with horses. The test for glanders and spavin, which have been the cause of innumerable disputes between vendor and purchaser, and the cause of some of the most eminent professionals giving their evidence in courts of law in direct contradiction to each other is clearly illustrated and explained, as are also many important trated and explained, as are also many important disorders which many writers have lett unnoticed. The subject of 'breaking down,' upon which thousands of our readers desired information after the misfortune to Dundee, is treated with an excellent illustration representing a horse after its affliction, with the jockey dismounted. There are upwards of four hundred illustrations in the work, each a faithful representation of the whole, or part, of the body of the horse during the symptom or progression of the disorder to which it applies; and we need only mention the names of the Messra. Dalziel as a guarantee that they are executed in the best possible manner. Indeed, we unhesitatingly pronounce the 'Illustrated Horse Doctor' the very best and most useful book of its class ever published."—Sporting Life, July 17, 1861.

"One of the most valuable works that we possess upon the subject, all the diseases to which the horse is liable being lucidly described, and the remedies stated very clearly. The wood engravings, which are numerous, well illustrate the text, and serve to complete the character of a work which all who possess a horse must desire to be master of also."—News of the World, June 24, 1860.

"In order to make a good book two things are essential—an author competent to treat the subject he takes in hand, and a publisher spirited enough to give the writer a loose rein in the production of his work—that is, liberality in allowing him all means and appliances for rendering it a master-piece. The publishers of "The Illustrated Horse-Doctor" deserve the highest credit and the greatest success for giving the world this admirable volume in its present costly shape. Its intrinsic merit deserves every penny which has been spent upon it, and, inasmuch as we have never seen a book brought out with better taste or finish, the cost of its production must have been very serious. No one with the least equine knowledge can require to be told that Mr. Mayhew is the man for the task which he has undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished. His high reputation in the veterinary art, and his qualifications as a practised writer on domestic animals, render him the very person for supplying an intelligent and interesting work on the diseases of the horse, which would be devoid of mere professional technicalities, whilst, at the same time, his skill as a draught-man, and humour as a witty observer of life, enabled him to illustrate with his pencil what he had written with his pen. We advisedly say that "The Illustrated Horse-Doctor" is the very best book of the kind which we know; and what gives it an especial charm is, that the author so thoroughly sym; athises with the noble animal which he describes. Without pretending to go into any analysis of this valuable work, we at once pronounce it as scientific, yet intelligible; informing, yet highly amusing; acceptable to the profound horse-doctor, yet the work of all others for the bookshelves in every gentleman's sanctum; admirable in every way as a practical treatise on a very important subject, which it elevates altogether out of the region of quackery; and the tone is so learned, yet easy; so close to business, yet gentleman-like, that the dedication to Sir Benjamin

"Although the book will be mainly valued as an instructor to those who have to do with sick and sulfering horses, all the causes of which are treated in detail of symptoms and treatment, yet it may with great advantage be studied by the owners of horses, who never think of treating them for disease—who, when their studs are ill, always call in the veterinary surgeon, and leave the patients in his hands; for in its pages they will find hints and advice, compliance with which is as much more important than the remedying disease as prevention is better than cure. Take the following as a sample of this:—'Above all, attend to the stabling, and let the box be large and well ventilated. Food is eaten but occasionally during the day; air is as essential as more substantial nutriment of life, and is consumed night and day. Food has to undergo a complicated change, and to travel before it joins the blood. Air is no sooner inhaled than it is immediately absorbed by the blood.' Are not these brief sentences full of importance to the keepers of horses?"— Western Morning News.

"The above is a volume of cyclopædic proportions written by a wise, philanthropic, and scientific man. The numerous illustrations—by the author himself—are simply marvellous for their power of delineation, and more so of expression; and none but a man who knew the structure of the animal, within and without, could have given these transcripts with the diagnosis of disease and illness, together with the (so to speak) physiognomy of pain and suffering, in so wonderful a manner. It is in every sense a perfect book, and calculated to be of essential benefit to 'man and horse.'"—Dispatch, June 24, 1860.

"We have no doubt that this valuable dictionary of the veterinary art will meet with signal success. We have before us a compendious history of all the diseases which horsefiesh is heir to, and which man's abuse has bequeathed to it, with directions for treatment, and the necessary remedies, likewise the exposure of popular fallacies. . . . That horses suffer greatly from the ignorance of their riders more than from any intentional cruelty is very certain; but whatever the cause the effect is the same. A horse sinks exhausted in the field, after only a short run, and the rider is thunderstruck. Had he read Mr. Mayhew's book, and taken notice of the warning signal, of which, poor man, he was unaware, and put on the break, the catastrophe would not have been. It is in cases such as these, or where accidents happen in out of the way places, much useful information is to be gained by the general reader. . . The work concludes with a brief summary, arranged in alphabetical order, of the subjects previously treated on, upon which great care has been bestowed, and the known ability of the author guarantees its worth."—Sun, July 2, 1860.

"Mr. Mayhew is not only master of his subject, but knows how to teach others to master it also. The volume describes all the diseases to which horses are exposed throughout the infinite variety of circumstances in which they are placed; traces each disease to its cause, as far as it can be ascertained, and points out the course of treatment which should be adopted in every case. In pursuing this clear and thoroughly practical method of inquiry and exposition, Mr. Mayhew draws in all the collateral lights that can be brought to bear upon his topic, and shows to what extent the calamities to which horsefiesh is heir may be referred to the ignorance, neglect, and brutality of owners; making, upon the whole, a large percentage in the bills of mortality. . . It will be gathered from what we have said, that the scope of this valuable and interesting publication is hardly expressed in the title. It is undoubtedly a Manual for the 'Horse-doctor,' and by far the most exhaustive that has ever appeared; but it is also a great deal more. The moral side of the question is as largely and sympathetically discussed as the medical, and the great mass of the public who know nothing about horses will derive lessons from the perusal of the work which they could not have anticipated."—Home Neus.

"We are inclined to think that this is about the very best book respecting the treatment of equine disease that ever has been written or published. The author is evidently well acquainted with the duties of his profession, and willing to give a world-wide extent to his own useful and practical experience, so that those who read may adopt his rules and regimen, and save that noble animal, whose use is one of the greatest blessings mankind enjoys, from much pain and suffering. In country districts, where the horse doctor cannot easily be summoned, this book will be invaluable; whilst, in more frequented localities, its use will always be found to be safe and judicious."—Bell's Messenger, June 23, 1860.

"The great mass of them (the iliustrations) are wonderfully faithful, and they are so varied and interesting that we would undertake to get rid of the most confirmed bore that ever pressed heavily on mankind for a good two hours by only handing him the book, and directing his attention to them. It is a well-known fact that grooms only remember the names of four or five diseases, and are sadly indiscriminate in their knowledge of symptoms. This book furnishes at once the bane and the antidote, as the drawings show the horse not only suffering from every kind of disease, but in the different stages of it, while the alphabetical summary at the end gives the cause, symptoms, and treatment of each."—
